The Standard Oil company has found out that it raised the price of kerosene higher than the most profitable traffic will bear. It made more money selling refined petroleum a little cheaper, and it has put back the price. The sugar trust has been having the same experience. It has found that when it has raised the price of sugar too high the public retaliates by eating less sugar. It is an economic law that the price of no staple commodity can be raised beyond a certain point without reducing the consumption so that the total receipts are diminished more by smaller purchases than the increased charge compensates. If the trusts would be satisfied with reasonable profits, and would use their great possible economies for the benefit of the public, the clamor for legislation against them would diminish.—N. Y. The kidney secretions were unnatural, my legs and stomach were swollen, and I had no appetite. When doctors failed to help me I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and improved until my back was strong and my appetite returned. During the four years since I stopped using them I have enjoyed excellent health. The cure was permanent."

COVERING POTATOES.

Convenient Scraper Which May Be Used in Performing the Work.

When we plant potatoes we furrow with a plow drawn by two horses. When the furrows are made there are ridges in half of the spaces and the other half are level (Fig. 1). When covering we use what we call a scraper. See Fig. 2. It is made of a plank, tongue, handles and several braces and bolts. The length of the plank should be about twice the distance between the rows. The plank should have a strap of iron at the bottom in front for a cutting edge and to prevent wear.

CONVENIENT SCRAPER.

The tongue should be fastened to the plank at right angles, and securely braced, says the Ohio Farmer. The handles, which may be taken from an old plow or walking cultivator, should also be fastened and braced to the plank. We leave each horse walk in a furrow, but it is better to use a long doubletree and neckyoke or shafts and but one horse, so the potatoes do not get moved and tramped.

The scraper carries some ground ahead of it, which it pulverizes. It may be used to scrape the barnyard if the ground is smooth.

THE HOTBED.

No Farmer Should Be Without This Valuable Adjunct to the Garden.

Every farmer should make a hotbed this spring. It is a simple device from which springs an immense amount of pleasure and profit. If the wife or daughter is taking care of a flower garden there should be another hotbed especially for her use. The essentials are only a long and narrow box in which to secure bottom heat, and a sash of glass to cover it. During the winter days almost any farmer can make the sash for himself and build the box, suggests the Orange Judd Farmer. Nowadays the hotbed is generally placed directly on the ground; sometimes half in and half out. The best gardeners think the pit should be quite shallow, so that the heat shall not be drawn from the manure into the cold earth. Make a level-topped pile of fresh horse manure, with about the same quantity of straw or litter, four or five feet high. Sprinkle occasionally with hot water, and turn the heap occasionally to secure uniform fermentation. Now build the bed by spreading a coarse litter at the bottom, and on it a couple of feet of manure. On this place a layer of leaf mold, and on top of all about five inches of fine garden soil. In placing the manure in the pit, spread it in layers about six inches thick. Now sow your seed and be careful to avoid overheating at any time, especially when the sun comes out suddenly. Sprinkle the frame at night, then close up invariably so long as there is any danger of chilling the plants. An old hotbed can be used for a cold frame to grow plants more slowly than in heat, or to protect roses during the winter.

HANDY CLOTHES-LINE POST

Protects the Line When Not in Use and Makes It Easy of Access.

This handy clothes-line post is made by nailing four strips together in the form of a square, and inserting this hollow post in the ground, as a post is usually "set." A long, narrow door opens on one side, to give access to the interior. A little reel, with crank outside as shown, reels up the clothes-line when not in use, the line passing out of the post over a pulley wheel, as suggested. The advantage of such a post is that the line can be housed when not in use, and is ready at hand for instant use when wanted. The cap on the post keeps the rain out. A line thus cared for will outlast three that are constantly exposed.—Farm Journal.

HENYARD PICKINGS.

The best way to make a hen happy and start her singing is to give her something to do.

High time to get ready for spring work. Breeding pens, coops, cages, nest-boxes, feed-troughs make now.

These late hatches will be laying in March and April while the early broods are hatching out their first clutches.

The production of feathers in either young or old fowls will be materially assisted by a liberal supply of bone and shell.

Some burn the bones, then crush them, but while this is good it is not nearly as good as the fresh bone. The best way to feed bones is to put them through a mill.

MAKING MONEY WITH BEES

The Bee Industry Has Grown Amazingly During the Last Twenty Years.

Few city people realize that apiculture has developed into a practical money-making industry during the last 20 years, until now the average amount of honey put on the market each year is upward of 100,000,000 pounds, representing a money value of from $8,000,000 to $10,000,000.

In a favorable locality one hive, with its average colony of 35,000 workers and a queen, will turn out from 30 to 40 pounds of honey, besides the 15 or 20 necessary to feed the hive through the winter.

A few hives, in any ordinary country district, should each bring in a clear two dollars a year profit at the lowest estimate. On a poultry and fruit farm where clover, sunflower and millet are grown for the poultry the yield of honey should be much larger if the apiary is restricted to 20 or 30 hives. Their care will infringe but little on working hours; they feed themselves, so expense is confined to the necessary new hives for the fresh colonies, comb foundations and other equally small outlays.

If you commence by purchasing a colony and hive that has been well cared for during the winter, they will come out strong in the spring, the queen will start laying again, and each day thousands of bees will be born, soon causing the hive to be so vastly crowded that the old queen and a swarm will issue from the parent hive, leaving the young colony in possession of the home and stores.

If the old queen has had her wings properly clipped the season before, she will not be able to fly, so will be found on the ground near the hive with a group of bees around her and the principal swarm not very far away. Approach very quietly and place a small wire trap over the queen (the traps are sold by all bee'supply firms and cost 25 cents, I think, says Kate Saint Main, in Pearson's Magazine). Then place the trap in the opening of the hive you desire the swarm to occupy, cautiously approach the full swarm, and with a soft broom sweep the bees into the hive, if the position they occupy makes it possible, as in the picture; if not, use a box or pan and carry them to the hive and empty them in front. They will soon commence to occupy the new home. The slide of the queen trap can be opened and the bees inside will settle down to business.

NEW BEEHIVE.

A Great Many Improvements Have Been Made Over the Old Style of Hive.

The newest sort of beehive is a wonderful improvement upon the old style ones which we are used to seeing in pictures of old-fashioned country homes. It is as modern in its improvements and conveniences as the up-to-date apartment house, which, as a matter of fact, is a hive on a much more extended scale.

The natural sagacity of the honey bee is astounding. If a bee keeper does not secure the proper ventilation of his hives the bees will attend to the matter themselves, and this is how it is done: Those told off for the work secure an attachment with their feet to the bottom of the hive near the entrance and imitate the action of flying, the very rapid movement of the wings having precisely the same effect on a smaller scale as a ventilating fan. With perhaps a score or more of bees simultaneously engaged and working in relays a very satisfactory result is obtained.

WHEN HOGS CAN'T WALK.

Diet of Corn and Slops Responsible for the Helpless Condition of the Big Porkers.

Men that were raised on New England farms have memories of great fat hogs that for months before slaughter were unable to stand on their hind legs. The writer has seen hogs that weighed almost 600 pounds that before slaughter had to move around on their haunches as on a pivot. They ate and slept in the same place, turning one way to eat and the other to sleep. Their owners thought it nothing unusual, they only said: "The hog has become so fat he can't stand up." Yet with more light on the situation we know that it was not a case of fatness only, but a case of the constant feeding of corn and slop, out of which the animal could not manufacture any bone or muscle that would sustain his weight. In those days the food of such hogs was corn as largely as it is now. Had those animals received a ration composed of ground oats, skim-milk, and such nitrogen-supplying foods they would have had a bone-and-muscle that would have carried about any weight. The same results come from the same causes now, but it is not so apparent, as the hogs are marketed at half the weight they were in the days mentioned. No man should feed a corn diet exclusively to his hogs.—Farmers' Review.

Nothing makes hens lay like green bone.

Poison Farm.

A poison farm has been started by the American authorities on Potomac flats, near Washington, with the idea of saving the £2,000,000 now annually paid for imported drugs. Large plots have been laid out for the culture of the deadly nightshade, belladonna, foxglove and other poisonous plants.

Valuable Waste.

In the course of a case at Lambeth county court, London, it was in evidence that old felt hats, which were valueless up to a few months ago, could now be sold for $35 a ton, and the market was rising. The hats are burned to get the shellac, which is worth 50 cents a pound.

Clothes and the Woman.

A lady walked into a grocer's shop one day with her sleeves turned up to her elbows and a fighting light in her eyes, says the Kansas City Independent.

"This here," she observed with a sniff, as she banged a piece of yellow substance on the counter, "is the soap that makes ev'y washin' day a kind of glorified bean feast; the soap that gets all the linen as white as snow and as sweet as a hazelnut by dinner time, and lets the happy housewife spend the rest of the day playin' with the children, and here am I, been scrubbin' three mortal hours with that lump, and ain't got as much lather out of it as I could get from a brickbat."

"I beg your pardon," remarked the grocer, courteously, "but it isn't the soap. Your little boy came in here yesterday for half a pound of both soap and cheese; that's the cheese."

"The cheese!" gasped the lady. "That accounts for the other thing, then."

"The other thing?"

"Yes, the other thing," came the reply. "I was layin' awake half the night wonderin' what it was made the Welsh rabbit we had for supper taste so funny."

Found at Last.

Alston, Mich., March 13th.—(Special)—After suffering for twenty years from Rheumatism and Kidney Troubles, and spending a fortune in doctors and medicines that brought him no relief, Mr. James Culet of this place has found a complete cure for all his aches, pains and weakness, in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Naturally Mr. Culet feels much elated over his cure and gives great credit to the remedy that gave him health.

"Yes," Mr. Culet says, "my Rheumatism and Kidney Troubles are all gone and I feel like a new man. Dodd's Kidney Pills did it. Before I used them I spent a small fortune on doctors and one remedy and another. I cheerfully recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to any one suffering from Rheumatism or Kidney Trouble."

SCREAMED AT NIGHT.

Baby Scratched Until Face Was Raw and Bleeding—Eczema Cured by Cuticura.

"For over two years my little baby girl suffered with a raw, itching and painful eczema on her head and face, the pain causing her to scream day and night, and my wife could get no rest. We tried several doctors, but without success. Unless we kept her hands tied she would scratch until her face was like raw beef. One cake of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment completely cured her, leaving her face without mark or blemish. (Signed) W. J. Morgan, Orchard Town, New Lambton, New South Wales, Australia."

WAS Mrs. Chadwick ever in Cincinnati?

THE Tobacco Trust came very near losing out in 1904, its profits were only $22,304,000.

THAT Kansas Attorney General who is going up against the Standard Oil Company is a Kentuckian and a native of Burlington.

IT did not take long for a jury to decide that Mrs. Chadwick belongs to a class of financiers that it is dangerous to have at large ni the country.

IT looks like the Russians will have to ask for an increase in the arrear of the war zone. They are about driven from the zone as originally described.

THE city of Frankfort is preparing to get busy, and if all the contemplated improvements are made, the city will, in a measure, be rebuilt on a modern plan.

THE Kansas legislature is of the opinion that Commissioner Garfield did not make much of an effort in his alleged investigation of the beef trust. The members of that body were badly disappointed in his findings and report.

A POLITICAL party is judged by its leaders, and one leader of a questionable character overshadows all his associates when the public is of the opinion that he is not the proper man for the position he occupies. Judge Hargis is an example.

TO pay the expenses of the Democratic primary election in Trimble county, the candidates are assessed as follows: County judge, county attorney, county clerk, superintendent, assessor, jailer, $30 each; justice of the peace, $1 50.

GOV. HANLY, of Indiana, has declared that he will appoint to office during his administration no man who takes a drink of whisky. The Governor thinks there are enough total abstainers in Indiana to take care of the State Government.

THE estimated annual cost of maintaining Uncle Sam's new navy when completed is $77,000,000 About $38,000,000 of this amount is classed under the head of "supplies of all kinds." The salaries of officers and men will amount to about $32,000,000.

THE Louisville Evening Post is showing its city up in a awfully bad light. If the city is one-fourth as foul a place as the Post represents it as being, good people will be slow to go there or to invest their money in enterprises located or to be located there.

THE Court of Appeals decided that the Hargises must be tried in Lexington as they were first indicted there. The court held that the proceedings in 'Squire Edward's court in Jackson were simply a ruse and instigated by the Hargises or someone acting for them.

THE immediate answer of the Russian Government to the defeat at Mukden is the announcement that a new army will be raised and the forces in the Far East reorganized; that Vice Admiral Rojestvensky will be ordered to sail on and try conclusions with Togo, and that the war will be prosecuted to the bitter end.

Newspapers are published in 151 towns in Kentucky. A newspaper is published in 103 county seats, leaving 16 without a newspaper. There are 30 dailies, one tri-weekly, 17 semi-weeklies, 235 weeks, 4 semi-monthlies, 24 monthlies and 3 quarterlies, making 314 publications in the State.

THE Kansas legislature has demanded that the Standard Oil Company be driven out of that State, and Attorney General C. C. Coleman has brought a suit to have the company's State license forfeited because of the violation of State laws. The progress of the suits brought by the Attorney General will be watched by every State in the union, and if the Standard gets a knockout other States will join the fight on it.

Secretary of the Navy Morton awarded a contract to the Armor Plate Trust for 8,000 tons of plate, at a cost of $400,000 more than the Midvale Company offered to furnish it for. The Secretary explains his action by saying that the Midvale Company, although its trial plates withstood the required test, was not yet manufacturing armor in such large quantities as that required by the Government. It probably never will, if it be given no opportunity by the Government to dispose of its goods. An "infant industry" like the Armor Plate Trust must be protected against "unfair competition."

THE following taken from an exchange sounds very much like some of the items that find their way into the metropolitan journals from this county occasionally:

"The people of Newark, N. J., and the people of Health township, near Paducah, Ky., have been considerably distributed recently. The cause of the Kentucky disturbance is a "talking tree." The Paducah corresdondent for the Chicago Tribune says that a committe of "responsible citizens" investigated this tree. The correspondent adds: "One thing only was established and that the fact that the tree is dying slowly from the continuous tramping of the earth about its roots. The tree is on William Albert's farm and for years the mystery of its supposed vocal powers has been upon the countryside. Hundreds there are who will testify that on occasions a voice apparently coming from the tree cries: "There are treasures buried at myroots." The investigating committee listened for a few hours before the human like cry sent the members trembling back to town. The members of a family which lived there several years ago became frightened at the voice; they sold the farm at a sacrifice and went away."

There are many ways in which tobacco may be made use of by the window gardener as well as the owner of a greenhouse. It may be used as snuff, and sprinkled thinly over the plants; or as stems and bits of leaves broken up and scattered about among the pots; or in the form of smoke for fumigation; or it may be steeped in water and used to wash plants with. In all these forms it is a good insecticide for the destruction of plant-lice and other enemies to plant life. Scraps and stems of tobacco as easily procured in country or city, and to make the "tea," one has but to place a handful in some old basin and pour boiling water on it, letting it steep until cool. Dilute to a light brown color with tepid water, and pour enough into some wide-mouth jar or bucket to immerse the top of your plant in; take up the plants, one at a time and hold them, top down, in the water with one hand while with the other hand you wash them clean. If used too strong, tobacco water will curl and brown the leaves of delicate plants, so that any error as to its strength should be on the safe side; rinse any plants so injured in clear tepid water as soon as the injury is noticed. Scale or mealy-bug may be routed with a teaspoonful of fir-tree oil mixed in a pail of water and the plants washed therein.

A Paris publication reports that the automobile trade in France has, during the past few years had an enormous growth. For instance, in 1898 French makers delivered 1,850 automobiles; in 1904 they delivered 22,000.

IT is not known how much of Kuropatkin's army has been destroyed by the Japs, but it is believed that he has only a remnant remaining, and that it is demoralized and liable to be captured in the next few days. History gives no accounts of defeats like those suffered by Russia at Port Arthur and Mukden, and if the Czar had any feeling for his subjects he would acknowledge his defeat and stop the slaughter. Greed prompts the Russian govenment in the war and thousands of widows an orphans resulting therefrom will be the achievements.

I was all run down from nervousness and over work and had to resign my position and take a rest. I found that I was not gaining my strength and health as fast as I could wish, and as your Wine of Cardui was recommended as such a good medicine for the ills of our sex, I bought a bottle and began using it. I was satisfied with the results from the use of the first bottle, and took three more and then found I was restored to good health and strength and able to take up my work with renewed vigor. I consider it a fine tonic and excellent for worn-out, nervous condition, and am pleased to endorse it.

Uncle Thomas Crisler, who lives with his son-in-law, W. J. Rice, near town, retired a few nights since, and after sleeping a short time awoke, and, hearing the family talking, concluded it was morning, when he got up and dressed himself for the day. Entering the room where the family sat in front of the fire, he remarked, "you got up early this morning," and it took some time to convince him that he had not had a full night's sleep.

Each member of the board is disposed to shoulder his part of the work to bring about another big success.

A good citizen of the Burlington precinct told the following here in town a few days ago. Accompanied by his wife and two neighbors during a seining season long since passed, he went to Gunpowder creek to catch a mess of fish notwithstanding the law against seining. The party was having splendid luck with their sein, when they discovered two lanterns approaching them, one from down and the other from up the creek. To avoid detection they wound up their sein as hastily as possible and put out their lantern. To escape from the persons carrying the lanterns it was necessary for them to cross a deep hole of water, and the husband told his wife to climb upon his back and he would carry her across. This she did and the journey was begun at about a two minute clip, and when amid stream the husband's feet struck a slick rock and down he came with his load, both he and his wife going under the water repeatedly before he could gain a footing, and by which time their companions were out of hearing and gone. When the shore was reached the husband was greatly fatigued but was so badly excited that he forgot to unload his wife, and carried her several hundred yards up a steep hill. He says that was the last time he went seining.

Walton Ky., March 7th, 1905.

Editor of the Recorder:

I trust you will accept this contribution from me to your newsy journal. Not that our little town is a stranger to you, for I am acquainted with the fact that Walton is not only in the county of Boone, but is in easy touch with the county seat (Burlington) by telephone and telegraphic communication, but, notwithstanding all, no doubt, with the rapid growth of our town, a number of people even in the county, who have no idea of our present condition. I say ours for I have just become a citizen of the town. Upon inquiry I find that the population, in a short time has grown from 500 to something like a thousand. Walton has two large factories, two hotels, three coal dealers, two large livery stables, one bank and preparing to start another, one of the largest and best equipped graded schools in the county, if not in the State, with Prof. Dickey for its principal. We also have four churches—three white and one colored. There are six ministers living in the town—one Methodist, two Baptists, two Disciples and one Presbyterian. Besides this we have two attorneys, three physicians, a city judge and circuit judge. We are also supplied with all kinds of business houses and can get almost anything here we want. I have been here a month and I have not seen nor heard of a drunken man nor a drop of whisky. I am now preaching at Dry Ridge church on the 2nd and 4th, and Beaver Lick, the 1st and 2nd, and find them to be a fine people. I have one more item of interest before I close. I want to thank Bro. Lafe Johnson, through your columns, for eight pounds of nice honey. Uncle Lafe, as he is called here, is not only one of the best preachers around here, but he knows how to treat a strange preacher when he comes to his midst. Hoping you may have room in your valuable paper for this communication I am

Yours Respectfully,
J. I. MILLS.

Geo. Ossman and wife, of Beaver, were guests of county clerk B. W. Adams and wife, from Friday until Monday.

D. E. Castleman and J. C. Revill attended the housewarming at Rev. Early's, near Bullittsburg church, last Thursday.

Mr. A. O. Hall was able to make his daily rounds of the town again last week, after being confined to the house for two or three weeks.

Col. G. C. Graddy, of Petersburg, was a guest at the Boone House from Saturday afternoon until Sunday. He is the advance agent for the dramatic company of his town.

The city light plant that blew up at Jacksonville, Florida, on the 5th inst., stood across the street, just opposite where Mrs. Legrand Gaines is stopping in that city. She writes the RECORDER, "I thought my time had come."

"A train one mile long starts from the station at Glady. The engine leaves the station and the conductor waits until the caboose comes, when he jumps on the caboose and walks forward over the train. When the engine reaches the next station, Oxley, four miles distant from Glady, the conductor steps off the engine. How far does the conductor ride and how far does he walk?"

"The town hall was crowded Friday evening by the representative citizens of Carroll county, who were present to lend their encouragement to the building of the proposed road between Carrollton and Worthville. Mr. Maloney, a practical railroad builder, was present, and stated that in his judgment the road could be graded for $3,500 per mile. In a talk with him we were convinced the road could be built, equipped and put in running order for $100,000. Several times propositions have been made by re liable parties to complete the line between Carrollton and Worthville for a bonus of $20,000. The meeting decided to appoint a committee to raise, if possible, this amount of bonus."

The present grand jury has broken all records. Up to Wednesday at noon, when it adjourned 117 indictments had been returned, more than half of them being for the unlawful selling of liquor. Out of this number 116 aref or misdemeanors, only one indictment charging a felony. This is the case of George Thornton charged with assault and battery on the person of William Thornton. Fifteen indictments were found against the Standard Oil Company for peddling without license. Seventeen were returned against John and Hamlet Sandford for violation of the local option law. Pistol carrying and shooting on the high way received considerable attention and many persons will have to answer for this offense. The number of persons indicted is greatly out of proportion to the number of indictments found, there being only thirty-five individuals who will have to make good.—News-Herald, Owen county.

The RECORDER was badly misinformed last week, as to Mrs. B. W. Adam's experience with her horse and buggy in the mud. The mud had adhered to the buggy wheels until they would not revolve, when the harness gave away and Mrs. Adams threw the lines out on to the horse's back and let it walk out of the shafts. After trying for some time to get the mud off of the wheels Mrs. Adams went to Anthony Bentler's house, which was near by to solicit aid, but Mr. B. was not at home. Mrs. Bentler got a set of harness and a dirt shovel and returned with Mrs. Adams, and after an hour's hard work digging and scraping they got the vehicle in a shape that the horse could pull it out when reharnessed. Not a man appeared on the scene until the ladies had done all the necessary work, and the vehicle was ready to continue its journey. It was the worst experience Mrs. Adams ever had with a horse and buggy.

Favre-Peret, who investigated this industry in the New England States some years ago, says the annals of the American academy, stated that the average production of 40,000 workmen in Switzerland was 40 watches each per annum, while in America the average was 150 fine watches for each man employed.

An interesting addition to the course of instruction in the public schools of Vienna is to be made by providing classes in four districts to overcome the defects in speech of children who stutter. One of the most extraordinary accidents ever reported on the Union Pacific railroad occurred recently near Cheyenne, Wyo. The engine attached to the Overland Limited jumped the tracks and ran along the ties for almost a mile, owing to the momentum of the train, which was going down grade at a terrific rate. At the foot of the hill the engine leaped back onto the track without damage to the locomotive or the train.

Never before has the production of natural gas in the United States been so great as it was in the year 1903. The year's product was valued at $35,815,360. This is an increase in value of $4,947,497, or 16 per cent. as compared with 1902. The increase in Pennsylvania and Ohio was especially remarkable, amounting respectively $1,830,651 and $2,123,582. The value of the product of West Virginia also showed an increase of $1,492,178.

Before the death of her son Mrs. Jane Stanford's display of jewels in Washington was a source of envy to many women. It is said that there were few choicer or more extensive collections among the royal families of Europe. Their value was variously estimated at from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000. Mr. Stanford bought four sets of diamonds for his wife when the valuables of Queen Isabella of Spain were sold in Paris, and he paid upward of $600,000 for the four.

Mining in the Nome country has been vigorously prosecuted since the great strike on Anvil Creek in the fall of 1898. The discovery of gold in the beach sands at Nome the following year furnished an opportunity that season for 500 men to make a stake of sums probably averaging $4,000 to the man. The total gold product of Seward peninsula in six years is $27,000,000. It is more accurate to say that this is the product of six seasons, as the entire output of the winter diggings is not more than $3,000,000.

The volume of natural gas produced in 1903 amounted to 238,769,067,000 cubic feet at atmospheric pressure, and represented approximately 5,968,725 tons. If the density should remain the same throughout, this quantity would fill a reservoir that was 1.62 miles high and covered a square mile of ground, or it would fill a pipe that encircled the earth at the equator and that had an internal diameter of 49 feet. Its heating value would equal that of 11,938,453 tons of bituminous coal. In these figures no allowance is made for waste.

Very great importance is attached to the recent discovery that an ordinary healthy tree may be successfully pressed into service, in place of a tower with its antennæ of wires, for the purpose of transmitting messages by the wireless method, which was made by Maj. Squire, of the United States signal service corps. This comprises one of the most valuable of the recent developments in this field. It makes the system particularly available for use in warfare and has a degree of usefulness in many Trophies Captured: Two Ensigns, 60 Guns, 60,000 Rifles, 150 Ammunition Wagons, 1,000 Army Wagons and 2,000 Shells.

London, March 11.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times says a dispatch reached Tsarskoe Selo Friday night from Kuropatkin which said: "I am surrounded."

Tokio, March 11.—The Japanese troops occupied Mukden at 10 o'clock Friday morning. Nearly all the Russians' heavy guns and many field guns have been captured. The Russians seem to be moving toward Fashun with the object of retiring north.

Washington, March 13.—The Japanese legation has received the following cablegram from the foreign office at Tokio:

"The armies on the Shakhe quarter reported up to Sunday morning the following approximate figures, which are still increasing:

"Prisoners, over 40,000, including Maj. Gen. Makhimoff; Russian corpses on the field, 26,500. Other Russian casualties, 90,000. Trophies, two ensigns, 60 guns, 60,000 rifles, 150 ammunition wagons, 1,000 army wagons, 200,000 shells, 25,000,000 [illegible] for rifles, 74,000 bushels of grain, materials for light railroad for 46 miles, 300 wagons for light road, 2,000 horses, 23 Chinese carts full of maps, 1,000 Chinese carts full of clothing; 1,000,000 portions of bread, 150,000,000 pounds of fuel; 223,000 bushels of horse allowances and 125,000 pounds of hay. WAS ADJUDGED GUILTY.

Mrs. Chadwick Convicted of Conspiracy Against the United States.

Cleveland, O., March 13.—Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick was convicted of conspiracy against the United States. The verdict makes possible a maximum penalty of 14 years at hard labor in the penitentiary and a fine of $70,000 in addition to the imprisonment.

The great good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is doing among the women of America is attracting the attention of many of our leading scientists, and thinking people generally.

Mrs. Sara Wilson

The following letter is only one of many thousands which are on file in the Pinkham office, and go to prove beyond question that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound must be a remedy of great merit, otherwise it could not produce such marvelous results among sick and ailing women.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"About nine months ago I was a great sufferer with womb trouble, which caused me severe pain extreme nervousness and frequent headaches, from which the doctor failed to relieve me. I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and within a short time felt better, and after taking five bottles of it I was entirely cured. I therefore heartily recommend your Compound as a splendid uterine tonic. It makes the monthly periods regular and without pain; and what a blessing it is to find such a remedy after so many doctors fail to help you. I am pleased to recommend it to all suffering women."—Mrs. Sara Wilson, 31 East 3d Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

If you have suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness of the stomach, indigestion, bloating, leucorrhœa, flooding, nervous prostration, dizziness, faintness, "don't-care" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feeling, excitability, backache or the blues, these are sure indications of female weakness, some derangement of the uterus or ovarian trouble. In such cases there is one tried and true remedy—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lived Without Hope.

NERVOUS HEADACHE

Interfered With Her Social Duties and Threatened to Cause Her Retirement—How She Was Cured.

Every sufferer from nervous headache knows how completely it unfits one for the duties and pleasures of life. Any little excitement, or over-exertion, or irregularity brings it on. Sometimes the pain is over the whole head. Again it is like a nail driven into the brain, or a wedge splitting it open, or a band tightening about it. At one time it is all in the top of the head, at another it is all at the base of the skull.

Most headaches can be traced to some faulty state of the blood. When the blood is scanty or charged with poison, and the nerves are imperfectly nourished and the digestion weak, one of the commonest results is frequent and severe headaches.

The important thing is to get rid of the diseased condition of the blood that causes the attack by the use of a remedy that will do the work quickly and thoroughly. What is that remedy? The experience of Miss Ellen McKenna furnishes the answer. She says:

"For more than seven years I was a great sufferer from nervous headache and dizziness. My stomach was disordered, and I became so restless that I could not sit still any length of time. Dizziness interrupted my work greatly. At first the attacks were not so severe, but they gradually grew more violent, and finally became so acute that I was on the point of relinquishing my membership in the different organizations to which I belonged."

"What saved you from that necessity?"

"A very simple thing; the call of a member of one of the clubs, who strongly advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills before giving up. I acted on her suggestion at once, and after steadily using this great blood and nerve remedy for two months, my headaches and my dizziness entirely disappeared.

Miss McKenna is secretary of the Associated Ladies' Guild, and resides at No. 48 Walt street, Roxbury, Mass. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured many hundreds of similar cases, and can be confidently recommended to drive all poisons from the blood and to give needed strength to the nerves. Every druggist keeps them.

BRUTALITY OF THE RUSSIAN GRAND DUKES

MAXIM GORKI, THE NOVELIST, FLAYS RELATIVES OF THE CZAR.

St. Petersburg.—In Russia the governing power is virtually in the hands of the grand dukes. It is to them the czar must turn for advice, and it is their advice which must be accepted, whether the czar would or not, for they are more to be feared by the Little Father than are the people. Palace walls guard him from the deputations of the working classes and prevent the placing of nihilistic bombs, but palace walls will not guard him from the machinations of his relatives, the grand dukes, and they would not always be averse to his death.

They can rule only so long as Russia remains an absolute monarchy. Once let reform get a start, let the people have a share in the government, and the day of the grand dukes is over. This they know, and it is against such a possibility that they will exert every influence.

As a class, the grand dukes of Russia are not worth representing any people. As a class they are a dissolute set to whom country, society, morals, must be sacrificed on the altar of their desires. There are exceptions to this rule, but they are not many. Grand Duke Boris is a fair example of the rule, and, as an illustration of his character, and of the influence of the grand dukes upon Russia, is given the following story written by the great Russian novelist, Maxim Gorki. Gorki is one of few men who dared picture Russian conditions as they exist, and for his daring he is now languishing in a Russian dungeon, removed, possibly forever, as many a Russian hero has been before him, from friends and associates, and if not to meet death, then to suffer exile to the Siberian mines that his influence upon the Russian people may be removed. His story is as follows:

Bal pare at the Nobility club, the foremost social organization of St. Petersburg. Twelve [illegible] Five venerable members, two ministers of state, an admiral, a marshal of the aristocracy and a millionaire banker are in the reading-room, dozing at the great round table over magazines and newspapers. From the dancing hall near by flowed in the subdued strains of the quadrille.

High Revelries at the Nobility Club.

Suddenly a boisterous voice: "Follow me, girls. Here is a quiet nook, set aside for our entertainment."

A tallish man in a pink domino, a black velvet mask before his face, a lady in elaborate evening dress upon each arm. A waiter carrying a tray of liquor bottles, confectionery and glasses, followed.

"Put it on the round table, boy, and, ladies, be seated in these excellent lounging chairs." Then, turning to the old gentlemen: "And you, there, move up a bit. This is no time for reading, anyhow." With that he grabbed several files of papers and threw them under the table.

One of the ministers of state rose and said in dignified tones: "Sir, you seem to forget yourself. Let me inform you that this is the library of the club, not the wineroom. And be good enough to withdraw at once."

The intruder burst out laughing, while the women giggled. "Library!" he cried, "fiddlesticks for your library. I would turn the library of the winter palace into a wineroom if I were czar. Don't look so grumpy," he added. "Rather have a drink with us, and then kiss yourselves good-by, grandpas."

Suiting the action to the word, the domino knocked down the financier's paper with a fan one of his women companions handed him. The banker grew red in the face, and, being a small man, sickly and in his dotage, looked helplessly at his friends.

"Sir," he stuttered at last, "you don't seem to know with whom your are dealing. I am councillor of state, Baron Schestjakoff."

"Oh, you are, are you? A pawnbroker of the highest order, I believe. Well, since you introduced yourself, have a drink and then once more good-by—good-by to all of you. You are in my way. Myself and friends desire to be alone. Do you hear?"

By this time the insulted gentlemen had risen, and all spoke at once. The masked man seemed to know them, for he addressed them by name and heaped insults upon each. The admiral was saying: "I never encountered such impudence. We must make an example of this loafer."

"Loafer?" shouted the man in the mask. "Take a care that I do not pulverize you, admiral, and now, out with you, or I will have you fired head foremost."

Meanwhile one of the ministers had sent for the president of the club, who entered, still red with the excitement of the dance. "Leave the room at once," he demanded, "and when sober prepare to pay for your intrusion with expulsion. Waiter, remove the [illegible] board to the board of governors for insubordination."

"Now, what are you up to?" laughed the man in the mask. "I didn't send for you. I am quite sure I didn't."

"Leave the room at once," shouted the president. "We will attend to your insults later."

The masked man leaned back in his chair, crossed his legs and quizzed the president iceringly.

"See here, fellow," he said, slowly, in an ironical voice. "Come to think of it, you are not as useless as I first imagined. Being the president of the club, you have full power to remove these fossils from my sight. Do so quickly, and I'll promise to forget the incident. But don't be all day about it, Ivan. The ladies and myself are eager for a tete-a-tete, and your antiquated friends are in the way."

"The master of police happens to be in the ballroom," cried one of the ministers. "Send for his excellency." The president himself went to look for the official gentleman, who appeared almost immediately, having been attracted by the rumpus.

He walked up to the masked man, and, assuming an authoritative tone, said, curtly: "Leave the room this instant, sir, and take the women with you."

"Polizeimaster," cried the domino, "don't you know that I am suffering from heart affections? I shall kill myself laughing at you if you go on in that way, and particularly if you insist upon using green hair dye, as you did this evening. Your beard looks like the back hair of a mermaid."

The master of police grew very red in the face, stamped his feet and trembled with rage. "Send for the secret service men," he whispered to [illegible] der [illegible] too far."

It Is to This That Russia Bows.

Several officials responded. Somebody brought foolscap paper, ink and pens, and the polizeimaster was about to take down an account of the incident, when the masked man interrupted the proceedings by shouting:

"What are you doing, polizeimaster? It cannot be your intention to make me unhappy for the rest of my life? Send me to Siberia or cut off my ears? Don't do it, I say. You won't listen to my prayers? Well, take my commands, then, slave!"

II.

Saying this, the speaker drew himself up to his full height and threw off his mask.

"Grand Duke Boris!" "His imperial highness!" "We are lost!" whispered president, polizeimaster, the ministers of state, the admiral and banker. Boris enjoyed their confusion, looking for a minute or two from one to the other and grimacing. Then he threw himself into a big arm chair and held his sides while indulging in another fit of laughing.

"Well, are you going or not?" he demanded, after awhile. "How often shall I tell you that myself and friends decided to dispense with your precious company?"

The chief of police, the two ministers of state, the admiral, marshal, financier and president of the club looked at one another, bowed low and tiptoed out like so many whipped schoolboys. At the door the chief turned and came forward once more "to pay his respects to the ladies." And the rest meekly followed.

III.

While Boris and his friends were laughing to split their sides the polizeimaster interviewed the waiter.

"You knew that the masked gentleman was his imperial highness?" he asked, sharply.

"Yes, at your excellency's orders," reported the trembling Ganymede. "His imperial highness forbade me mentioning it. He said he would have my ears if I squealed."

"Well, I will have your ears, and your nose, both, if this gets me into trouble," cried the chief. Then, turning to the two ministers of state, the admiral and the rest, he added: "Gentlemen, I am astonished at your behavior. All of you seem to have been blind and deaf to-night. Cannot distinguish the imperial voice, his gait, demeanor. Gentlemen, you must have taken leave of your senses before you came here."

The ministers, admiral, bankers, president, etc., were profuse in excuses. One confessed that he was "excited," another that he couldn't see well under artificial light, a third that he suspected the identity of his imperial highness, but his protest was overheard.

"At any rate, the all-highest gentleman would have stayed probably no longer than half an hour or an hour. Why could you not oblige him? Why in thunder must you read newspapers at 12 midnight?"

The five old gentlemen departed singly or in groups whispering to each other with the air of persons who had just escaped some great disaster. When their wives and daughters on the floor heard what had happened they were loud in denunciation of husband and father. "He" never knew where to stop, and would make them all unhappy." Some families went home abruptly, and army officers and officials separated ostentatiously from civilian members.

At two o'clock his imperial highness, Grand Duke Boris, issued from the library with heavy step. His face was red as a lobster's, his hair disheveled, his clothes in disorder. His women companions remained behind, stretched out in their chairs, fast asleep.

The grand duke ordered several gentlemen he met to assist him to the music stand. He took a seat by the side of the bass drum, his head dropped upon his chest, and he began to snore audibly. Immediately the bandmaster dropped his baton. "All quiet, his imperial [illegible] deig[illegible]

He slept one, two, three hours, while the club members, their wives and daughters, a thousand all told, looked on without daring to stir. However, the persons most interested in Boris' slumber were the two ministers of state, the admiral, millionaire banker, marshal of the aristocracy and the president of the Nobility club, desperately bent upon wiping out the insults they had innocently heaped upon the imperial loafer.

At last the marshal of the aristocracy took courage to step up to Boris and whisper in his ear.

His imperial highness moved his lips as if trying to blow away a fly perched on his nose.

"Will your imperial highness deign to permit me to attend you to your palace, or is your imperial highness pleased to order me to fetch the carriage?"

Boris mumbled something; then, awakening, bawled out with a yawn: "Yes, I am about ready to go home, and you shall have the honor to conduct me, fellow."

The marshal's face gleamed with happiness; he was once more sunning himself in the radiance of right royal favor. But the admiral, the president the two ministers of state and the banker wanted their share, too. They crowded around his imperial highness with compliments, offers of service and petty talk. Finally, they half carried him to his coach. As it drove away, the marshal cried rapturously:

"Your imperial highness, Grand Duke Boris, we are all agreed that you played your part to perfection. To mystify a whole club for an hour—old Cesquelin couldn't do better. Of course, I saw the joke at once, and entered into its spirit. Never laughed so much in my life, and how I enjoyed your imperial highness' jests with their excellencies. I never saw such a dumfounded parcel of fools! I shall not forget, in a hurry, the happiness of this evening, and those old fossils, as your imperial highness called them, won't, either."

Meanwhile, the "fossils" held an impromptu meeting in the library, from where Boris' lady friends had been gently removed.

"His imperial highness nodded to me in quite charming fashion," said the master of police, "as he passed out."

"And our good grand duke had the supreme kindness to press my hand gently as I helped him into the royal coach," cried the financier.

"I am sure he forgave us," said the two ministers of state. "He laughed most happily between hiccoughs as he sat on the music stand, with one foot in the bass drum."

"Gentlemen," announced the president of the Nobility club, "I secured the drum as a memento of this unhappy-happy evening. The spot where the imperial leg and foot rested shall be framed in silver."

"Bravo," cried the polizeimaster, "the two ministers of state, the admiral and the financier. And the latter added: "I secured the names of the ladies who accompanied his imperial highness to the club, and have ordered two immense flower pieces for them, to be presented early to-morrow morning."

"Not early," decided the polizeimaster. "Wait at least until one in the afternoon. Their ladyships might not wish to be disturbed before that hour."

Frankfort, Ky., March 11.—The Kentucky Court of Appeals refused the writ asked for by the Hargis brothers, of Breathitt county, to restrain the judge of the Fayette circuit court from assuming jurisdiction of them for trial for complicity in the murder of Town Marshall Cockrill, of Jackson. The case thus goes to Fayette county for trial, in which court they are already under indictment.

The ruling of the court here in the Hargis case is that Fayette has concurrent jurisdiction with Breathitt county, and that the arrest by Magistrate Edwards was procured by the Hargises themselves to avoid trial in Fayette, and that the action in Breathitt is void, and Fayette now has exclusive jurisdiction by reason of being first in indicting the parties. Judge Orear delivered the opinion of the court.

In upholding judgment of the Hopkins Circuit Court in a case of W. A. Hardwick against John R. Franklin. Commissioner, the court of appeals says that a county is but an integral part of the State Government, and an action cannot lie against it, or against the Fiscal Court, County Judge or Justices, for injuries sustained by a person in traveling along the roads of the county. In the case at bar, the appellant sued appellee, who had been commissioned by the Fiscal Court to have a bridge repaired, for injuries sustained by the falling of the bridge. The court below found for the Commissioner, and dismissed the petition. The opinion of the court here affirming the lower court, was delivered by Chief Justice Hobson.

Proper Treatment of Pneumonia.

Pneumonia is too dangerous a disease for anyone to attempt to doctor himself, although he may have the proper remedies at hand. A physician should always be called. It should be borne in mind, however, that pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of the grip, and by the proper treatment of these diseases a threatened attack of pneumonia may be warded off. There is no question whatever about this, as during the thirty years and more that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been used, we have yet to learn of a single case of a cold or attack of the grip having resulted in pneumonia when this remedy was used. It is also used by physicians in the treatment of pneumonia with the best results. Dr. W. J. Smith, of Sanders, Ala., who is also a druggist, says of it: "I have been selling Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and prescribing it in my practice for the past six years. I use it in cases of pneumonia and have always gotten the best results. Sold by all druggists.

Did you ever think of the number of apple trees in the land? The latest estimate places the total number of apple trees of bearing age in the United States at something over 2,000,000,000. This is nearly three trees to every person. These trees yield more than 175,000,000 bushels. Not all of these apples are consumed at home, for in years of full crop more than 3,000,000 bushels go abroad. Yet, the apples kept at home are more than two bushels for every adult and child.

Man can learn of animals and insects. The horse teaches us to be silent under punishment and patient in suffering; from the lion we learn bravado; from the cat we learn to prowl at night; from the dog we learn how to be faithful to a friend; the elephant teaches us how to be calm in adversity; the hippopotamus teaches repose; the sly little rabbit teaches us how to die without a murmur; the antelope teaches us the foolishness of idle curiosity; the hop toad teaches us the evils of gluttony; the busy little bee teaches us industry; the ant teaches us industry and wisdom in council; the hen teaches us to get in out of the wet, (yet I have seen fool hens which did not know the difference between sunshine and rain.) Some people might learn from the hogs how to be gentlemen.

A Hungarian blacksmith recently sent, as a present to the emperor of Russia, a horseshoe, a pair of pincers, a file and a knife, all ingeniously nailed to a goose's egg, without the egg being broken. The emperor sent in return his photograph, a gold medal and 30 ducats.

According to the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor, the world's coal production in 1903 reached the enormous total of 864,000,000 long tons, of which the United States produced 319,000,000 tons, Great Britain 230,000,000, Germany 160,000,000, Austria-Hungary 39,000,000, and France 35,000,000.

But few people have any conception of Florida's extent. Jacksonville is about as far north of Miami as it is south of Charlotte, N. C.—about as far north of Key West as it is south of Danville, Va. Ignorance of the extent of Florida leads to many amusing mistakes. It takes over 24 hours to go from Pensacola to Miami. A land trip from one end of Florida to the other is as long as from the lakes to the gulf.

With its 83,000,000 inhabitants in 1905, which are growing at the rate of 15,000,000 every decade now, the United States is the largest civilized country in the world except Russia. With its $110,000,000,000 of property in 1905, as compared with $55,000,000,000 for Great Britain and Ireland, $50,000,000,000 for France, $48,000,000,000 for Germany, and smaller figures for the rest of the countries, it is immeasurably the wealthiest of the world's nations.

Canned tomatoes and other red vegetables and fruits are often colored with eosin; preserved peas and beans, as is well known, have the green color fixed and accentuated by the use of a very objectionable substance, namely, sulphate of copper. Added red coloring matters are often found in wines. Preserved cherries are first bleached so as to become white, then colored a beautiful red, and many other objectionable practices of similar kinds are indulged in.

When Gen. Kuropatkin was a young man he was asked to undertake the editing of a military newspaper. He declined with the words, "Fighting battles is much less dangerous." Fighting battles may not really be less dangerous, but it is certainly less vexatious than conducting a newspaper in the czar's dominions. The editor must lay himself out to please, firstly, the imperial court; secondly, a dozen ministers of state, individually and collectively; thirdly, half a dozen censors, and fourthly, the public.

The length of time man has been known to inhabit the earth has been proved to be 8,000 years. A. M. Amenineau has issued the first volume of the history of his excavations at Abydos, the sacred residence of Osiris. Here he has found prehistoric tombs, and from their contents he knows that they date back 5,000 years. Fortunately for the explorer, the Egyptian of that day thought of death as a state so closely allied to life that he would have need of all the necessities and comforts to be used here, and these were entombed with his body.

One of the greatest battles in history occurred on October 18, 1813, at Leipsic, when Napoleon was defeated by the allied European armies. During the last few years funds have been collected all over the German fatherland in order to provide for means for the erection of an immense monument in commemoration of this great battle. This gigantic monument, which will be the greatest in the world, is now under construction, and it will be finished to be unveiled on the day of the hundredth anniversary of the great battle.

DISASTER IN A MINE.

Twenty-Four Persons Known to Be Dead.

Two Explosions in the Red Ash and Rush Run Collieries in West Virginia—Half of the Dead Were Rescuers.

Fire Creek, W. Va., March 20.—Twenty-four are known to be dead in the Red Ash and Rush Run mines from the two explosions which occurred Saturday night.

Eight miners were at work in the Rush Run and five in the Red Ash mine when the first explosion occurred at 9 o'clock.

Near 2 o'clock Sunday morning a party of 11 rescuers entered Rush Run mines to locate the dead. They had probably gone back 2,000 feet when the second explosion occurred, and it is positively known that all are dead, as there is no possible chance for their escape. After the first explosion miners from other mines nearby rushed to the ill-fated mine in an effort to save their comrades, and it is possible the list of rescuers will reach 20 to 30. It was considered unsafe to enter the mine Sunday, but Monday eight old and experienced miners with safety lamps will enter and close up some of the entries so fresh air can be forced back to where the men lost their lives, a distance of probably 2,000 feet to the rescuers and 5,000 feet to where the men were working.

WAR TO CONTINUE.

The Czar Declines To Abandon the Prosecution of the Conflict.

St. Petersburg, March 20.—While Emperor Nicholas, whose word is final, still declines to abandon the prosecution of the war and the government maintains its ability to continue the conflict, a press representative is in a position to state that powerful influences, including several of the emperor's own ministers, are now strongly urging that the time has come to indicate to Japan Russia's desire for peace upon a reasonable basis. Should Japan then attempt to impose too onerous conditions, these influences argue that in view of the universal wish to see the bloody conflict ended, Russia's position will be strengthened abroad by the alienation of sympathy of Japan and the situation at home improved when the nation is made to understand that the emperor's pacific proposals have been met with impossible terms.

WILL "HIT THE TRAIL."

Visitors at the Next World's Fair Will Have a Change from "Midway" and "Pike."

One "went down" the Pike in St. Louis and "took in" the Midway at Chicago—but it will be "hit the trail" at the western world's fair at Portland, says the Kansas City Star.

All of these familiar sights which have come to be expected of every well regulated "amusement street" will be a part of the Trail, and many new startling novelties are promised.

While the march of progress has changed the character of the shows, the methods of doing business will remain the same. The harsh-voiced spieler will cry out as of old, and the best spieler will get most of the people. Many of the shows, probably most of them, at the Lewis and Clark exposition will be of real educational value, but does the spieler emphasize this fact? Not he. He knows that the people want to be amused.

"Have you saw Cora?" he bellows, and the crowd stops a moment and smiles at his bad grammar, and wonders who Cora is. And then he proceeds to tell them of her marvelous feats of digestion.

"You come on, John," says the little woman in a last year's bonnet. "We've seen enough of them shows."

"Well, we haven't saw Cora, have we?" and the big man laughs and buys two tickets.

One cannot understand why women are so desperately anxious to enter professions and trades which obviously are suited only to men, while they allow men to supersede them in others that seem by right to belong to women alone.—Bystander.

THE SIMPLE LIFE.

Ways That Are Pleasant and Paths That Are Peace.

It is the simple life that gives length of days, serenity of mind and body and tranquility of soul.

Simple hopes and ambitions, bounded by the desire to do good to one's neighbors, simple pleasures, habits, food and drink.

Men die long before their time because they try to crowd too much into their experiences—they climb too high and fall too hard. A wise woman writes of the good that a simple diet has done her:

"I have been using Grape-Nuts for about six months. I began rather sparingly, until I acquired such a liking for it that for the last three months I have depended upon it almost entirely for my diet, eating nothing else whatever, but Grape-Nuts for breakfast and supper, and I believe I could eat it for dinner with fruit and be satisfied without other food, and feel much better and have more strength to do my housework.

"When I began the use of Grape-Nuts I was thin and weak, my muscles were so soft that I was not able to do any work. I weighed only 108 pounds. Nothing that I ate did me any good. I was going down hill rapidly, was nervous and miserable, with no ambition for anything. My condition improved rapidly after I began to eat Grape-Nuts food. It made me feel like a new woman; my muscles got solid, my figure rounded out, my weight increased to 126 pounds in a few weeks, my nerves grew steady and my mind better and clearer. My friends tell me they haven't seen me look so well for years.

"I consider Grape-Nuts the best food on the market, and shall never go back to meats and white bread again." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

STATE NEWS PICK-UPS

KENTUCKY STATE FAIR.

Act Providing $15,000 Annually For It Declared Legal.

Frankfort, Ky., March 16.—The court of appeals declared constitutional the act which appropriates $15,000 annually for a state fair. The suit was that of the Kentucky Live Stock Breeders' association vs. Hager, auditor. In reversing the lower court the higher court in its opinion says:

"The act does not create the Kentucky Live Stock Breeders' association. That corporation is already in existence. The act, in effect, makes an appropriation and directs that a state fair shall be held. The association is simply an agency selected by the legislature to carry out its purposes. The prohibition of special legislation was not intended to prevent the legislature from legislating on a special subject, and we are unable to see how a general law could be passed providing for a state fair in substantially any other way. The acts passed in aid of the World's fair at Chicago and St. Louis were not more special legislation than the act before us. Nor does the act relate to more than one subject."

DRUG STORE UNDER TARPAULIN.

The Court of Appeals Decides That It Shall Remain.

Frankfort, Ky., March 18.—The famous Fowler drug store lease case from Louisville was decided by the court of appeals in favor of Fowler The suit grew out of the Masonic Temple fire in Louisville about two years ago. All that building, except the corner first story, which was leased and occupied by the Fowler Drug Co., was destroyed. Fowler put a tarpaulin roof over the fragment of the building and continued "business at the old stand" under his seven-year lease, which would expire in 1910. Jones Bros., owners of the building, tried to force him out, but he defied them to move him unless they paid him the $5,000 due him under the terms of the lease. This lease the court upholds. Meantime Jones Bros. have been unable to rebuild and have lost thousands of dollars in rents thereby.

DAY'S DEFALCATION.

It Will Be Settled at Fifty Cents on the Dollar.

Day, former secretary of state, who, as a member of the firm of Day Bros., at Jackson, Ky., defaulted one year ago to the amount of $100,000 through a series of alleged fraudulent land deals, will now be able to return to Jackson without fear of prosecution, the defalcation having been settled by his brother, Floyd Day, on a compromise with the creditors at 50 cents on the dollar.

His wife, who passed through this city Wednesday, has gone to join him upon his arrival in New York city, and it is said they will return to Jackson together. All the shortage with the exception of about $7,000 has been made up by Day's father, and the parties interested, it is said, have now agreed not to prosecute.

Applegate and others, and under the decision the track goes into control of the American Turf association. Had Perkins won it would have gone to the Western Jockey club. The track was sold by Perkins to Applegate and others for $200,000, of which $85,000 was still due when Perkins took advantage of the contract between the parties to sell 800 shares of the stock, which was held as collateral security. The question was as to the legality of the sale, which was private, when the contract provided it should be "public."

COOKERY FOR INVALIDS.

Tempting Ways of Presenting Dishes and Best Ways of Preparing Them for the Sick.

A delightful way of serving oranges to an invalid is to press all the juice into a glass with a lemon squeezer; add pulverized sugar to taste and serve with chopped ice. If fresh fruit is denied a patient, stewed fruit may be permitted. In order to secure the very best flavor in apple sauce, which invalids will relish, wash and quarter the apples, remove the cores and stems and stew gently without paring. Then press the soft mass through a colander and beat either with or without the white of an egg until it is light and foamy, sweetening to taste.

Prunes are frequently ordered by physicians, and if the patient rebels at the plain stewed dish, try prune jelly. Wash half a pound of prunes and soak them over night in cold water. Next morning set them over the stove in an agate pan, cover with half a cup of water and bring to the boiling point. During this process soak a quarter of a box of gelatin in half a cup of cold water. When it is dissolved add it, with a quarter of a cup of sugar, to the prunes. Now press the mixture through a colander into a mold and stand aside for three or four hours to harden. Serve with cream if the diet list permits.

Eggnog is extremely nutritious, and is frequently ordered by the physician. Beat the yolk and white of an egg separately, the white to a stiff froth. To the beaten yolk add one tablespoonful of sugar and pour in slowly one wineglass of brandy, whisky or rum, according to the physician's orders. Add half the beaten white of the egg and a small cup of milk, then the remaining half of the white, which should be piled lightly on top.

Eggs for an invalid require delicate cooking. If soft-boiled eggs are ordered, use one of two methods. Have the water boiling sufficiently deep to cover the eggs entirely. Lay in the egg carefully, cover the saucepan tightly with the lid, and move it back on the stove where the heat will keep it just below the boiling point. Let it stand thus for five minutes and the steaming process will result in a soft yolk and a white set, but not hard. The second way calls for cold water and a brisk but not too hot fire. Lay the egg in the cold water and when the latter begins to boil the egg should be done.

ABOVE ALL, DON'T WHINE.

The Physical Effects of This Unhappy Habit and the Loss of Friendship It Entails.

A recent number of Medical Talk has an article on the evil physical effects of "whining." Complaints, says the writer, are usually made in a minor key. This monotony rasps the vocal cords, taxes nasal nerves and muscles that should not be brought into play at all in speaking, and tends to shallow, uneven breathing. The whiner, too, is almost without exception a more or less idle, lazy person. The habit of whining itself tends to sap initiative impulse and increases phlegmatic tendencies. Habitual whining, not healthy, vigorous fault-finding where fault really exists, but the helpless, futile complaining of a narrow nature too indolent to make any effort to right the causes of complaint, has a definitely deleterious physical effect on the whole constitution. Add to this the fact that eternal fault-finding is more than likely to wear out the stanchest friendship, and take the light from the loveliest countenance, and the full effects of this insidious and prevalent habit will be better appreciated.

"Get the whine out of your voice, or it will stop the development and growth of your body. It will narrow and shrink your mind. It will drive away your friends; it will make you unpopular. Quit your whining; brace up; go to work; be something; stand for something; fill your place in the universe. Instead of whining around, exciting only pity and contempt, face about and make something of yourself. Reach up to the stature of a strong, ennobling manhood, to the beauty and strength of a superb womanhood. There is nothing the matter with you. Just quit your whining and go to work."

Baked White Fish.

Clean fish, bone, sprinkle with half teaspoonful salt inside, stuff and sew. Shape with skewers. Place on greased fish sheet in dripping pan. Sprinkle with half-teaspoonful salt and dash of pepper and brush over with melted butter; dredge with flour. For dressing use cup cracker crumbs, one-quarter teaspoonful salt, one-eighth spoon pepper. Serve with olive sauce made of two tablespoons butter, three tablespoons flour, one and one-half cups water, one tablespoon lemon juice, a dash of salt and pepper, few drops kitchen bouquet, ten olives, diced or grated. Melt butter, add flour and seasoning and lemon juice, then water. Stir until thickened and add olives.

To Relieve a Cough.

A sudden and wearing attack of coughing often needs immediate attention, especially in consumptives and those chronically ill. In an emergency that ever useful remedy, hot water, will often prove very effective. It is much better than the ordinary cough mixture, which disorder the digestion and spoil the appetite. Water almost boiling should be sipped when the paroxysms come on. A cough resulting from irritation is often relieved by hot water through the promotion of secretion, which moistens the irritated surfaces. Hot water also promotes expectoration, and so relieves the dry cough.—Good Literature.

DAVID AND GOLIATH.

PROGRAM OF PRESIDENT.

If Carried Out Will Necessitate Some Repairs in the Republican Party.

The president's programme for the direction and governing of congress is being sadly interfered with, not to say upset, by the disposition of both houses to have minds and wills of their own, says the St. Paul Globe. The special correspondent of the Globe points out the radical changes that the president has felt obliged to make since he first decided what congress ought to do, and laid his wishes before it; and the changes he is still to make are beyond a doubt as numerous and as important as those to which he has already consented. He did not succeed in jamming through the legislation indicated in his message affecting railroad rates. He will be no more successful, we fancy, in his present plan of passing a rate bill this fall and a tariff revision bill during the winter. The thing, indeed, is on the face of it absurd.

The reception of his rate legislation by congress has tamed even the impetuous temper of the president. He sees that this is a matter requiring deliberation; that there are sane and temperate views among both those who want and those who do not want legislation, and that no extreme measure is going to carry. He has been taught that to urge this matter further by calling an extra session immediately would be to invite certain defeat. He has succeeded in a very remarkable manner, considering the vote given to him a few months ago, in alienating congress altogether. The house is to-day scarcely less hostile to him than the senate, though it has succeeded in concealing its temper and insinuating the knife more dexterously. He has learned enough by this to see that the extra session must be postponed until fall.

Now this is equivalent to the abandonment of his programme as a whole altogether. It is going to put the republican party in a thoroughly untenable position. The months of the congressional recess will be filled with discussion of the railroad rate question. That having been brought before the public and still remaining in the air, public attention will be fixed upon it to the exclusion of almost everything else. The committees of the two houses and special committees, if such be created, will be busied sifting the evidence and modifying the various proposals made; and congress will come next fall with a better matured opinion to the consideration of this question, but without having given the slightest thought to anything else. Now this situation makes action upon the tariff impossible.

It is known that the president wisely considers some tariff changes indispensable before another general election arrives. Had he insisted, as he first intended, upon forcing this issue upon congress last fall, it would now have right of way, and a tariff bill could be matured this summer and passed early in the next congress. It is practically impossible to secure any such legislation now. The tariff is a big subject to tackle. From six months to a year are required every time in work upon the different schedules, in harmonizing differences, placating paid interests and satisfying all the legislative favorites. Taking up the matter de novo next fall, congress will not get around to the passage of a bill before the congressional elections of 1906. The next national campaign, therefore, will find the country thoroughly dissatisfied; with certain railroad legislation either passed or held up, with a hot tariff debate on hand and with the country stirred up over this question and the people dissatisfied at the failure to make practical progress.

These are the inevitable tangible results of the programme which the president so hastily and unwisely mapped out for himself. Notwithstanding the vote that was given to him, he is not big enough to run the country and his party without some outside help. He has plunged both into a morass where they will be found struggling two years from now. The reputation of the republican party as the one that "does things" is going to need some repairs.

PRINCIPLES OF DEMOCRACY

Roosevelt's "Republican" Radicalism Smacks Strongly of Opposition Doctrine.

Democrats the country over will cordially approve the Roosevelt demands as to tariff and trust regulation, for the reason that these demands are fundamentally right and, in as far as they go, essentially democratic. Mr. Roosevelt incarnates a republican radicalism which is forced out of its sphere into a democratic position, but the fact that the issues bear a "republican" label will not prevent democrats from perceiving their true nature. A label is no more than a label and cannot change the nature of the substance, says the St. Louis Republic. Democratic principles are unchangeable and perpetual—and it is most often the case when the republicans are right that their position is an assumed and borrowed one. Democracy stands in fundamental and eternal opposition to centralization of power and for the preservation of the individual's rights; and when a wing of the republican party, through motives of self-preservation, is forced to veer about and oppose federal and party usurpation democrats can do no less than indorse the radical position as being right and in the direct line of principles which their own party has maintained for a century, and which are universally recognized as democratic, both in the party and in the broader sense.

Particularly the democratic party has defined the trust and tariff issues, conspicuously maintained them and based its campaigns upon them. They had their source and inception in the democratic party; its title to them has never been disputed and can never be successfully disputed.

The republican party can never be recognized on a democratic basis. As a party it can never adhere long to a democratic position. So much of it as faces about and takes up the direction of democratic effort must be cut off from the republican party. Between Roosevelt radicalism and the republican machine forces making for centralization of federal government there is nothing but antagonism. The Dingley tariff and the great private monopolies are republican properties. Their origin, growth and power are distinctively and indisputably republican. They are of the party and constitute much of it as a practical institution. They are in theory and fact republican precisely as opposition to them is in theory and fact democratic. Mr. Roosevelt's avowed and active fight therefore must be and can be nothing else than a fight along the lines of democratic principle against the republican party and republican properties, and as far as he will carry it democrats must accompany and support him. The concession will not be a concession by democrats to a republican executive, but a concession by the president to basic democratic truth and doctrine.

Whitewashing Report.

Commissioner Garfield's whitewashing report of the so-called dressed meat trust must prove more telling against the Roosevelt administration than convincing to the public. This alleged combination has been particularly under the fire of the federal authority for some time. There is outstanding against the firms under investigation an injunction against combining in any way, through concerted buying of cattle or otherwise, to depress the prices of the material or raise the prices of the product; and this injunction has just been confirmed by the United States supreme court. Further is the fact, as reported, that the department of justice is preparing to prosecute these firms for doing things which the injunction and the federal anti-trust law forbid.—Springfield Republican (Ind.).

SCIATIC TORTURE

For Six Months He Could Not Turn in Bed—He Tells of a Remedy Which Has Given Perfect Relief.

The case of Mr. Marston shows that sciatica can be cured, and no one afflicted by it should allow himself to be disheartened. He was first stricken about a year ago, and for six months he suffered pain which he thinks the most intense that any man could possibly stand.

Asked about the details of his remarkable recovery, Mr. Marston gave the following account: "I was attacked by a numbness or dull feeling just back of my right hip. I didn't know what the matter was, but thought it was simply a stiffness that would wear away in a short time. It didn't, however, and soon the pain became so very bad that every step was torture for me. When I finally succeeded in getting home, it was just as much as I could do to reach my room and get to bed.

"The doctor was sent for, and when he had examined me he said I had sciatica. He prescribed for me, and advised me not to try to leave my bed. The advice was unnecessary for I couldn't get out of bed if I wanted to. It was impossible for me to turn from one side to the other. The moment I attempted to move any part of my body, the pain became so excruciating that I would have to lie perfectly motionless.

"I suffered this torture for six months without getting any relief. Then I discharged the doctor, and on the advice of a friend I bought a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and began to take them, three at a dose, three times a day. I was determined to give them a thorough trial.

"Two months after I began to use them I was able to leave my bed and walk about the house, and a month later I was entirely cured and able to go about my work as usual. I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best medicine I ever used, and I heartily recommend them to anyone who suffers from sciatica."

Mr. Marston is a prosperous farmer and may be reached by mail addressed to Charles P. Marston, Hampton P. O., New Hampshire. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured other painful nervous disorders, such as neuralgia, partial paralysis and locomotor ataxia. They are sold by all druggists.

The remains of our old friend, Esq. L. A. Loder, who died at the home of his son, Leon, in Constance, on the 16 inst., were brought here last Sunday, and placed in the vault. He was in his 86th year, and was one of the county's best citizens. The writer remembers him ever since he (the writer) was a small boy, and many a pleasant greeting have we received from him. He was a man of learning, and for many years was the trusted bookkeeper of Gaff & Jenkins, when they operated the big flour mill, now the Boone County Distillery. He lived an honorable and useful life, and has now gone the way of the world, and the places which knew him once shall know him no more forever.

I was all run down from nervousness and overwork and had to resign my position and take a rest. I found that I was not gaining my strength and health as fast as I could wish, and as your Wine of Cardui was recommended as such a good medicine for the ills of our sex, I bought a bottle and began using it. I was satisfied with the results from the use of the first bottle, and took three more and then found I was restored to good health and strength and able to take up my work with renewed vigor. I consider it a first-class and excellent tonic for worn-out, nervous condition, and am pleased to endorse it.

The fruit buds are said to be in good condition yet.

For Sale—Five shoats. Apply to Legrand C. 3, Limaburg.

James Hedges has engaged in the butcher business in Burlington.

The dirt roads settled nicely last week under the effect of the sun's warm rays.

The indications are that the 1905 wheat crop in this county will be very small.

Fire got out last Friday and burned a considerable string of rail fence for Lewis Beemon.

Perry A. Ryle had a telephone put in his residence, last week. It is on the Boone county line.

The farmers should watch J. H. Mersman, sr., & Co's. advertisement from week to week in the RECORDER.

James Bailey delivered his tobacco to a Covington firm, last week, at 10 cents a pound for all except a small quantity.

Not much of a stir is being made about the 1905 tobacco crop in this county, but about the usual crop will be housed at the proper time.

Several wild ducks have been seen pass over the town in the last few days, but so far none of the boys have been able to bag any of them, although two or three have been on the alert with their guns.

T. J. Walton and tenants finished delivering, last Wednesday to Conner & Hogan, their 19,600 pounds of tobacco grown in 1905. There are few men in the county who farm on a larger scale than Mr. Walton does.

The patrons of the public schools in the Garrison and Bullittsville districts are discussing the consolidation proposition, some favoring a consolidation and others opposing it. The matter will soon have to be settled one way or the other.

William Kirkpatrick, of Hopeful church neighborhood, has put a telephone in his residence. His line connects with the Boone County Telephone Company near the residence of Alonzo Beemon on the Burlington and Florence pike.

Clyde Berkshire made a delivery of fruit trees last week. He has a sample of the Perfection, Champion and Delicious apples, the young trees for which he is selling. They are handsome looking specimens of fruit, and are said to be splendid keepers.

The sale of W. M. Rouse, near Crescent, last Wednesday, was attended by a fairly good sized crowd, and good prices were realized, especially for his poultry, hens bringing from $3 25 to $3 60 per half dozen, and roosters from $1 85 to $2 30 per head.

F. J. Williams, proprietor of the Hamilton Drug Co., Hamilton, Iowa, says Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is practically the only remedy he sells for cramps, diarrhoea and colic, for the plain reason that it never disappoints. For sale by all druggists.

In the last 30 years at least $100,000 has been invested in fruit trees by land owners in this county, and it is doubtful if all the orchards combined in the county are worth $10,000. Fruit comes high but a farm on which there is not some fruit is considered not up to date by a great deal.

The month of March has been very fine weather for lambs, which have taken a nice start and will grow rapidly until ready for market if the next several weeks bring forth a good growth of grass. Some of the farmers have found it profitable to sow rye in the fall that it may produce early pasture for sheep and lambs.

J. W. Howe & Son, of Hamilton, Ohio, have placed another advertisement in the RECORDER, and say that they are pleased with the returns from their former advertisement. The senior member of the firm has an extensive acquaintance among the older citizens of the county, who hold him in very high esteem.

This has been a splendid season for sowing grass seeds, and it is hoped the farmers will have better success along that line than they have had for several years. For some reason of late years it has been almost impossible to get a good stand of grass from the first sowing. In many instances, no doubt, the failure was because of imperfect seed.

Last Thursday was an ideal day for a public sale, and a very large crowd, composed of persons from far and near, assembled at Tony Bentler's to witness the disposition of his very large accommulation of goods and chattles. Ennis Nixon, of Gasburg, was the orator, and the sale began promptly at the hour scheduled, and by hard work it was concluded between 3 and 4 p. m. The sale of the household and kitchen furniture and a very large lot of small articles consumed the first part of the day. At noon the crowd partook heartily of soup and bread, the soup being made in three large kettles under the supervision of Owen Aylor and Kirb Tanner, who, long since, established their reputations as splendid cooks for an occasion of that kind. After dinner the sale of the live-stock began and the bidding was animated, everything sold bringing quite are nearly its full value, as shown by the following prices paid: Chickens, $6 a dozen; turkeys, $3 per head; binder, $25 50; good farm wagon, $29; buggy, $13; land roller, $10; 8 sheep and 6 lambs, $48 50; milch cows, $35 to $42; jersey bull, $50; heifers, $13 to $20; sows, $9 to $13; pair 2 year old colts, $120; 4 year old horse, $130; 10 year old horse, $126; 12 year old horse, $96; assorted corn, 68 to 70 cents; other corn, 55 to 56 cents; fodder, 12½ cents a shock.

Some thought the cattle brought the best prices of anything sold.

The prices horses brought indicated that they are in demand this spring.

A great many ladies were in attendance, and took great interest in the sale.

Mr. Case, who purchased the farm, was present and was one of the bidders.

Waterloo had a pretty good delegation in the crowd: Kite, Gully, Sullivan and others.

The sale amounted to about $1,300, which was more than Mr. Bentler anticipated.

Morris Rice paid $11 more for a horse than he sold the same animal to Mr. Bentler a year or two ago.

Several Covington business men were present talking up their wares, among them Mr. Fisher, of J. A. Fisher & Co.

Conner & Hogan were working the crowd on the tobacco question, while the Barlow Bros., were talking lambs and sheep.

Martin Michael's, of Erlanger neighborhood, put up his horse in Burlington and walked out to the sale, finding, to his surprise, that the dirt road was good.

Wesley Underhill was taking up a subscription of money with which to buy Mrs. Chas. Stephens a cow, hers having died the night before. Everybody gave something.

Before the soup hour Buzz Rockwell found a ready sale for tin cups at a nickle a piece, but the bottom dropped out of the market about 12 m., and Buzz went out of business.

Many men who were considered extensive farmers, after a career of 50 or 60 years have quit the business with less than one-fourth the farming out-fit on hands that Tony Bentler had accumulated.

It does not pay for too many of a family to attend a sale unless it is understood which is to do the bidding, as demonstrated by the stand a father and son took against eachother, last Thursday.

We are agents for the Oliver Chilled Plow, and all its repairs. We will have in stock in a few days 2-car loads of the Lawrenceburg, Ind. Snow Flake, best brand, Mill Feed, which, with any kind of feed you may want, we will sell at the lowest possible prices.

Startling Mortality.

Statistics show startling mortality, from appendicitis and peritonitis. To prevent and cure these awful diseases there is just one reliable remedy, Dr. King's New Life Pills. M. I have completed and opened a well equipped livery stable on Carneal street near Elm, where horses and rigs will receive the best of attention. Boone county people will find it to their advantage to leave their horses and buggies with me.

I make two trips daily to the city with my express wagon.

B. S. CLORE, Ludlow.

Elijah Northcutt, 84, who resided between Walton and Key West, was found dead in his bed, last Saturday morning. He was in his usual health when he retired Friday night. Mr. Northcutt had been a very successful business man and was quite wealthy.

Justis Hudson, of Walton precinct, reports to the RECORDER a 12,000 pound crop of tobacco, which brought him the snug sum of $2,075. It was raised on the old Fountain Riddell farm.

Lebanon, Ohio, March, 13, 1905.

Editor of the Recorder:

As a student of the National Normal University, of Lebanon, Ohio, I had the opportunity of attending the celebration of the eighty ninth anniversary of the birth of Chancellor Holbrook, a few days ago. It was observed with great enthusiasm by the alumni and students of the famous educator. Visitors were in attendance from Cincinnati, Columbus, Dayton, Franklin and Hamilton, and telegrams and letters from men and women in many cities, who, in their younger days, were pupils of the chancellor. The visitors arrived on a special car and after an informal reception at the home of Chancellor and Mrs. Holbrook, they, with President and Mrs. Creager, headed the procession to the school, and as the guests of honor, mounted the platform he was accorded a hearty ovation. Judge Davis, of Cincinnati, presided, and, after the invocation, the audience joined in singing America. Mr. Robert M. Adams, of the under graduate body, delivered a touching address of welcome. Other addresses were delivered by the old graduates from Columbus, Cincinnati and St. Paul, Minn. President Holbrook, in a brief address, made an appeal to the alumni and students to stand by the school and help it to continue its mission for another fifty years, that it may do for another seventy thousand students what has been done for the seventy thousand of the past fifty years. Continuing, he said he felt younger on this day than he did forty years ago.

Adjournment was made to the banquet hall in another block, where arrangements had been made for about 400. After all were satisfied, Judge Davis again called to order and introduced Judge Walsbarry, and the addresses continued throughout the afternoon reminiscences and expressions of love and gratitude being the order of the day. At the close President Holbrook again expressed his appreciation and Mrs. Holbrook also responded.

Alfred Holbrook was born at Derby, Conn., 1816, and, after completing his education, came into the newly settled State of Ohio and became a teacher, establishing the National Normal University at Lebanon in 1855. His school was the first truly co educational institution in the United States. It is a remarkable fact that the greatest normal institutions today are directed by Lebanon graduates, Ada, O., Danville and Valpariso, Ind., being the most important.

President Holbrook is a well preserved man in spite of his advanced years, being erect, energetic and keenly alert to everything that is going on. Few men preserve their vigor as he does and the probabilities are that at the semi-centennial celebration next August he will be more vigorous than many of his old students, who come with snowy locks and bent shoulders to reverence the founder of our "normal schools."

JENNIE C. KELLY.

March is on good terms with everybody.

The first edition of garden planting was worked off, last week.

If you want to plant your potatoes in the moon, you must attend to that work this week.

Otto Crisler is adding much to the appearance of his father's residence by a liberal application of paint.

Max Herbst & Co., clothiers, of Covington, have planted an advertisement in the RECORDER. Locate it and read it.

John Baldon's sawmill began operation down on Gunpowder, last week, where it will cut 100,000 feet of oak lumber for Spencer Rouse.

Judging from the remarks of a number of farmers there will be a great increase in the tobacco acreage in Grant county this year.—Courier.

A few days since a roll of paper money amounting to $950 was found in a bulk of tobacco belonging to the estate of William Vest, of Verona. Mr. Vest committed suicide several weeks ago, and it was known he had had considerable money, but no one knew what had become of it. The tobacco was being moved when the money was found. It is also known that he had about $300 in gold, which it is supposed he buried somewhere, and for which an extensive but fruitless search has been made.

A Favorite Remedy for Babies.

Its pleasant taste and prompt cures have made Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a favorite with the mothers of small children. It quickly cures their coughs and colds and prevents any danger of pneumonia or other serious consequences. It not only cures croup, but when given as soon as the croupy cough appears will prevent the attack. For sale by all druggists.

To my constituents in the Sixth District of Kentucky:—Having received numerous applications for garden and flower seeds, bulbs, plants and pamphlets I take this means of notifying my constituents that the quota due the 6th district for distribution in 1905 was assigned last fall to Hon. D Lynn Gooch, my predecessor in office, and he has them for distribution. This assignment was made under an act of Congress. Next fall I will receive the seeds, etc., allotted to my district and I shall be pleased to supply the wants of all. Respectfully,

JOSEPH L. RHINOCK.

A deaf and dumb boy named Sherman, and about 17 years of age, stopped at Attorney G. G. Hughes', last Wednesday evening, where he was given his supper. After supper Willie Hughes brought him up in town, when a ticket given out by the Kentucky Grocery Co., of Ludlow, was found in his pocket. One of the proprietors of the Kentucky Grocery is Norris Riddell, brother of Marce Riddell, of Burlington, to whom he telephoned and was informed that the boy lived near his store. A request came that the boy be detained until morning, when he would be sent for. He was lodged in jail for safe keeping, and Norris and Clint Riddell came for him on Thursday. Sherman has left home once or twice before. He said he was going to Aurora to visit his grandmother.

A ROMANCE OF BABEL

OUR SERMON STORY by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher

(Copyright, 1905, by J. M. Edson.)

Scripture Authority:—"And the Lord came down to see the city and the tower, which the children of men builded. And the Lord said, Behold, the people is one and they have all one language; and this they begin to do; and now nothing will be restrained from them, which they have imagined to do. Go to, let us go down, and there confound their language, that they may not understand one another's speech. So the Lord scattered them abroad from thence upon the face of all the earth; and they left off to build the city."—Gen. 11:5-8.

AR to the north of the land of Shinar, that fruitful alluvial plain compassed by the refreshing waters of the Euphrates and Tigris rivers, there dwelt many years after the flood a numerous multitude of people. The fear of God was before their eyes, and, steadfastly obeying the command of God to scatter and replenish the earth, they had refused to listen to the appeals of the inhabitants of Shinar. This aggressive but ungodly people had urged them to migrate to the south and concentrate their forces with them in the building of a great city and tower which would become an enduring center toward which the people of the earth would turn and where they could enjoy life together.

The refusal was met by abuse and persecution of the most virulent type. It found expression in numerous ways, the most distressing of which was the raiding of the settlements by armed bands and the carrying off to Shinar of the strong young men as enforced laborers in the vast building operations which had been undertaken.

As a consequence there was mourning in many a household. Wives mourned the loss of husbands which were torn from their bosoms. Parents were robbed of their sons, and fair young girls were left sad and desolate as their lovers were dragged away to a life worse than death.

Evil was united and triumphant. During this dark period of the world's history we find this unique condition, that the godless were drawn together in unholy combination to thwart God's righteous plans. One spirit ruled supreme. God was reckoned out of the account, and the one purpose was to provide a permanent shelter and abode for themselves. Not since that day has the evil in the world been united in its rebellion against God. And it will not be again until that latter day when the anti-Christ shall have been manifested and shall have as by a miracle unified the forces that are in rebellion against God. Then the arm of the Lord shall be revealed and His enemies vanquished, even as in that earlier day, when Babel's mad hordes were driven hither and yon before the wrath of God's power.

What hordes of laborers it must have taken to have carried on such a project! What unity of spirit and tenacity of purpose! Everyone in that great industrial center of Babel had some share in the work, but to the enforced laborers brought in from the outlying country to the north and west were given the most menial of the tasks. They became the bearers of burdens. They gathered the bitumen used for cement; they mixed the clay for the bricks, and when dried in the sun or burned in the fire they bore them to the men working on the great walls of the rising structure.

Among the hundreds thus plodding from early morn to setting sun, none more noble face or manly bearing was to be seen than that of Rurig. Despite the sorrow in the face which told of a heart craving unsatisfied, and a tragedy that had blasted the young and promising life, there was a deep light in the eyes that spoke of a depth of character that could be hopeful when hope seemed dead, that could cling in faith to God when God seemed to be far away and to have forgotten.

As God came down to see the city and the tower which man was building, His all-discerning eye must have discovered the young man groaning under his burdens, and His ear must have caught the ever-ascending prayer as it rose from the anguish-stricken heart asking for deliverance. God hears the cry of faith, and He does deliver right speedily. Who can know or determine how much the judgment of God upon godless Babel may have been in answer to the prayer of such as Rurig?

Months had rolled by since he had arrived with a score of others, and had been assigned his task, but the memory of that day when he was seized in the fields and fettered and marched off to the southward was as vivid as though it were but yesterday. He could see his beloved Alisha as she stood that day wringing her hands in piteous helplessness, and moaning his name as he disappeared in the distance. They were betrothed and were soon to have wed, but cruel fate had separated them, perhaps forever.

In another patch of slaves that had arrived long after he had come there was [illegible] his section of the country, [illegible] the tidings that Alisha [illegible] before had disappeared, and [illegible] to trace or discover her [illegible] had been futile.

[illegible] fresh anguish was this for [illegible] How the arrow of anx[illegible] and deeper into [illegible] he wondered where [illegible] had befallen her. [illegible] out in the anguish [illegible] this bondage, [illegible]

But the only answer that he received was the sound of many feet as they plodded to and fro, and the noise of trowel and spade and hoe, and the crack of the whiplash as some lagging footstep was hurried to its task.

Thus the days dragged on, and as the walls reared themselves farther and farther toward the blue of the heaven, God seemed farther and farther away. Ah, if those broken walls and scattered brick could speak, to-day, what tales they might tell of evil's triumph, and the infliction of suffering! What sighs they would give forth! What rivers of tears would flow from their dusty piles! But God ever liveth in the heavens, and evil's longest day must have an ending. The long years of Babel's triumph must come to a close.

Under the strain of the heavy tasks and the heart anguish and worry, Rurig grew thin, and pale and weak, and being no longer able to stand the heavier work, he was transferred to the lighter tasks of the slime pits outside of the city. These were located on the main road leading to the city, and as over it passed most of the slaves he had many opportunities of gaining bits of news of the outside world, and he never failed to speak the name of Alisha and to ask for tidings of her.

"Alisha? Alisha?" questioned one man one day as the large group of fettered prisoners came to a halt near where Rurig was working. "That sounds something like a name I heard a mere youth give who is one of our company. There he is now!" he exclaimed, as he pointed out a slight figure standing at some distance.

Rurig looked in the direction indicated, and as the prisoners moved forward he caught a glimpse of a face which reminded him of his own fair girl. But it could not be she, fettered and wearing the garb of a youth! No! Studying closely the form as it disappeared in the distance, he became convinced that it was not she, and yet he could not forget the incident. It kept rising before him with every recurring thought of her, and as often he dismissed it as unreasonable and impossible.

Thus time dragged on its lengths, and the vast tower was nearly completed, Rurig and the others working with him collecting the slime from the pits were transferred back to the main works, as all efforts were being concentrated for the completion of the project that day.

But why that feverish haste on the part of the Babelites? Does evil have its premonitions of impending calamity, and seek by anxious, nervous hurry to forestall defeat? Does there linger in the heart of the ungodly the thought that after all God may be thwarted, and human plans be realized regardless of the Divine will? Such is certainly the case, and it marks with peculiar solemnity and awfulness the judgment when it does fall.

On that last day all the Babelites were gathered at the tower. Everybody seemed busy, and the slaves were being driven to their tasks with special rigor. The building neared completion.

And God looked on.

Suddenly the black clouds rolled over the heavens, shutting out the sun's light, and the inky blackness which settled down upon the tower and city of Babel was pierced by the vivid flashes of lightning, while the awful rumble of the thunder shook the structure to its foundations. Is evil filled with terror in the presence of the mighty elements which it cannot control? Yea, verily, transgression of God's law and a violation of His will makes cowards of the strongest hearts in the presence of impending doom! So it was at the tower of Babel when God's judgment fell. A huge bolt of lightning hurled from the ramparts of Heaven came rushing down and rent in twain the massive walls of the great structure. In wild panic the people rushed hither and thither.

But there were calm souls beneath the frowning walls of Babel that day, devout souls which looked upward and thanked God that He had heard, and answered prayer, and had spoken.

In confusion of tongues, and confusion of spirits, too, the people were hurled in mad haste in every direction, and they slackened not their speed until Babel was left far, far behind.

A rift in the clouds and a shaft of light descended and rested on two figures standing on the ruins. As each looked into the other's face there was a glad cry of recognition.

"Alisha!"

"Rurig!"

The lovers were in each other's arms. Faith had triumphed. On the spot where evil had been hurled to judgment, had been found joy and reunion! Where evil had been scattered and confused in tongue so that friends and loved ones were estranged from each other, and so changed in speech as to be incapable of intelligent conversation, the friends of God and those who longed to do His will were, by the operation of the same Divine power, reunited.

God is love! And the expression of that infinite love like a two-edged sword cuts to the sundering of the evil, and to the reuniting of the good. And so shall it be again when the judgments of God fall upon the towers of Babel which evil is constantly rearing. It shall scatter them in confusion, but to the man of obedience and faith it will come as the call to new and closer unity and fellowship.

Rurig and Alisha on the ruins of Babel speak out of the past a newer and brighter message, and as the reunited lovers began that day a new life and new experience, so shall the Christian of to-day find new life and new experience in the pathway of faith and obedience. And though evil may for a time triumph, and lay its cruel hand of bondage upon us, we shall yet stand on the ruins it has left, and look into the face of Him who has loved us and washed us from our sins in His own precious blood.

THE FARM AND GARDEN

TROUBLESOME INSECTS.

Suggestions as to the Way to Deal with the Destructive Cutworm.

Thousands of newly-set fruit trees, grave vines, etc., die every spring—"unaccountably." Usually, too, the nurseryman who furnished the stock is blamed; when, in reality, the trouble is often a climbing cutworm who comes, like a thief in the night, to feast on the swelling, luscious buds. And, when daylight appears, he crawls down and hides in the soil under a stick. Oh, he's a sly fellow!

Take a lantern, some night after fruit buds have begun to swell, and Mr. Cutworm will be caught on the trees, "red-handed." In this manner some people hunt and destroy him; but there's an easier way.

When he's a moth he looks even more ordinary—merely an inch-size dusky-colored flyer, who appears as innocent as you please.

How many cousins, uncles and aunts this cutworm has would take a lot of room to relate. Some of his relatives do not climb, contenting themselves with biting into the stems of tender vegetation, like cabbage, corn or tomatoes; some cousins are white, and some are yellowish, greenish or grayish; some are short, some are longer.

Fortunately, this greedy worm has many enemies—chickens, robins, catbirds, etc., toads, and even spiders. But these good friends of the farmer cannot do it all. No. The farmer should help.

Several methods of combating cutworms have been invented, but for medium-size areas the best way we know is to "fence 'em out." Not with a rail fence, or a wire fence, or even a stone fence. Easier than that! Just a tiny barrier of paper. That's all.

The picture gives the idea. Cut some stiff tar-paper into strips about nine inches long and two or three inches wide. Put a strip around a tree trunk, tightly lap the edges an inch or more, and push the lower half of the circle into the soil—to anchor it and to prevent worms from easily burrowing beneath. It takes but a short time—and only a few cents—thus to protect several hundred newly-set trees.

For cabbage plants, etc., a smaller band may prove more convenient. All that is necessary is to have the paper at least an inch and one-half away from all parts of the plant or tree; to have the edges lapped tightly; and to make sure that no worms are hid in the soil between the paper and the plant. Any kind of stiff paper, or wood veneer, or tin, will do; we prefer tar-paper because it is lasting and cheap.

An orchard or garden thus protected is safe for many weeks—until cutworm danger is mostly over. Just why the worms do not "climb over the fence," is a puzzle. But they very rarely do. The writer of this article has watched them in his own orchard at night, seen them climb up the paper fence on the outer side, crawl all around the top, reach inwards in a vain attempt to touch the encircled tree, and then—sullenly, disgustedly—crawl down on the outside, the way they had come! That they do not often crawl down on the inside, is a curious fact.

Another way of fighting cutworms, is to scatter bunches of poisoned vegetation (clover, weeds, etc., moistened with Paris green and water) here and there in the field or orchard. Some people recommend poisoned bran, too. But, personally, we prefer not to scatter poisoned eatables about the farm, so long as we can erect enough paper fences.

Three points to remember about cutworms; They prefer sandy soils in which to hide and winter. Persistent cultivation of any soil is unfavorable to them. Pieces of board laid near trees or plants serve as traps for cutworms; lift such pieces each morning and kill the worms found hiding beneath.

Marking Cows.

The question of marking cattle in dairy herds is one that often bothers the owner. He wants some effective way to distinguish one from the other, especially the younger ones. The metallic mark in the ear is popular with many, though it has a disadvantage in being lost by pulling out, which mutilates the ear. Straps about the neck are adopted in some places where the expense of the method is not objected to; a brass tag being slipped over the strap. There is a revival of interest in the tattooing of the ear with figures or letters. This is said to be a permanent and sure means of identification, cheap and easily done, but like all other things, has its failings—too hard to find in a hurry.—Jersey Bulletin.

The Crack in the Poultry House.

A crack in the walls of the poultry house means—a draft; a draft means —colds; colds mean —roup; roup means —death, disaster and failure—all on account of a small crack that could have been repaired in ten minutes. Are there any cracks or openings in your poultry house that have not been repaired? If so, read the above again.—Commercial Poultry.

Hogs can be grown with profit on any farm that will grow clover.

GIVES UP VALUABLE RIGHT.

Dr. Moore Donates His Bacteria Discovery to the Use of the American Farmer.

Dr. George T. Moore, of Washington, secured in March of last year a patent on methods he had discovered of making cultures of nitrogen-fixing bacteria, of increasing their nitrogen-fixing power and of drying them so that they may be sent all over the world, while at the same time their activity is indefinitely preserved.

The department of agriculture has just issued bulletin No. 71, in which it makes known that these patented processes have been deeded by Dr. Moore to the department, to be held in trust for the use of the general public. The American Agriculturist of this week says that Dr. Moore could undoubtedly have made a very great fortune if he had formed a company and exploited the patent. But he chose to make a gift of it to the farmers of America.

The bulletin tells how soils may be enriched by introducing into them a certain kind of bacteria which have the power of fixing in the soil nitrogen from the air so that it is available for plant food. Nitrogen is one of the principal plant foods, and it forms over three-fourths of the weight of the air. The Sun told about a year ago how it had been discovered that the bacteria living in the roots of leguminous plants change atmospheric nitrogen into soluble form for plant food so that plants may get from the air the nitrogen they need.

But how could these nitrogen-fixing bacteria be artificially multiplied and distributed to farmers so that they might enrich the soil? This question had to be answered before the discovery could be of large practical utility.

Prof. Nobbe, of Germany, thought he had solved the problem. He found that by taking the nodules of tubercles containing the bacteria which develop on the roots of legumes he could inoculate other legumes on which the bacteria did not develop without inoculation.

Then he found that he could isolate the bacteria and breed them in large colonies. He made a great sensation among German farmers when he advertised his discoveries and there was a large demand for his bacteria, which he sold in bottles at one dollar each.

But his bottled bacteria did not prove satisfactory. The microscopic animals died and the farmers who expected wonderful results were disappointed.

Our department of agriculture sent Kent to Germany to report on these experiments. He found that they were not successful, but the department still hoped that some method might be perfected of utilizing the discovery.

The services of Dr. Moore were at last secured and he gave his whole attention to the investigation. "He has succeeded," says the bulletin, "in perfecting the pure culture method of multiplying and distributing the bacteria even beyond our expectations."

Dr. Moore discovered the weak points in Prof. Nobbe's methods and began a long series of experiments. Without following the minutiae of his work, it is enough to say that he originated a new method of feeding by which he developed a type of bacteria possessing from five to ten times as much power to fix free nitrogen as the original colonies had possessed.

The next step was to discover some simple means by which these bacteria might be distributed far and wide without deterioration. He found at last that he could dry them and later revive them in a liquid medium and that they retained their high activity. He soaked small bits of cotton in his cultures and discovered that when dried out they retained millions of bacteria that could be sent to any part of the world.

As a result of this work it is now possible to inoculate at very small expense the seed of all leguminous plants. Last spring the department began the distribution of bacteria to a very large number of applicants living in nearly every part of this country and in many foreign countries.

The results obtained have been extremely satisfactory. The pamphlet prints some hundreds of letters showing that the crops of alfalfa, red clover, cow peas, garden peas, beans, soy beans, crimson clover, field peas, sweet peas, velvet beans, peanuts and other legumes were greatly increased by the use of the cultures, and the result upon succeeding crops is beneficial.

Thus investigations in this country have led to a practical method of introducing atmospheric nitrogen into the soil in a form in which it may be utilized for plant food.

OPEN SINK DRAINS.

How the Farmer May Easily and Cheaply Remove One Objectionable Condition About House.

Open sinks are an abomination, yet they are found about many farmhouses.

A cesspool can easily be made by home labor, and a plumber's bill for connecting it with the kitchen sink will not be very large, says the Farm Journal. Locate the cesspool on ground lower than the house. The opening should be some five by nine feet inside the stones, if in porous soil. Dig down about six feet and build up a wall, as shown, to within a foot and a half of the top of the ground. Lay cross-pieces of heavy timber across the narrow way, cover with cedar planks, and on these place earth and sod to the level of the ground. The wall is not cemented. If the cesspool is located in a gravel soil it will seldom need cleaning out.

SEEDING IN PROGRESS IN WESTERN CANADA.

Mild Weather Is Bringing Thousands of Settlers.

The splendid yields of wheat, oats and barley produced by the farmers of Western Canada and the excellent prices received for the same, have been the means of giving an increased interest throughout the United States. As a result the inquiries made of the Agents of the Canadian Government have nearly doubled over those of the same period last year. Railroad companies are putting on increased carrying capacity to meet the demand made upon them for carrying passengers and freight. Everything points to a most prosperous year. There is room for hundreds of thousands additional settlers, much new land having been opened up for settlement this year.

It is quite interesting to look through the letters received from the Americans who have settled in Western Canada during the past few years, and considering the large number it is surprising how few there are who have not succeeded. An extract from a letter written by Mr. Geo. M. Griswold, of Red Deer, Alta., formerly of Grever, Montana, written on the 2d of January, is as follows:

"I am located one and one-half miles from a beautiful lake ten miles long, where there is church, school, three stores, creamery and two post offices. The fine stock, both cattle (cows and steers), horses, hogs and sheep are rolling fat, grazing in pasture to-day, just a little snow, hardly enough for good sleighing, as we just had a Chinook which has melted the roads and laid bare the fields and pasture. There are fine wheat, oats, barley and flax raised here, also winter wheat and timothy hay for export to British Columbia. This is a mixed farming and dairy country. This is the right time to get a foothold in the Canadian West, as it was some years ago in the United States. We are free from wind gumho and alkali here and have fine, clear, soft well and spring water at a depth of from 5 to 25 feet, and lots of open ever flowing springs."

Telegraphic advices from Medicine Hat say that seeding has commenced at Medicine Hat, Lethbridge, and other points. At the former place the temperature moderated gradually until on the 19th the maximum was 45 and the minimum 26. Thermometer readings since then have been as follows: 20th, 47 and 38; 21st, 54 and 34; 22d, 56 and 39; 23d, 48 and 40; 24th, 48 and 26.

During the last few days in February considerable plowing was done near Lethbridge. P. A. Pulley, a recent arrival from Montana, plowed and harrowed 15 acres and E. Lafferty about the same amount. Rev. Coulter White has also been harrowing his farm. All report the ground frost free and in excellent condition. Brickslaying has also begun in town. At Hartney, further east, on the 25th of February the sun was warm and bright, wheeled carriages were in use and the plowed fields look as if they are ready for the press drills. There is every appearance that spring has arrived, but farmers do not wish to be deceived by appearances and consequently have not commenced to use their bluestone and seed wheat.

New Erie Locomotives.

The Erie Railroad has ordered 137 very heavy freight locomotives and 5600 freight cars. The company is also having built three of the new and fast type of passenger engines known as "balanced compounds." These locomotives will pull more passenger cars at a higher rate of speed than any other kind. The company is also having built three heavy Pacific type of passenger engines.

SOUTHERN CONDITIONS AND POSSIBILITIES.

In no part of the United States has there been such wonderful Commercial, Industrial and Agricultural development as along the lines of the Illinois Central and Yazoo & Mississippi Valley Railroads in the States of Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana, within the past ten years. Cities and towns have doubled their population. Splendid business blocks have been erected. Farm lands have more than doubled in value. Hundreds of industries have been established and as a result there is an unprecedented demand for

Parties with small capital, seeking an opportunity to purchase a farm home; farmers who would prefer to rent for a couple of years before purchasing; and day laborers in fields or factories should address a postal card to Mr. J. F. Merry, Asst. General Passenger Agent, Dubuque, Iowa, who will promptly mail printed matter concerning the territory above described, and give specific replies to all inquiries.

MEN AT WASHINGTON

NEW SENATORS SMALL IN STATURE, BUT BIG BRAINED.

LA FOLLETTE OF WISCONSIN

Passing of John H. Reagan, of Texas, Old-Time Democrat—Wearers of Gray in Public Life—Progress in Philippines.

WASHINGTON.—The United States senate is acquiring a large number of men of small stature. They are diminutive only, of course, in physical stature, as most of them are intellectual giants, famed for their ability in and out of the senate. There came in on the 4th of March two or three additions to the corps of little men. One of these, George S. Nixon, of Nevada, is probably the smallest man in stature in the senate. He is even smaller than Allee, of Delaware, and that is saying a good deal. Mr. Nixon comes to the senate, however, bearing a reputation of unusual ability as a lawyer and a man of affairs, and he is counted on to take a place in the front rank of the strong men in the senate.

Another short man who has just come in is "Bob" La Follette, of Wisconsin, the strenuous governor and the successful fighter of the stalwart wing of the republican party. He matches his colleague in stature, as Senator Spooner is also below the normal height of man. If La Follette had had two or three more inches in height he would never have been heard of in the political world and would never have come to the senate. His earliest ambition was for the stage, and he developed histrionic ability of rare quality, but as he wished to play tragedies, his diminutive height was an insuperable bar to a career in that line. A hero on the stage of some five feet four inches in height would have a hard time to achieve success, no matter how fine his elocutionary qualities. La Follette gave up the idea of going on the stage and went into state politics, and he is now pretty nearly the top of the heap.

Other small men in the senate are Piles, of Washington; Martin, of Virginia; Allee, of Delaware, and Knox, of Pennsylvania. The latter has always been represented as an extremely diminutive man, physically, but he overtops in stature at least four of his colleagues in the senate.

Passing of Historic Southerner.

THE recent death of John H. Reagan, of Texas, removes another of the old-time democrats who made an impress on public affairs in Washington and elsewhere. Mr. Reagan was well known in Washington, where he served in the house and also in the senate. He had as his colleague in the senate Mr. Coke, and they were a picturesque pair, both being large, massive men physically, and very ponderous in their manner of speaking.

Mr. Reagan will be remembered more particularly because he was the last member of the confederate cabinet, and on his death all that body have passed away. He was postmaster general under Jefferson Davis, and was the only one of the cabinet who was captured with Jefferson Davis. He was confined for many months in the military prison at Fort Warren. He had many conferences with President Johnson, Secretary Seward, Henry Wilson, afterwards vice president; James Speed and others on the subject of reconstruction. In the light of the history of that period and of the years since, the wisdom of many of Mr. Reagan's suggestions is apparent. He wrote an open letter to the people of Texas advocating laws for the protection of negroes, which should grant them civil rights and limited political rights, with an educational qualification. His own people misconstrued his ideas, and he was retired from politics for several years, but was elected to congress in 1874, and for the two succeeding terms.

Mr. Reagan had many friends in public life in Washington, and old colleagues in the senate, like Morgan, of Alabama; Berry, of Arkansas; Gorman, of Maryland, and Bate, of Tenenssee, are profuse in their eulogies of his strong character.

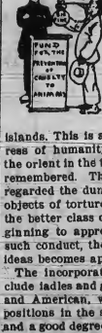
Wearers of the Gray.

WHILE the death of Reagan wiped out the members of Jefferson Davis' cabinet and the death of Senator Vest a few months ago took out of public life the last member of the confederate congress, there are still in the house and senate quite a coterie of public men who wore the gray and served with distinction in the confederate army. Nearly all of the southern states have representatives or senators in congress who were confederate soldiers. Alabama contributes in the senate two distinguished brigadier generals of the confederacy in the persons of Senators Pettus and Morgan. They both served in Alabama regiments and have been highly honored ever since.

From Arkansas comes the one-legged confederate veteran, Berry, while Florida furnishes two ex-confederate soldiers in Senators Mallory and Taliaferro. Senator Mallory saw service in both the confederate army and navy. He was a comparatively young man when the war broke out, but went into the war early, and near the close was appointed a midshipman in the confederate navy. Senator Bacon, of Georgia, served all through the war, most of the time as a captain on general staff duty. Senator Blackburn, of Kentucky, served throughout the war, as did Senator McCreary, of the same state. The latter attained the rank of lieutenant colonel of the Eleventh Kentucky cavalry.

Senator McEnery, of Louisiana, had his full share of the war, serving in the confederate army as a lieutenant. Money, of Mississippi, entered at the outbreak of the war, and continued in the army until 1864. Senator McLaurin, of the same state, enlisted as a private when only 16 years, old, which was in 1864, and served until the end of the war. Bate, of Tennessee, became a major general in the confederate army, and Daniel, of Virginia, had reached a majority when he was crippled by severe wounds in the battle of the Wilderness. His colleague, Martin, was a cadet at the Virginia military institute during the war, but spent a good deal of time in the military service in the confederacy with a battalion of cadets.

Veterans of the Mexican War.



WHILE the veterans of the civil war of both the confederate and federal armies are still found in public life doing splendid service, although 40 years have passed since the close of that conflict, they seem as boys, almost, compared with veterans of the Mexican war, which was waged nearly 60 years ago. And yet there are two veterans of that war who are doing full service in the United States senate and affording irrefutable argument against Dr. Osler's theory that man's greatest achievements occur before he is 40, and that men are useless at 60 and should be chloroformed. These two interesting characters are Senators Pettus, of Alabama, and Senator Bate, of Tennessee.

Senator Pettus will be 84 years of age on the 6th of next July, but is still hale and hearty and mentally and physically strong. He is only two removes from the revolutionary war, as his mother was a daughter of Capt. Anthony Winston, of Virginia, a famous revolutionary soldier. On the breaking out of the Mexican war, Mr. Pettus entered as a lieutenant and did valiant work. He came back from Mexico and just to show the stuff he was made of and the hardy life that men of that period delighted to live, he joined a party of his neighbors and rode on horseback to California. He was 40 years old when the civil war broke out, and entered the confederate army as a major, rising in rank to a brigadier general of infantry.

Senator William Brimage Bate, of Tennessee, will be 79 years of age next October. He was quite a young man when the Mexican war came on, but enlisted and served as a private throughout the whole contest in Louisiana and Tennessee regiments. He had a great record in the confederate army, which he entered as a private, rising to the rank of captain, colonel, brigadier general and major general. He was three times dangerously wounded, and surrendered with the army of the Tennessee in 1865.

Progress in the Philippines.

THE progress of American civilization in the Philippines is well exhibited by the enactment of a law by the Philippine commission authorizing the incorporation of the Society for the prevention of Cruelty to Animals in the Philippine islands. This is a long step in the progress of humanity, when the habits of the orient in the treatment of animals is remembered. The natives have always regarded the dumb brutes as legitimate objects of torture and abuse. Now that the better class of these natives are beginning to appreciate the barbarity of such conduct, the advance of American ideas becomes apparent.

The incorporators of the society include ladies and gentlemen, both native and American, who occupy prominent positions in the social life of Manila, and a good degree of authority has been granted them in order to further the objects of the society. The organization is authorized to appoint five agents in the city of Manila and two in each province of the archipelago, who shall have full police authority to make arrests for violations of the laws enacted for the prevention of cruelty to animals, and they can also call upon the regular police force to aid in enforcing the law.

The society is required to make a full annual report of its transactions to the governor general each year, and shall maintain a principal office in the city of Manila, but has authority to establish branch offices in other parts of the island. One half of the fines imposed are collected through the efforts of the society shall belong to it, and be used to further its objects. The diligent application of the laws is expected to be productive of considerable revenue at first, as there will be no lack of material on which to work.

Train Kills Coyotes.

The recent chase of a wolf by a train on the Cheyenne & Northern railroad north of Cheyenne was discounted near here when engine 1657, hauling a special fast freight, ran down and killed two coyotes. The animals were trotting along on the track over a section of the country that was deep in snow. At the approach of the train the coyotes attempted to jump from the track, but the high banks of snow prevented this, so they tried to run away from the iron horse. For over six miles the race continued before the coyotes were run down and killed.—Denver Republican.

Superseding the Silkworm.

A plant which grows in Peru bears pods enclosing silk fibre, which is said to be superior to that of the silk worm. It is perennial, grows wild, and attains a height of three or four feet. The seed is small and easily separated from the fibre. The stem of the plant also contains a fibre, the material woven from which is superior in strength and beauty to the finest linen.

Two Pictures of the Time.

Italy and Switzerland shaking hands over a great engineering feat which is to benefit mankind for generations is a picture much more fitting in the twentieth century than Russia and Japan springing at each other's throats over a pile of bloody corpses. The contrast between the two pictures ought to have its due effect.—Baltimore American.

Told by the Fingers.

If when the hand is open, the first and second fingers are further apart than the rest, independence of thought is indicated; if the third and fourth are widest, independence of action is shown. If both are equally apart, originality and self-reliance may be taken as the leading characteristics of the owner of the hand.

"Picnic" in a Gasometer.

A number of the Newbury civic dignitaries took tea in a new gasholder which has just been added to the municipal gasworks. They had to be lowered into the steel tank by means of a powerful crane, to which was attached a wooden carriage. Congratulatory speeches were made and toasts drunk.

An Exposure.

A lawyer, pleading the case of an infant plaintiff, took the child, suffused with tears, in his arms, and presented it to the jury. This had a great effect until the lawyer of the opposite side asked what made him cry. "He pinched me," answered the little innocent.

Error in Bond Making.

It was a New York house that printed the bonds for the recent Japanese loan. The London banks that issued the bonds are said to have discovered a curious error in them. A number of the £200 bonds have different amounts in the water mark and in the text.

Irresistible.

"There's no resisting that fellow Jones."

"What's he up to now?"

"Bought his wife an automobile and coaxed an insurance company into issuing a policy on her life."—Atlanta Constitution.

Musical Fish.

Lake Batticaloa, Ceylon, has the probably unique distinction of being the home of a musical fish. The sounds emitted by these are said to be as sweet and melodious as those which can be produced by a series of aeolian harps.

An Ex-Sheriff Talks.

Scott City, Kan., March 20th.—(Special)—Almost every newspaper tells of cures of the most deadly of kidney diseases by Dodd's Kidney Pills. Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Rheumatism and Bladder troubles, in fact any disease that is of the kidneys or caused by disordered kidneys is readily cured by this great American remedy.

But it is in curing the earlier stages of kidney complaint that Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing their greatest work. They are preventing thousands of cases of Bright's disease and other deadly ailments by curing Kidney Disease when it first shows its presence in the body.

Speaking of this work Ex-Sheriff James Scott of Scott County, says:

"I have used eight boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and must say that they are just the thing for Kidney Disease. We have tried many kidney medicines but Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best of all."

WOMEN NOT TRUTHFUL

This Statement Has Been Unjustly Made, Because Modest Women Evade Questions Asked By Male Physicians.

An eminent physician says that "Women are not truthful; they will lie to their physician." This statement should be qualified; women do tell the truth, but not the whole truth, to a male physician, but this is only in regard to those painful and troublesome disorders peculiar to their sex.

There can be no more terrible ordeal to a delicate, sensitive, refined woman than to be obliged to answer certain questions when those questions are asked, even by her family physician. This is especially the case with unmarried women.

Is it any wonder, then, that women continue to suffer and that doctors fail to cure female diseases when they cannot get the proper information to work on?

This is the reason why thousands and thousands of women are now corresponding with Mrs. Pinkham. To her they can and do give every symptom, so that she really knows more about the true condition of her patients, through her correspondence with them than the physician who personally questions them.

If you suffer from any form of trouble peculiar to women, write at once to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., and she will advise you free of charge.

The fact that this great boon, which is extended freely to women by Mrs. Pinkham, is appreciated, the thousands of letters received by her prove. Many such grateful letters as the following are constantly pouring in.

Ask Mrs. Pinkham's Advice—A Woman Best Understands A Woman's Ills.

Mrs. Ella Lee, Frankford, Ind., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I want to thank you for what your medicine has done for me.

"Three years ago I had inflammation of the ovaries and ulceration on my womb. I was under the doctor's care for about three months, and the only time I was not in pain was when under the influence of morphine. The doctor finally said I never would be better, and I did be an invalid the rest of my life. I had given up in despair, but one day I read across one of your advertisements and decided to write you for advice. I did so and commenced to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I began to improve at once, and to-day I am a well woman, and I know it is all due to your advice and medicine.

Mrs. J. H. Farmer of 2309 Elliott Avenue, St. Louis, Mo., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I cannot thank you enough for what your advice and medicines have done for me. They have done me more good than all the doctors I ever had.

"For the last eight years I have suffered with female troubles; was very weak; had nervous prostration, and could not do my work; but I am happy to say Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made a different woman of me. I am in perfect health and have gained in weight from 98 pounds to 122 pounds."

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record for actual cures of female ills as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

A Pleasant Day Spent in Walton.

Quite a delegation of Burlingtonites visited Walton, last Saturday to attend the sale of the personal estate of the late J. A. Sanders, which brought together a large crowd of people. Tony Bentler was the auctioneer, and pushed the sale along rapidly. The administrator, James W. Cleek, had everything well arranged for the sale and there were no unnecessary delay at anytime. About everything that a farmer needs with which to conduct his business, was found in the list of property sold, and the excellent condition in which Mr. Sanders had kept his farm implements was noticed by all present. Bidding was brisk, good prices prevailed, and the sale was through with shortly after one o'clock. Horses brought $107, $128 and $160.

Upon arriving in Walton the horse and buggy were left in charge of Allphin & Hume's equine parlor, which is looked after by Alva Bruce, an erst-while Burlingtonite, and a start was made to see something of the metropolis of Boone county. Prof. Dickey was about the first acquaintance the RECORDER met, and he was suggesting that a visit be made to the town's temple of learning, when Joe Reed was sighted gliding along on the opposite side of the street. Joe was hailed, and was soon seeking information about every man, woman and child in Burlington, and avering how delighted he would be to meet them all once more. Joe's old friends, wheresoever located, will be pleased to hear that he is carrying his age well, is the genial companion of yore and still entertains hopes that at sometime in the future he will be the monarch of a fireside that he can call his own.

Complying with Prof. Dickey's request the Graded School building was visited, and viewed from base ment to garret. It is a commodious, well equipped educational structure, one of which much more pretentious cities than Walton could be justly proud. Prof. Dickey is at the head of the faculty and has succeeded in building up a school that is the pride of the town, and is doing a great work toward increasing its population bringing to it a class of most excellent citizens. Walton made a ten-strike when it invested in its Graded School building, and the trustees made no mistake when they secured the services of Prof. Dickey.

The next place visited was the feed store of R. B. Huey & Co. Mr. Huey was in charge and reported business very good. He is a recent acquisition to the town, and the people recognize in him one of the best citizens, and time will prove the correctness of their estimate. From the feed store to the place of the public sale was a walk of only a few minutes. The crowd was about all in, and among those present were W. N. Hind, and Prof. A. C. Collins, of Covington, and Geo. W. Sleet, of Crittenden, Grant county. Mr. Hind makes frequent visits to Walton, his old home, and keeps in touch with her people, among whom his mother, Mrs. Ruth Hind, makes her home. Mr. Hind is prominent in Covington politics, and will be mayor of that city some time. Prof. Collins, a Boone county product, is prominent in Covington educational circles and is principal of one of the city schools. Andy has a host of friends in this county, who are glad to hear of his success. Geo. Sleet was a very busy man, hunting his old friends and giving them the glad hand. He is farming on an extensive scale, and owns a large tract of very fine land in Grant county, which has increased very much in value since he bought it. He stays closely at home, keeping an eye on his business interests.

Dropping in at T. F. Curley's, the veteran drygoods merchant of the town, he was found busy as he could be, but had time in which to speak a few words in praise of his town, but this is a characteristic of every citizen of the place, as everyone believes in his town and takes a pride in speaking of its advantages whenever an occasion is presented.

At the Clay House, the clever H. C. Diers proprietor, the inner man was refreshed at noon. Mr. and Mrs. Diers and their daughter are very attentive to their guests, and command their share of the hotel trade that comes to the town. Directly after dinner a call was made at A. W. Smith's drugstore. He carries in stock everything found in a first-class drugstore. He is assisted by Mason Howard. They have a good and constantly increasing trade, and they never impose on a customer neither as to the price nor the quality of the goods sold. A. W. is an ex-Burlingtonian and a first class druggist.

Up a flight of stairs (not the best, however), and through a hall, and a cordial welcome to the room of Attorney F. E. Curley was received. Mr. Curley was preparing his case for the January term of circuit court, which was to come in which to make a friend glad he had called. Having decided to make his home among the people where he was raised, Mr. Curley is giving his professional business close attention, and he says its increase is very satisfactory. Mr. J. C. Tomlin is the other resident attorney, and has made a great success of his profession as well as along other lines of business. He now has under construction, what, when completed, will be about the finest residence in the county It will be up-to-date in every particular, and will make a home that will be a beauty and a joy forever. It ranks as the finest house in Walton.

The citizens of Walton are thoroughly imbued with the spirit of improvement, and are bringing their town to the front at a rapid gait, making it one of the best country towns in Northern Kentucky. Walton has struck a pace that is too fast for any of her neighbors, and they can only stand off and witness her progress.

Among those who made the RECORDER glad it visited the town, last Saturday, were David Hicks, Sam C. Johnson, L. F. Wolfe and A. W. Smith. The Burlington delegation in Walton, last Saturday, consisted of B. W. Adams, Tony Bentler, B. B. Allphin, J. M. Eddins, J. L. Clore, J. A. Duncan and this writer.

The saddle horse in a four horse team driven to a sled, last Thursday, by Pink Rice, of Idlewild neighborhood, broke one of its fore legs and was shot shortly afterwards to put it out of its misery. The team was traveling along on perfectly smooth ground when Mr. Rice heard something pop, which he supposed resulted from the horse striking a front shoe with one of his hind feet, but the horse stopped and an examination showed the bone was broken above the knee. There was no load on the slide at the time, and what caused the accident is a mystery. During the oats harvest, last year, a fine colt belonging to Ed Rice, got one of its legs broken and had to be killed.

Incredible Brutality.

It would have been incredible brutality if Chas. F. Lemberger, of Syracuse, N. Y., had not done the best he could for his suffering son. Hoosier Disk Drill-Drop Corn Planter.

THIS HOOSIER PLANTER is termed a Drill Drop Planter (or, by some styled cumulative drop) from the fact that when in operation the feed plates run continuously, drop one grain at a time to a valve and collecting the grains on the valve until a sufficient number is collected for a hill, when the valve is opened either by a wire check rower or hand lever, and the grains dropped into the furrow. When desiring to drill corn, the valve is simply held open, [illegible] grains drop to the ground. It has 1¼-inch cold rolled steel axle and extra strong wheels with large heavy hubs and spokes; these wheels being supplied with concave or open tires, as desired. The double disks are made from special steel which insures perfect scouring. Both hand and foot levers can be used to raise or lower the disks. Spring device used for connecting front frame to rear frame; admits of heavy pressure on furrows and allows them to raise up in passing over obstructions, and also relieves weight on tongue. Feed thrown out of gear when disks are raised. Foot drop attachment enables operator to finish end rows without help. Pivoted marker with [illegible]eable head. Tip-over corn hoppers. Compressed Oil cups located over chilled cone disk bearings. Easily reached and turned with the fingers.

Supplied with one set of plates with holes for large corn and one for small corn. Change of distance and change of number of grains required for a hill, made by changing speed of feed rod. With the three sizes of sprocket wheels on axle and feed rod, grains can be dropped nine different distances, or the number of grains in a hill can be varied to suit. Corn may be drilled either 10, 13, 14, 15, 17, 18, 20, 24 or 26 inches apart, or the number of grains may be varied from 1 to 5.

Proper Treatment of Pneumonia.

Pneumonia is too dangerous a disease for anyone to attempt to doctor himself, although he may have the proper remedies at hand A physician should always be called. It should be borne in mind, however, that pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of the grip, and by the proper treatment of these diseases a threatened attack of pneumonia may be warded off. There is no question whatever about this, as during the thirty years and more that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been ussd, we have yet to learn of a single case of a cold or attack of the grip having resulted in pneumonia when this remedy was used. It is also used by physicians in the treatment of pneumonia with the best results. Dr. W. J. Smith, of Sanders, Ala., who is also a druggist, says of it: "I have been selling Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and prescribing it in my practice for the past six years. LORD CHARLES BERESFORD.

St. Louis, March 27.—After spending several hours inspecting St. Louis, part of the program being a walk through the business section, Lord Charles Beresford, vice admiral of the British channel squadron, departed for Texas and old Mexico.

Lord Beresford, accompanied by Bourke Cockran and Mr. and Mrs. B. S. Guiness, of New York, arrived in St. Louis Sunday morning. While here Lord Beresford gave interviews to several newspaper men, commenting on the Russian-Japanese war, which, he believes, will end before very long.

Steel Corporation to Increase Wages.

Pittsburg, March 27.—Officials of the United States Steel Corporation are reported to have completed all plans preparatory to making the announcement of a sweeping wage increase, to go into effect April 1.

The amount of the increase is not known at present; but it is stated that, with the exception of the tonnage men in the steel mills, all other employes will receive the full amount of the former reduction. The total increase for the year will, it is said, approximate $9,000,000. The advance will affect 30,000 workmen in this district.

Aerial Navigation Solved.

San Francisco, March 27.—Prof. Montgomery, of Santa Clara college, is declared to have invented a new aeroplane which has made several successful flights, being guided at will by the aeronaut without the sustaining aid of a balloon.

MISS BULL RECOVERS

FEARFUL DECLINE OF STRENGTH COMPLETELY ARRESTED.

Medical Skill Had Almost Exhausted Itself in Vain Attempts to Relieve Her—A Remarkable Result.

The recovery of Miss Gertrude L. Bull is of great interest to the medical world. A very bad cough followed a severe attack of pneumonia. It seemed impossible to break it up or to restore her strength, which had been sadly undermined. In spite of the best efforts of the doctors and the use of several advertised modes of treatment her condition daily grew more serious. She finally discontinued all medicine and gave herself up to despair.

"What was your condition at this time?" she was asked.

"My stomach was so weak I could not keep food down. I suffered from constant nausea. My kidneys were in terrible condition. My feet and ankles were swollen so badly that it pained me even to stand on them. I was very bilious. My heart was in bad shape so I could not go up and down stairs or stand any exertion or sleep in a natural position."

"It seems a wonder that you should ever have recovered. How did it happen?"

"You may well call it a marvel, but Dr. Williams' Pink Pills wrought it. None of my friends thought I could live many months longer. My parents had no hope. Just then a pamphlet advertising Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People was thrown in our door. It was a great event for me. These pills saved me from the grave. Within a week from the time I began to take them I felt better; and in three months I was entirely well. I cannot praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills [illegible] and [illegible] hope that my experience may bring good to some other sufferers."

Miss Bull, who was so remarkably cured, resides at Union Grove, Illinois. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills act immediately on the blood, purifying and enriching it. In all debilitating diseases, such as lung troubles, grip, fevers, and in all cases in which the system is thoroughly run down, these pills perform wonders. They are sold by all druggists throughout the world. A valuable booklet on diseases of the blood, will be sent free to any one who applies for it to Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

A 480 ACRE FARM YIELDS 25 PER CENT. PROFIT A YEAR.

What a Mercer County (Ohio) Farmer Received from One Year's Crop.

Extracts from an interesting letter from P. H. Rynhard, of Starbuck, Manitoba, Canada, gives an excellent idea of the prosperity of those who have gone from the United States to Canada. He says:

"I bought, August, 1903, 480 acres of land, paying $12,000 for it. We threshed 2,973 bushels of wheat and between 1,200 and 1,300 bushels of oats and barley from 200 acres. But part of the wheat went down before filling, and was not harvested except for hay. The crop was worth at threshing time $3,000. Besides 120 acres laying idle, except a timothy meadow, which is not included in this estimate. Counting the value of the product and the increase of value of land will pay me more than 25 per cent. on the investment. Two brothers in the same neighborhood bought 160 acres each six years ago. They have not done a single thing to this land except to fence it and break and cultivate about one-half of it. Harvested last year 28 bushels wheat per acre. This year 27 bushels per acre. They can get any day $25 per acre. These are only a few of many hundreds of such chances. It looks like boasting, but truth is justifiable, and the world ought to know it, especially the home-seeker. I know of quite a few farmers that have made fortunes in from 10 to 20 years, retired with from $20,000 to $100,000.

Writing concerning another district in the Canadian West, S. L. Short says:

"Dear Sir—I have to inform you that I have just returned from the Carrot River Country in Saskatchewan, where I located land of the very finest black vegetable loam, which I am proud of, and will move in the spring. Farmers are still plowing there. A mild climate and beautiful country to behold. Cattle are fat and running outside. Wood and water good. Saw oats weighing 42 pounds to bushel. Potatoes large and well ripened; also wheat that brought there 82 cents. The country exceeded my expectations. Saw oats in stock, thicker on the ground than appears in many of the illustrations sent out in descriptive pamphlets. I have been in many western states, but the soil excels any I ever saw."

THE OPERATIONS OF THE PACKING COMBINE

CONDITIONS THAT HAVE MADE ITS REMARKABLE GROWTH POSSIBLE.

PART OF THE REFRIGERATOR CAR LINES.

BY CAMERON LANDON.

This is a page from the Arabian Nights tales, with Aladdin outdone; the story of the rise of the Armours, the Swifts, and the Cudahys—the Armours from the farm barn yard near Stockbridge, N. Y., the Swifts from the killing pen of a butcher shop in Barnstable, Mass., the Cudahys from the peat bogs at Callan, in county Kilkenny, in Ireland, to the height of an ability to organize an industrial combine with capitalization of $200,000,000.

Less than half a century has seen the comparative poverty of the beef truet magnates transformed to an opulence beyond the dream of king or courtier of a ——.

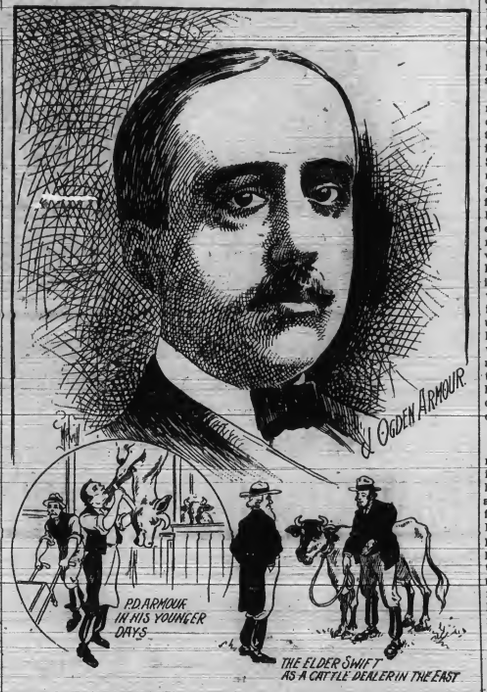
In 1866 the packing industry in Chicago, which the giant intellects of Gustavus F. Swift, now dead, of Philip D. Armour, now dead, and of Michael Cudahy have developed to the industrial mammoth of the present, had its small beginning in the slaughter of 613 head of cattle.

A Billion-Dollar Business.

In 1904 the product of the beef truet amounted to over a billion dollars. In 1903 the combination slaughtered 5,521,697 head of cattle.

So well laid were the plans of the founders of this monopoly that it has gained a momentum beyond the power of its heads to control; the ever growing stream of its immense profits pours in upon the beef trust from sources which are so resistless that the downfall of Standard Oil supremacy among trusts seeme certain.

Founders of the Trust.



It le a tribute well earned by Gustavus F. Swift and Philip D. Armour to say they were the founders of the present beef combine; that Michael Cudahy was a powerful aide-de-campand that Nelson Morris, George H. Hammond and others of the Cudahy brothers had been able for the fruits of California, because the beef trust owns the refrigerator cars necessary to move that fruit. It names the price for the cotton grower of the south at which he may sell his product because the cotton grower is dependent on the beef trust for fertilizer for his plantation or his ten acre field. The fruit growers of New York state and of Texas, of Colorado and of Cuba look to Chicago for the figures by which to determine their prices, and by the refrigerator car rates hundreds of producere have been made and hundreds have been ruined.

Public at Its Mercy.

The most serious blow to the industries of the American people lies in the ability of the beef trust to fix the prices of the products of the ranchman and the farmer, throughout every state and terriory of the United States, the price of hogs, cattle, and sheep, and consequently the price of wheat, corn and oats. Thie blow is aimed at every home and every merchant of the hamlets, towns and cities, for the old days of competition have been relegated to the past by the big packing interests. The empire of the great Chicago combine defies the law and has the public at its mercy. At every turn of the wheel it grows stronger and greater, more insidious and more far-reaching. The beef trust owns steam and electric railroads, it owns factories, stockyards, mills, warehouses, elevators, and the statement was recently made that it also owned politicians, legislators and congressmen.

Colossal Achievements.

Swift Bros. & Co. established its main slaughter house in Chicago, and established branch houses in New York, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, New Hampshire. The annual business of Swift & Co., when the combine is said to have assistants. The great advantage of the combine over the independent packers was, like that of the Standard Oil company, rebates from railroads which gave them immense profits when others were doing business at a loss. The grip of the beef trust is upon so many more people and affects the three meals per day of all of them so vitally that Standard Oil empire is likely to be outdone unless the present federal inquiry and the recent decision of the United States supreme court sustaining Judge Grosscup's injunction against truet methode results in the enforcement of the laws of the land.

The Standard Oil company deals in oil and its products, and its profits are a menace to the independence of the American people. The beef trust goes into far more homes and names the price, not only for the fresh meat, the salt meat and the smoked meat, for the lard, the glue, the hides, the fertilisers, all the products of the beef and hog "but the squeal," but it also fixes the prices organized, was $200,000,000, and the value of its capital stock was accepted at $75,000,000. It has branch houses all over the east and west, and in Europe. It has packing houses in St. Paul, Kansas City, St. Joseph, St. Louis and other cities. The death of Gustavus Swift and Philip D. Armour did not take place until both men had seen the results of their achievements in mammoth packing plants, and ledger figures of millions. The control of the business is virtually now in the hands of J. Ogden Armour, who began work for his father at $10 a week as clerk, and who now is the dominant factor in meats, grains, fruits and dairy products in the United States.

A Chapter of Beginnings.

Only America can furnish examples of such personal achievements as the life stories of Swift, Armour and the Cudahy brothers disclosed. Sandwich, Mass., is a small town, and Gustavus Swift's parental home near there was a stony and unprofitable farm. When he was born, June 24, 1839, there seemed no prospect for the child but to live the prosaic life of a farmer, such as his father and his father's father had been. He grubbed amongs the stumps and the stones and fought with nature for a meager crop until he was 22 years old. Then he moved to Barnstable, full of confidence that the ability he had shown in buying and selling cattle, and swapping horses would yield him a better living than he could expect from farming in New England. He bought cattle at Barnstable, gradually branching out to Brighton and Watertown, and later to Albany. In 1869 he discovered there was more money in western cattle; then he moved to Brighton, thence to Clinton, in Massachusetts. His dealings had been small, and his field had been limited, when he moved to Chicago in 1875. Neither he nor anyone else guessed his latent genius for large affairs, for organizing and constructing, which in a very few years in Chicago had become conspicuous by growth of business until his reputation was national.

Philip D. Armour, who started life as a blithe and barefooted country boy in New York state, went to Milwaukee when he took Horace Greeley's advice to young men to go west. A brother, Herman O. Armour, had a grain commission business there, and to this in 1868 the industry of hog packing was added. Joeeph F. Armour, the younger brother of Philip, was in charge, and it was owing to his failing health that Philip D. moved to Chicago in 1875. He had become familiar with every detail of pork packing, and had himself done all phases of it.

Back in the fifties there was a potter at Callan, Ireland, by name Patrick Cudahy, whose four boys ran barefoot most the time, and who begged for fresh meat as a luxury. This family of Patrick Cudahy came to America in the steerage, with their carpet bags and slender purses, in 1849, and settled at Milwaukee. Michael Cudahy was old enough to do chores around the slaughter houses where his father found employment, and by attending school in spare hours he acquired a simple education, which he always improved upon later, when he had opportunity. When he was 19 he went to work in a packing house, and at 25 he went into business for himself as a retail butcher. But Plankington & Armour offered him charge of their packing plant, which was worth perhaps $35,000—considerable in those days, a mere bagatelle in these days of big trusts. His success as manager brought out an offer from P. D. Armour in 1873 for Cudahy to become a partner in Armour & Co. He did so, and for 20 years had the practical management of the stockyards end of the business. He wae rich, both in money and in good will of Mr. Armour, and in reputation, when he established the Cudahy Packing company, which was taken into the merger at a valuation of $15,000,000.

Trust Magnates Live Simple Life.

All through their lives both Gusatavus Swift and P. D. Armour retained the simple habits of their youth, of early rising, and of going to bed early. With all their wealth they cared little for society and were rarely seen. Both men, but particularly Armour, were very approachable by any of their men, ready in sympathy and prompt to assist in times of trouble.

The business of the Swifts descended to Edward C. Swift and L. F. Swift, but J. Ogden Armour, the only surviving son of P. D. Armour, is the nominal and practical head of the packing interests. Like his father, he is simple in his taste and without aristocracy or snobbisness, as genial and unaffected with an underling as with a head of a department.

What the profits of the beef trust are cannot be estimated, although Commissioner of Commerce Garfield, in his report to congress, after investigation of the beef trust, gave them at 99 cents a head for every creature killed. This did not take into consideration the rebates paid to the railroad, which rebates are still matters for proof. Even J. Ogden Armour declared he did not know how much they were, and his statement is not questioned.

Present Leaders of the Beef Trust.

Whatever may be said in denunciation of the system of the beef trust, no charges are made of lack of integrity, or truthfulness, or of immorality against J. Ogden Armour. The operations of the trusts have impoverished farmers and stockmen, have broken banks, have precipitated strikes, and have caused suicides, have ruined towns and cities, but the personality of J. Ogden Armour is that of an interesting, manly and fine type of American manhood. At his suggestion railroads may dismiss the general manager, and commission merchants may be blacklisted and ruined, for the beef trust is insatiable and remorseless, but J. Ogden Armour is respected and cordially liked by the employes who know him, and although he is hated in Wall street, among his friends and business associations, and fellow members of his clubs, he is popular and a companion eagerly sought for.

Less is known of the head of the Swift & Co. corporation than of the Armours, because Lonis F. Swift's home has always been in Boston. He is more reticent and exclusive than J. Ogden Armour. Living within a few miles of the birthplace of Gustavus F. Swift, he lives in a mansion which costs a fortune, while the farmhouse in which his father was born, which still stands, is small and devoid of all modern comforts. He rides in automobiles; his father, as a boy, drove a butcher wagon. His income and resources are like those of an emperor of the east; his father grubbed a meager living from his farm.

J. Ogden Armour has a home on Michigan avenue which cost $125,000. His wife is a beautiful woman, and a society leader, who takes much interest in outdoor sports and driving, who in an unassuming and modest way is liberal in her charities. At Oconomowoc, Wis., they have a summer home which is said to be one of the most complete in the country in equipgage and comfort.

Remarkable Display of Genius.

The story of how the present gigantic power of the beef trust was born and nurtured has its beginning in the character and personal achievements of Gustavus Swift. However much P. D. Armour contributed of sagacity and energetic constructiveness, the present condition of supremacy of the beef trust and of subservience of the railroads, the fruit growers, the farmers and the stock raisers of the United States would never have come about but for the rawboned, money-loving Yankee, Swift the elder. An idea that was his and to which he clung with the tenacity of an inventor, and upon which he staked his all, brought it to pass.

We have said that Gustavus Swift left the cattle buying business in Brighton and other Massachusetts towns when he discovered how superior western cattle were over those of the east, and how much more money there was for him in dealing in westerns.

Although he later gave evidence of the innate genius for organization and money making, he had not up to his removal to Chicago been successful except in a very small way. Utmost frugality and incessant attention to business had given him a slender bank account.

The First Refrigerator Cars.

Nelson Morris, who was rated as one of the "cattle kings" in the Chicago yards even then, had been experimenting with the shipment of meats in box cars packed with ice. These experiments had been very crude and not entirely satisfactory to Morris, but Swift had watched them with keen interest. He seemed to have a prophetic vision of the present day. He could see that if meats could be shipped east dressed there would be a great saving over the method of the day, shipping live cattle, "beef on the hoof." He realized that the beef business would surely grow and that the economy of the new method would mean a great deal of money. He formed a determination which later discouragements showed nothing could break to succeed in shipping dressed beef.

About that time an inventor by the name of Tiffany had invented and patented a refrigerator car which promised to be successful. He tried to get backing, and Morris refused it. Gustavus Swift, practically unknown, asked the railroads to furnish some of those cars and he would furnish the dressed beef for the east. The railroads refused. To build and own such cars would take several thousand dollars, and Swift could not well spare it from his business, which was growing so fast that it kept him cramped for capital. His associates in the packing business told him he would "go broke" if he put any money into the Tiffany cars, but he risked failure and consequent ruin, and plunged in, having three cars built. The railroads were to haul these cars, and Swift had no thought of asking pay for the mileage traveled by his cars. He was satisfied to have the advantage over competitors of owning and shipping in refrigerated cars.

Growth of Private Car Line Evil.

When the trial of the cars had become more than an experiment Swift realized it was a success, and as fast as he could he had more of them built. Morris, too, and others at the Chicago yards had refrigerator cars constructed for them. Dressed beef could be shipped to eastern points at such a great saving over shipping live cattle that there was a saving to consumers, which stimulated the demand for dressed beef, and a big profit for the packers. The refrigerator cars had come to stay, and Gustavus Swift managed to maintain the lead he had secured by his nerve and faith in the experiment.

The various packers during the seventies found that success or failure depended on whether they had refrigerator cars. They were content to keep within the legitimate advantages and profits of the meat trade, but the smaller packers were soon put to death by the big ones who had the refrigerator lines to club them with.

The fact that the refrigerator cars were first used by the Chicago packing houses is one of the great reasons for the great growth of the Chicago livestock and packing business which centralizes the beef trust of the present at Chicago.

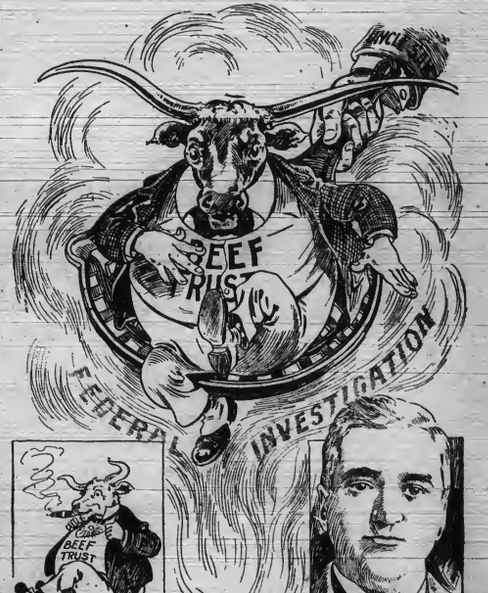
This explains the growth of the refrigerator lines until there are in operation 54,000 cars for which every railroad pays mileage, and which the Armours-Swifts-Cudahys own or control, from which they derive an enormous annual revenue.

It is the ownership of these refrigerator cars which has put the price of fruits and vegetables for the fables of the American people up 10 to 25 per cent. in cost.

Railroads Held Up.

It is the ownership of the meat business of the country which enables the beef trust, the favored few, to dictate to the railroads and make them pay for the use of the cars and act as agents for the car line owners in holding up the shippers of freight for the mileage of three-quarters of a cent a mile east of Chicago, except in Canada, where it is one cent, and one cent a mile west of Chicago. The railroads dare not protest, for when they do the beef trust says in a menacing voice that it will give the protesting railroad no more of its freight. The tonnage shipped by the beef trust is enormous, and no railroad dares contemplate getting out of the good graces of such a shipper. One can easily see that with 54,000 cars traveling the iron highways of the country daily the mileage would be a great big income on the investment. The actual figures, as shown by interstate commerce reports, are that these cars earn at least 25 per cent.

The Fruit Trust.



It is the ownership of these refrigerator cars which has given the beef trust right to claim the title of fruit trust also; the fruit business is wholly at its mercy. When the fruit shipper of California or Tennessee has a carload of oranges or strawberries to ship, he calls for a car, and by the terms of the beef trust the railroad cannot do else than send for a trust car, which rolls down from Chicago, earning mileage at every click of the wheels, and into this car the fruit is loaded. At the destination the consignee pays the freight and also the bill of the beef trust for the mileage, and also another bill for "icing" the car. When the refrigerator cars were first used there was no "icing" charge made; for instance for the Michigan peaches sent to Boston. When the idea was originated of charging for icing the charge was fixed at $20 for the trip. Later it was advanced to $30, and now the icing of a car costs $45, about the same as the freight. There are instances where the charge for icing and for mileage is greater than the tariff freight. But the railroads are bound to collect the trust's charges, fight to get them, go into courts at the railroads' expense to get them, if need be. The railroads are absolutely mastered by the beef trust, partly for the reason that there are large railroad interests in the hands of the beef trust magnates and they make the other stockholders of the railroads suffer that they may get the rake off.

At the Throats of the Railroads.

The packers have been at the throats of the railroads since the early eighties, when the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad built to Kansas City and Omaha, and to secure the meat business offered to pay a mileage charge for the use of the packers' refrigerator cars. This was an offer which the other Missouri river railroads had soon to follow, and thus was the mileage "graft" saddled upon the railroads of the country.

There was a time when the California Fruit Transportation company was supreme in the California fruit trade. But the Armour interest got a contract with one of the two great fruit shipping houses by promising that house $10 a car rebate on every car of fruit; then the Swifts bought the rival concern, which by reason of the decline of its business as result of the Armour inroad had gone to smash, and then by a quiet mutual agreement the Swifts and Armours had things their own way.

The contracts with the railroads require of the roads that they use no other refrigerator cars than those of the beef trust, called by 20 different names; they require that the cars shall be returned as speedily as possible, and in fact the railroads give the preference to the beef trust cars over their own few refrigerator cars. The minimum loading weight is as low as possible, so that the shipments shall require as many refrigerator cars as possible, with consequent increase in the mileage.

Because the liver is neglected people suffer with constipation, biliousness, headaches and fevers. Colds attack the lungs and contagious diseases take hold of the system. It is safe to say that if the liver were always kept in proper working order, illness would be almost unknown.

Thedford's Black-Draught is so successful in curing such sickness because it is without a rival as a liver regulator. This great family medicine is not a strong and drastic drug, but a mild and healthful laxative that cures constipation and may be taken by a mere child without possible harm.

The healthful action on the liver cures biliousness. It has an invigorating effect on the kidneys. Because the liver and kidneys do not work regularly, the poisonous acids along with the waste from the bowels get back into the blood and virulent contagion results.

Timely treatment with Thedford's Black-Draught removes the dangers which lurk in constipation, liver and kidney troubles, and will positively forestall the inroads of Bright's disease, for which disease in advanced stages there is no cure. Ask your dealer for a 25c. package of Thedford's Black-Draught.

Its pleasant taste and prompt cures have made Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a favorite with the mothers of small children. The poultry business is assuming considerable proportions in this county, and every variety of chickens can be found among the farmers, there being a diversity of opinion as to which is the most profitable breed, each breed having its friends. The hen that is a regular producer of eggs is the one that proves the source of the greatest revenue, as eggs command a good price all the time, and occasionally a very high price for weeks.

The "oldest inhabitant" "feeses up that he never saw such weather in March as has favored us this year. It has been almost like summer. From now on there will be frequent searches of the record in the celebrated Boone County Bounty Fund suit, to find papers of those who were drafted during the civil war, and afterward filed their papers in that suit to avoid being assessed to assist in the payment of the Boone County Bounty Fund, the collectoin of which was defeated after a litigation that extended over years. The papers in the case make a voluminous record and are on file in the Circuit Clerk's office in Burlington.

Judge Thomas H. Paynter has formerly announced himself for the United States Senate to succeed Senator Josheph Blackburn, and it looks as though he would be successful. It is said that Judge Paynter will have the support of Gov. Beckham. If he is elected to the Senate there will be a vacancy on the appellate bench, and the Democrats of the district are looking upon Judge John M. Lassing, circuit judge of this district, as his successor. Judge Lassing has proven himself one of the leading jurists in the State, and the ermine of the appellate court in him would adorn the shoulders of a fine lawyer, a profound thinker and able judge. He would have the Sixth Congressional district solidly supporting him, and with the friends he has all over the appellate district, it would be a very difficult matter to defeat him.—Carrollton News.

A Colored Wedding Pulled off at the Court House.

County Clerk Adams had been away from his office but a few minutes last Thursday for the noon hour, when three buggies, each containing a couple of colored people, drew up in front of the court house, one couple, Chester Utz and Isabelle Hedges, on matrimony bent. The clerk was soon located and informed of the important business that demanded his attention at his office. Hastening to his office he was requested to issue a license authorizing the marriage of the above named couple It took but a short time to comply with the request. The services of some one authorized to solemnize the rites of matrimony was then in demand, and Judge Conon being the only person in town that could officiate he was soon on the scene where County Clerk Adams had placed the bride and groom in position to receive the solemn ceremony. In a brief but impressive ceremony the Judge made the two one, and started Mr. and Mrs. Utz in life with his blessings. As both the Judge and the Clerk are claiming it is his exclusive privilege to kiss the bride, they compromised by omitting that part of the ceremony, and the bride who is married by the Judge in the presence of the Clerk is always neglected to that extent.

Next Monday, was until the last ten or fifteen years, known as the annual horse show day in Boone county. On that day a very large crowd of the admirers of fine horses would assemble in Burlington, and some times as many as twenty-five or thirty fine horses would be brought out on the street, where they would be surrounded by the crowd and their good points discussed for an hour or two. Occasionally a speed contest would develop and several horses take part in it, and some of the fastest horses ever in the county have been speeded on the street in Burlington, and very often excitement would run high during the contests. For several years past the April horse show has been confined to only a few horses, but this year it bids fair to be some better than for many years. Bring on your horses.

Startling Mortality.

Statistics show startling mortality, from appendicitis and peritonitis. To prevent and cure these awful diseases there is just one reliable remedy, Dr. King's New Life Pills. M. In the death of John W. Crigler, last Saturday afternoon, the Hebron neighborhood has lost one of its most valuable citizens. Slater, his pastor, at 10 a. m., last Monday.

Joseph Birkle and son have opened a blacksmith shop at Bullittsville. They are first-class mechanics and accommodating gentlemen, and the Recorder wishes them well.

THE HARGISES.

Given [illegible] on Application For Bail at Lexington.

Lexington, Ky., March 21.—The case of the commonwealth against James, Alex and Elbert Hargis and Ed Callahan on motion for bail opened here with the courthouse packed with people, many coming here from surrounding cities and counties.

The phase of the case on trial at this time is merely a partial hearing for the court to decide whether they are entitled to bail pending trial for the killing of Jas. Cockrill in Breathitt county three years ago.

In late testimony Monday Mose Feltner, author, of recent sensational deposition in Breathitt cases, made a sensational statement that on one occasion prior to the death of Cockrill he, Alex and James Hargis and Callahan were present in Hargis' store, and that the entire party spent considerable time discussing who should be killed first, Marcum or Cockrill. Shortly after this he said Cockrill was killed. He said he was acting in bad faith with the Hargises and told Marcum and Cockrill of the plot in order to save their lives. The statement created a sensation.

Lexington, Ky., March 22.—The second day of the hearing of the motion made by Judge Hargis and his associates for bail brought no material advantage to either side.

The star witness was Capt. B. J. Ewen, of Jackson, who testified that he had talked with Judge Hargis concerning the killing of James Cockrill before and after the deed, but in the hands of Attorney George R. Hunt, for the defense, he became confused.

Lexington, Ky., March 23.—The most interesting feature in the third day's proceedings on the motion for bail made by the Hargis brothers was the introduction of Senator Alex Hargis as a witness in his own behalf. This is the first time that Senator Hargis has been required to describe under oath the fact or circumstances, if any, of his connection with the killing of Jim Cockrill. His testimony created a profound impression. His story was told in so calm, dignified and straightforward a manner that no one appeared to doubt the truth of it. The impression created is favorable and the opinion of the public in this city is that he h[illegible] sinned against than sinning. He denied every material allegation made against him by the witnesses for the commonwealth, and his explanation of the various phases through which he passed in regard to the main issue were so clear and lucid that Attorney Byrd was met with numerous rebuffs in his efforts to break him down.

Lexington, Ky., March 24.—County Judge James Hargis, one of the defendants, followed Alex Hargis in the hearing for bail. Like his brother, he made a sweeping denial of all the important points brought out in the testimony of the prosecution against him and his alleged co-conspirators. He denied in toto the story "Anse" White told as to an attempt to get him to kill five men at one time as well as the story told about Jefferson Smith as to a plot to shoot Jim Cockrill. Almost the entire statement was negatory.

Lexington, Ky., March 25.—Testimony affecting the motion for bail for the Hargis brothers and Sheriff Ed Callahan, of Jackson, was concluded and the case submitted without argument late Friday.

Death in the Cabbage.

Paducah, Ky., March 27.—Three small children, the daughters of Mrs. Mary Brockwell, died after eating of poisoned cabbage at supper. The local detectives and police are at work on the case. Since the examination of the cabbage it is believed the children died from ptomaine poisoning. They are: Ola, aged 4 years; Lillie, aged 3 years, and Lucy, aged 9 years.

Has a Stable at Lexington.

Lexington, Ky., March 27.—Frank Marrin, known here as Judge Franklin Stone, of Philadelphia, who is accused of connection with the Storey Cotton Co.'s operations in Philadelphia, has a stable of five two-year-olds at the Lexington track under Trainer C. H. McCracken.

A New Trial For Curtis Jett.

Frankfort, Ky., March 27.—Curtis Jett, of Breathitt, who was convicted in Harrison county of murdering Jas. Cockrill and J. B. Marcum, receiving a death sentence for one and life imprisonment for the other, was given a new trial by the court of appeals.

May Lose Their Jobs.

Newport, Ky., March 25.—The anti-slot machine order of Mayor Helmbold will throw out of employment 20 extra bartenders and may have the effect of closing a number of the smaller saloons in Newport.

Horse Dashed Into a Window.

Lexington, Ky., March 27.—Becoming frightened at a passing street car, a horse being driven by J. T. Hughes, jr., in this city, dashed through the plate-glass window of Harding's jewelry store and inflicted damage to the extent of $2,000 or more.

Married Wealthy Young Woman.

Lancaster, Ky., March 24.—Dr. G. [illegible] Penn, cousin of Senator George [illegible] and Miss Mary Gill, one of the [illegible] women in the blue [illegible], were married here [illegible] for New Orleans.

A LOVERS' QUARREL.

Both May Die From Shots From a Revolver.

Somerset, Ky., March 27.—Death may place his seal upon the lives of two of this city's best-known young people and put a most dramatic close to what was, in its incipiency, merely a lovers' quarrel. Mack Tate called at the home of Miss Minerva Dobson, to whom he was affianced. Within a short time the two had a misunderstanding, which quickly ripened into a bitter quarrel. Stung to the quick by the hot words that had passed between them, the girl sprang to a table and, picking up a revolver, opened fire on her lover. The bullet passed through Tate's abdomen and is now lodged in his body.

Despite his serious wound, the young man grappled with his sweetheart and after a struggle wrenched the smoking gun from her. He then deliberately stepped back and opened fire on her, emptying the remaining contents of the revolver into her body. One shot shattered her right arm, another took effect in the other arm and the third pierced her head.

BIG LUMBER COMPANY.

It Owns 2,500 Acres of Coal and Lumber Land in Lee County.

Mt. Sterling, Ky., March 25.—Judge William C. Taylor, Bruce Taylor, of Frenchburg; J. Will Clay and M. C. Clay, of this city, have organized the Millers Creek Lumber Co. They have incorporated at $8,000 capital. The company owns 2,500 acres of fine coal and lumber lands in Lee county and will develop it at once. The main office will be in this city. FILLING THE WAR CHEST.

How a Spanish-American Revolution Was Financed with Bad Money.

"The ways of the South American republics are sure funny," exclaimed an old globe-trotter one day, glancing up from a copy of the Washington Star which contained the advices from New York setting forth the efforts of certain Spanish-American gentlemen to get the United States to buy stock in a revolutionary movement in Venezuela.

"Those people are plumb crazy on the subject of revolutions. They seem to think they can repair all sorts of damaged fortunes through the medium of an uprising, and maybe they don't work at it. And that reminds me of a revolution I once had the pleasure of being introduced to, which, though it didn't revolute so as you could see it very plainly, still, was started on the best possible basis. The men in charge of this affair were aiming to get control af the treasury and territory of one of the Central American states, and they went about it in a systematic way. Now there is but one thing at the bottom of any of those sudden transferals of power in the sister republics—money. Either one or the other side has too much, and the losing side promptly starts out to get what it believes is coming to it. That is what was done this time, but on a basis far more sensible than usual. The insurgent element did not have money enough to start business, and after much flopping around to find ways and means hit upon an ingenious scheme that came very near wrecking the home government before a shot was fired. The revolutionary party needed money and started out to make it, literally. The distinguished sons of the state who had been chosen to lead the movement established an office in New York and began the manufacture of spurious coin. The money was stamped with the trimmings put on coins by the regular government, and thousands of dollars' worth of the counterfeits were floated before the proper authorities got next to the source of supply. By that time the credit of the existing government was almost wrecked, so much of the phoney money had been floated. The plant being in the United States, the United States secret service officers were called upon to ferret it out, and they lost no time in locating it and bringing to justice the principal offenders. Nothing much was done to the revolutionists, though the breaking up of their counterfeiting plant nipped the revolution in the bud, but the home government never has established its credit on as firm a basis as it had before the counterfeits were made."

FINE PRIVATE HOSPITALS.

Although Manhattan and The Bronx have between 75 and 80 public hospitals and dispensaries, all giving pay patients skilled attention and fit accommodations at relatively moderate figures, private hospitals flourish mightily. The most successful are excellent business undertakings, and the profits of a few are very large, says the New York Sun.

A good many surgeons maintain private hospitals of their own, but some are owned and managed by laymen. Most of the private hospitals are on a smaller scale than the public hospitals, but there are some that have room at a pinch for 50 or 60 patients.

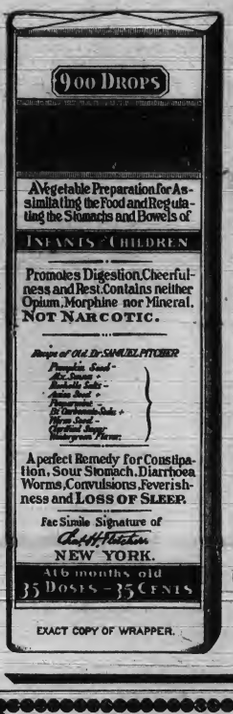
The wealthy often prefer a private to a public hospital, as being smaller and less frequented. Some private hospitals occupy houses specially built for the purpose and are almost ideally equipped for their needs. The kitchen is an extremely important appointment, and a skilled hospital cook is sure of work at good wages.

The private hospitals of New York now do much of the serious surgical work of the country. Winter is the crowded time of the hospitals that make a specialty of surgery, for no patient who can safely postpone an operation submits to it in summer time.

One reason why private hospitals now flourish so greatly is the growing disinclination of surgeons to perform operations of any magnitude at the homes of patients. Anyone who has seen the preparations necessary for surgical operations in the home is usually willing to take the advice of the surgeon and go to a hospital. A curious provision in some very elaborate private dwellings is a hospital room.

A good many physicians feel that the best place for an infant first to open its eyes upon the world is a quiet, well appointed private hospital, and some very modern women adopt this plan.

Domestic nursing is at a low discount with the doctors, and the use of the private hospital upon all sorts of occasions is a growing practice. The chances of recovery from any grave illness or operation are so much multiplied in a well conducted hospital that patients who are able to pay for hospital privileges are easily induced to do so.



Luxuries in Alaska.

A side light upon the mode of living in Alaska is given by stating the fact that in Seattle recently 7,500 cases of canned cream, 15 freight car loads, were ordered by one Seattle firm from a single cannery for shipment to Alaska. This cream is really milk condensed to about half its volume, and it is very popular in Alaska. The Alaskans drink it as they eat bacon. In Juneau the cold, or so-called "shut-in" months, are enlivened with club affairs, dances and social functions, at which the men are required to wear dress suits. There are carpets on the floor of the Alaskan log huts, and the more pretentious houses have almost all American luxuries.—Birmingham Press.

A LOVERS' QUARREL.

Both May Die From Shots From a Revolver.

Somerset, Ky., March 27.—Death may place his seal upon the lives of two of this city's best-known young people and put a most dramatic close to what was, in its incipiency, merely a lovers' quarrel. Mack Tate called at the home of Miss Minerva Dobson, to whom he was affianced. Within a short time the two had a misunderstanding, which quickly ripened into a bitter quarrel. Stung to the quick by the hot words that had passed between them, the girl sprang to a table and, picking up a revolver, opened fire on her lover. The bullet passed through Tate's abdomen and is now lodged in his body.

Despite his serious wound, the young man grappled with his sweetheart and after a struggle wrenched the smoking gun from her. He then deliberately stepped back and opened fire on her, emptying the remaining contents of the revolver into her body. One shot shattered her right arm, another took effect in the other arm and the third pierced her head.

ABRAHAM'S AWAKENING

OUR SERMON STORY by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher

(Copyright, 1900, by T. H. Mikell.)

Scripture Authority.—"Thus saith the Lord God of Israel: Your fathers dwelt on the other side of the flood in old time, even Terah, the father of Abraham, and the father of Nahor; and they served other gods."—Joshua 24:2.

THE one fundamental principle of advancement intellectually, morally and spiritually is loyalty and obedience to higher ideals, and the clearer vision. If the flickering light just ahead is not followed and cherished and permitted to illuminate the life, and kindle new ideals and aspirations, it soon fades and the darkness of the old conditions prevails. Man receives more light only as he is obedient and faithful to the light which he already has.

To every soul, undoubtedly, there comes sometime a gleam of light, a vision—be it ever so faint and vague—of something higher and better. To cherish such light, such vision; to be obedient to it; to struggle towards it, means increasing light and a better self. This is specially true in respect to spiritual things.

It was so with Abel as the thought of God unfolded in his life and heart and found expression at last in the "more excellent sacrifice," and perfect acceptance with God. It was so with Enoch, who early saw the light and entered on a pilgrimage with God which finally ended in Heaven. It was so with Noah, who heard God speak, and was obedient unto His command and reaped the reward of deliverance from the flood. And it was eminently so of Abraham who, in the midst of an idolatrous people, with a father and grandfather corrupted by the heathenish Chaldean worship of the hosts of heaven, caught a glimpse of God, and turned resolutely from the false, to worship the true and living God. And, dear reader, it may be so with you, if you, too, will be obedient to the Heavenly vision which God will give you, and will seek earnestly to know Him, whom to know is life eternal.

Of the first 75 years of Abraham's life then we have practically no knowledge, but there can be no doubt that the influences which prevailed over his life were anything but helpful. The atmosphere of his home was tinctured with heathenism, for his father served other gods, and in Ur of the Chaldees, where he probably spent the first 50 or 60 years of his life, every condition led away from the knowledge and service of the true God.

But it is only reasonable to suppose that in spite of Abraham's idolatrous environment he maintained a condition of mind and heart and life which made it possible for God to reveal Himself to him and at last call him out to live the separated life of faith and obedience to Him. Sometime during the period of residence at Ur there had come the clearer revelation of God and the inner convictions which led to a positive stand against idolatry and its corrupting tendencies.

It may be, nay it is probable, that the religious convictions of the young man Abraham—for because of his long and vigorous life he may be considered young at even 50 or 60 years of age—would arouse opposition and persecution, and this suggests reasonable explanation of the removal of Terah and part of his family from Ur of the Chaldees to Haran.

As we have said, Scripture tells of Abraham's call, but what of his awakening? What of the circumstances and influences which led up to the call? May we not reverently and earnestly search between the lines and read more of the life of this great patriarch than Scripture records?

Day has broken over the city of Ur of the Chaldees, and people singly and in groups are beginning to move through the streets. Some are hurrying to the shops which since the sun's first waking call have been open for trade. Others are bending their steps towards the great temple in the midst of the city, where at the begining of the day they may say their obligations to Mulita, the great goddess of fertility and birth. Among the number of these worshipers is observed a young man of noble face and splendid physique. His rich robes and dignified bearing indicate that he belongs to a family of some wealth and position, and as he proceeds on his way we have opportunity of studying his face. The earnest, frank expression in the eyes which look straight out before him without fear or hesitancy; the broad, high brow suggestive of mental vigor and breadth of view; and the strong, firm lines about the mouth and chin which the heavy beard and mustache fail to entirely hide, indicate a strength and depth of character much above the average. But there is something in the face and bearing of the man as he strides forward which is suggestive of special conviction and determination. The earnest, set expression of the face speaks of an inner conflict and final and positive decision, and the firm, unfaltering footsteps indicate an eagerness to meet and perform a duty, hard and unpleasant though it may be.

As he enters the temple he is met by one in priestly robes who has evidently been expecting his coming, and they two pass to an inner apartment together.

"Well, Abraham, I see by thy face that thou hast come to a decision. What sayest thou?" spoke up the priest, in cold harsh tones, for at a glance he had read the other's answer, and knew that it was contrary to that for which he had hoped.

For some few minutes the young man stood in silence, but as the priest studied his face with searching glance he failed to detect the slightest tremor of indecision or fear. On the other hand, he became conscious of a certain power and strength in his calm reserve, and knew that he waited to speak not because of uncertainty of conviction or dread of displeasure, but rather because of the depth of his convictions and strength of his purpose.

Under the tutelage of the priests, Abraham had been trained in all the learning of the east, and while his father Terah had never so declared, it was with the secret longing that he would enter the priesthood for which he seemed so eminently fitted, and the priests of the temple had entertained the same hope. But the years had come and gone and no inclination towards the priesthood was manifested. On the contrary a certain reserve towards the religion of the Chaldeans which had been noticeable as a youth had grown with the years, and while he had given no outward sign by word or deed that he held views contrary to the common belief, still it was apparent that there were deeper currents to his life and thoughts than that reached by the Chaldean faith.

The day before, the priest had had a long interview with Abraham and had urged him to enter the priesthood, and the young man had promised to give his answer in the morning, and after a long night of struggle he had come to make his decision known. He knew that to choose the priesthood meant power and influence and luxurious ease; it meant increased favor with the king, Urukh, who had devoted his energies and treasure to the building of the great temple, and it would assure the permanency and position of his family. But in spite of the influences of his surroundings and training, he could not remember the time when he had not thought of a one God instead of the many, and if one God, then the serving of many false gods could not be right. Faithful to this dim, uncertain light, and unwilling to yield until his doubts as to the Chaldean faith had been satisfied, he had thus lived, maintaining a high standard of virtue in his own life, and seeking to encourage such in others. Such was the state of his mind and heart when the priest had spoken to him, and great was the temptation to end the struggle of years and enter the pathway of ease and power. But the inherent sincerity of his nature and his deep-rooted desire to know and obey the truth kept him turned steadfastly towards the faint glimmer of light which had come to his heart, and after the long vigils of the night he had decided the question once and for all, and with the decision had come a peace of mind and strength of will and purpose which he had not known before, and which he could not himself understand or explain. All he knew was that he had settled, finally and positively, that he would not enter the Chaldean priesthood, and that he would still search for and seek to know the one God of heaven and earth. And as Abraham stood before the gorgeously robed priest that morning an inner thrill and glow made him feel that the answer he was to give was the right one.

"Thou wouldst not have me serve in a place where my heart could not enter, and where my convictions would not yield earnest and honest endeavor," the young man said, in firm, clear voice, and with measured accent, as though weighing each word before it left his mouth. "I must be true to the highest hopes and desires of my heart. I cannot tell you why, but I cannot help the conviction that the gods we worship are but the creation of man's own thought and that beyond and over all there is a one God with whom we have to do."

As Abraham spoke he looked steadily and earnestly into the face of the priest and, noting the deepening frown and the stern lines of displeasure, he knew that bitter opposition and trial and persecution awaited him.

"Knowest thou what thy words and thy decision may cost thee?" fiercely asked the disappointed priest. "What think you the king will say when he hears that you have set yourself up against his temple and his gods?"

Then in a pleading, persuasive tone, for he admired the splendid young man, and coveted him as a companion and associate in the temple service, he said:

"Come, Abraham, reconsider thy decision. I will give thee until to-morrow's sun to answer before word shall be taken the king, and his displeasure descend upon thee."

And without giving the young man the opportunity to reply, the priest indicated that the interview was at an end and Abraham passed out of the temple.

The next day's sun found the priest waiting expectantly, but he was doomed to disappointment, for Abraham came not, and investigation showed that he had the day before left the city, fleeing he knew not whither and knowing naught save that he longed to find the true God and to serve Him.

And think you that God left him to wander alone? Think you that He left him in the darkness and ignorance of his own heart? I tell you nay, for the providences of God were round about men in that early day as they are to-day, and to the heart longing and seeking to know the truth, light most surely came then as it does to-day, and Abraham's awakening to a consciousness of God and his decision which made him a wanderer could have but one sequel; a sequel in which God was the center and the exceeding great reward.

The best evidences of religion are not in argument, but in lives.

THE FITNESS OF THINGS.

Well-Chosen Subject for an Essay by Youth Who Wanted It Written for Him.

The boy was nearing the time of his graduation from the high school. He was a favorite in the school, but he had taken higher rank on the baseball and football fields than he had in the classroom, and this was when he began to be sorry. The "exercises" of graduation day loomed large before him. He was down for an essay. It looked more formidable than any obstacle he had ever encountered on the athletic field, and the nearer the day came the larger it looked, says the Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

There was a Harvard man staying in the village at the time, and to him, finally, the young athlete went and besought his help in the writing of the essay. The university man was amused, but he concealed his emotions.

"Well," he said, "a graduation essay is a fussy piece of work. I haven't done much writing lately, and I hardly feel like tackling such a job." The boy's face fell.

"Still," the Harvard man added, "I don't know—perhaps—I suppose you've picked out the subject you want to write about?"

"Yes," answered the young athlete, "the subject is 'Self-Reliance.'"

What the Dentist Says.

Toledo, Ohio, March 27th.—(Special)—Harry T. Lewis, the well-known dentist of 607 Summit street, this city, is telling of his remarkable cure of Kidney Disease by using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I was flat on my back and must say I had almost given up all hope of ever getting any help," says Dr. Lewis.

"My kidneys had troubled me for years. The pains in my back were severe and I had to get up several times at night. I tried different medicines but kept on getting worse till I was laid up.

"Then a friend advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and in about two weeks I started to improve, and I am glad to admit I am cured and I cannot praise Dodd's Kidney Pills too highly."

If you take Dodd's Kidney Pills when your kidneys first show signs of being out of order you will never have Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Dropsy, Gravel or Rheumatism.

Effects of Prosperity.

In the six years of the country's greatest prosperity, from 1897 to 1903, average prices of breadstuffs advanced 55 per cent., meats 23.1 per cent., dairy and garden products 50.1 per cent. and clothing 24.1. All these were products of the farmer and stockman who profited more than any other class of the community by these advances. The miner benefited 42.1 per cent. by that advance in the average price of metals. The only decrease in the average prices of commodities in that period was in railway freight rates, which decreased from .798 per ton-mile in 1897 to .763 in 1903, a loss of 4.4 per cent. The report of the Interstate Commerce Commission shows that the average increase in the pay of railroad employes in that period was a trifle above 8.5 per cent.

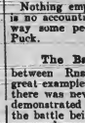
OPERATION AVOIDED

EXPERIENCE OF MISS MERKLEY

She Was Told That an Operation Was Inevitable. How She Escaped It

When a physician tells a woman suffering with ovarian or womb trouble that an operation is necessary, the very thought of the knife and the operating table strikes terror to her heart, and our hospitals are full of women coming for ovarian or womb operations.

Miss Margret Merkley



There are cases where an operation is the only resource, but when one considers the great number of cases of ovarian and womb trouble cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after physicians have advised operations, no woman should submit to one without first trying the Vegetable Compound and writing Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for advice, which is free.

Miss Margret Merkley of 275 Third Street, Milwaukee, Wis., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Loss of strength, extreme nervousness shooting pains through the pelvic organs, bearing down pains and cramps compelled me to seek medical advice. The doctor, after making an examination, said I had ovarian trouble and ulceration and an operation. To this I strongly objected and decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The ulceration quickly healed, all the bad symptoms disappeared and I am once more strong, vigorous and well."

Ovarian and womb troubles are steadily on the increase among women. If the monthly periods are very painful, or too frequent and excessive—if you have pain or swelling low down in the left side, bearing down pains, leucorrhœa, don't neglect yourself; try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A Short Biography of an Old Citizen

When as old a citizen as Mrs. Minerva White passes away, a short biographical sketch is always due them. At the time of her death there were not to exceed two native residents of this county, whose lives reached back to as early a period as did that of Mrs. White. Her maiden name was Rogers, and she was born February 20th, 1812, in a brick house, which, until a few years ago stood on the farm now owned by her son-in-law William C. Goodridge. At that place she spent her girlhood, this part of the country then being sparsely settled as compared with the present time. She was married to John White on March 3, 1831, and settled down in the same neighborhood, where they spent the remainder of their lives, and were honorable and useful citizens. To them were born nine children, five of whom, Richard and George White, and Mesdames T. D. and W. C. Goodridge and James D. Cloud, survive her. Her father's name was William Rogers, and her mother's maiden name, Sarah Threlkeld. Mrs. White was the youngest of their fifteen children. Her husband, John White, was born November 25th, 1803, and departed this life in May, 1867. Mrs. White united with the Middle Creek Baptist church in September 1833, where she remained a member until 1860, when she took a letter to the church at Burlington, where she remained a faithful and consistent member until called to her reward.

In Memoriam.

Mr. Asbury Henry died suddenly in his home at Francesville, Ky., on the 12th of February, 1905, of heart trouble, in the arms of his second daughter, who had been his devoted nurse for months. Mr. Henry was born in West Virginia, but spent the greater part of his life in Boone County, Ky. He was an industrious man, indeed a hard working farmer, faithful to his duty in that line, even up to the last years of his life. Mr. Henry was a true friend, and always seemed happy in his associations with others, being highly social in his disposition; he was also very hospitable; and the welcome he gave a guest in his house seemed to come directly from his heart, for generosity was a leading characteristic of his nature. He was an honorable man in all his dealings with others, treating them much as he would have his fellow men treat him, and this is why we can say Mr. Asbury Henry died without an enemy in the world. He left three faithful daughters to mourn his loss, Mrs. James Thompson, of Covington, Ky., Miss Anna Henry, and Mrs. Effie McNulty, of Sandusky, Ohio.

No name was signed to the note, and he does not know from whence, nor by whom it was sent.

The United States far surpasses every other country in the production of copper, and consequently is less vitally interested in the discovery of new foreign sources of supply than are some of the European nations. They have about doubled their consumption since the great development of the electrical industries began, and have been a little anxious because, meanwhile, the world's total production has increased only a little over one-third. At last accounts, Russia was doing her best to develop her copper region in Turkestan.

Finally he found that by use of common vinegar and salt he could produce a membrane, and that the eggs floated on the surface of the water exactly as they do in nature.

Received Loan From Storey Cotton Co., and Resigns.

Holden, the inspector in the United States postal service attached to the Philadelphia inspection division, who admitted that the Storey Cotton Co., most of whose officers are fugitives from justice, advanced $1,100 to him as a loan for a few days, has sent his resignation to Washington. Holden declares he received the money and paid it back a few days later without any understanding or agreement with the Storey Cotton Co. that he was to protect the concern against investigation by the post office department. He however admitted that in accepting the loan from that concern he was indiscreet, and thought it best, in view of the revelations in the case, to send his resignation to the postal authorities at Washington.

By direction of Postmaster General Cortelyou, Inspector Mayer, of the New York division, has been sent here and is making an investigation of Holden's connection with the Storey Cotton Co.

A GREAT MEDICINE

BRINGS HEALTH TO THREE MEMBERS OF SAME FAMILY.

Cures a Wife's Debility After Malaria, a Husband's Rheumatism, a Daughter's Nervous Prostration.

"I have recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to many people," said Mrs. Gossett, "because I have seen such good results, time after time, right in my own family. There are three of us who have no doubt about their merits. We do not need to take anybody's word on the subject for our own experience has taught us how well they deserve praise.

"It was just about ten years ago that I first read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and bought my first box. I was at that time all run down, weak, nervous and without ambition. I had been doctoring all summer for malaria and stomach trouble. Everybody thought I was going into consumption, as my mother had died of that disease.

"Thanks to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, I am now alive and hearty. I began to improve as soon as I began to take them, and when I had taken three boxes I was a well woman. Everyone wonders how I keep so well and am able to care for my home and six children without help. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills explain it.

"My oldest girl's health began to fail when she was about fourteen. She was nervous, complained of sharp pains in her head, would get deathly sick and have to leave the school room to get fresh air to revive her. I gave some pills to her. She took only a few boxes, but they cured her trouble, and caused her to develop into a perfect picture of health. Then my husband took them for rheumatism and found that they would cure that too. So you see we have all got great good ... using them, and that is why we recommend them to others."

Mrs. Minnie B. Gossett lives at Uhrichsville, Tuscarawas Co., Ohio, and is well known, as she has resided in the same neighborhood for more than thirteen years. Her story shows that a medicine which makes the blood sound and the nerves strong, overcomes a variety of diseases and should be found in every household. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists everywhere. They have cured anaemia, and all forms of weakness, also the most stubborn cases of dyspepsia and rheumatism. They are indispensable for growing girls.

TEACH THE BOYS THAT

Manners go a long way in helping along in this world. Remember that

When calling at evening entertainment a young girl should be provided with a chaperon.

In a narrow passage, hallway or on the stairs, a gentleman always stands aside to let a lady pass.

Letters of introduction are never sealed. It is a courtesy due the bearer that he may know what the letter contains.

A gentleman always has the prefix "Mr." engraved on his visiting card. His business address is never used on such a card.

A gentleman acting as an escort need not present his arm unless the path presents unusual obstacles or the lady is elderly or an invalid.

The dinner napkin is partially unfolded and placed across the knees. At the close of the meal it is placed unfolded by the side of the plate.

A Monster Egg.

The egg of the aepiornis, which is now in the United States National Museum, is probably the largest egg in existence. It is 12 inches long and ten inches wide, and its shell is nearly a quarter of an inch thick, and as hard as a rock. Some idea of its size may perhaps be had when it is stated that it is capable of holding the contents of six ostrich eggs, or 148 hens' eggs, or 30,000 humming birds' eggs.

CHILDREN AFFECTED

By Mother's Food and Drink.

Many babies have been launched into life with constitutions weakened by disease taken in with their mother's milk. Mothers cannot be too careful as to the food they use while nursing their babes. The experience of a Kansas City mother is a case in point:

"I was a great coffee drinker from a child, and thought I could not eat a meal without it. But I found at last it was doing me harm. For years I had been troubled with dizziness, spots before my eyes and pain in my heart, to which was added, two years ago, a chronic sour stomach. The baby was born 7 months ago, and almost from the beginning, it, too, suffered from sour stomach. She was taking it from me.

"In my distress I consulted a friend of more experience than mine, and she told me to quit coffee, that coffee did not make good milk, I have since ascertained that it really dries up the milk.

"So, I quit coffee, and tried tea and at last cocoa. But they did not agree with me. Then I turned to Postum Coffee with the happiest results. It proved to be the very thing I needed. It not only agreed perfectly with baby and myself, but it increased the flow of my milk. My husband then quit coffee and used Postum, quickly got well of the dyspepsia with which he had been troubled. I no longer suffer from the dizziness, blind spells, pain in my heart or sour stomach. Postum has cured them.

"Now we all drink Postum, from my husband to my seven-months'-old baby. It has proved to be the best hot drink we have ever used. We would not give up Postum for the best coffee we ever drank." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

THE BIG LAND FRAUDS IN WESTERN STATES

They Are Far More Gigantic Than People Generally Imagine.

SOME CLEVER DETECTIVE WORK DONE BY W. J. BURNS.

He Has Entrapped Culprits Both High and Low by His Carefully Laid Plans—How the Schemes of the Land Grabbers Worked—Some Startling Evidence.

Washington.—The story of the big land frauds of the west when all told is one of the most startling and interesting of modern annals.

It is a gigantic conspiracy, a detective story and a tremendous legal battle all in one.

The conspiracy reaches back through the years, involves hundreds of thousands of acres of the finest public lands in Arizona, California, Oregon and other states, and includes among its long chain of conspirators, men prominent in state and nation, government officials and employes, and wealthy corporations, including at least one railroad.

The detective story equals any of the Sherlock Holmes variety in the keenness and nicety with which the faintest clews have been followed up, mysteries unraveled and the guilty, high and low, at last cornered, in spite of unlimited power and influence and loads of money used to block investigation and checkmate the detectives.

The tremendous legal battle begun some time ago when sufficient evidence was secured to start court proceedings and which is still raging, is a conflict of giants. The government has employed the finest legal talent to be had to prosecute the cases and the men on trial, and to be tried, are sparing no efforts or money in trying to escape conviction. It is a fight every inch of the way, with several points scored by the government thus far.

And all this is included in the complete story of the land frauds—a story of fascinating interest because of its startling revelations.

It is a story one wants to read.

From the time some three years ago when Secretary Hitchcock, of the interior depar[illegible] first received a hint that gigantic land steals were going on and started the machinery of land-grabbers of the west. First, we have the conspirators, bold, rapacious, unprincipled, insatiable. Next were the vast tracts of valuable government land as a stake for which these conspirators were ready to play, and judging from the hundreds of thousands of acres of land fraudulently obtained up to the time the investigations were begun the stake was an elastic one, which uitimately was to include millions. And because the conspirators were bold and the prize to be won almost limitless in extent and value, they devised a system by which to operate. But more of this later.

Startling Summary.

To summarize our story before attempting to develops it in its startling details, let us consider that its ramifications lead us through three states, with still others to hear from. Immense tracts of timber land, aggregating 1,000,000 or more acres in extent, are involved. In Oregon, one firm alone acquired 300,000 acres of the finest of the public domain by the use of the fraudulent system. And in California applications were made for 240,000 acres of school lands, indicating that the only limit to the fraudulent entries was to be the outermost boundaries of the land itself. It is estimated that the land grabbed is easily worth $20,000,000 to $25,000,000.

Sixteen of the principals involved in these land frauds have been indicted, and ten or 12 implicated in a greater or less degree. Ten men in the employ of the land once have been discharged for complicity in the frauds and several convictions have already been secured.

Among the indicted are one United States senator one congressman, two [illegible] senators, an ex-district [illegible] an ex-assistant district attorney, the former head of the general land office, Whesler and taking up a number of entries in the outskirts of the county.

In California R. A. Hyde, John A. Henson and Henry P. Dimond, extensive land speculators, have been indicted on the charges of conspiracy and the effort to take them to Washington for trial.

The First Clew.

This, in brief, is the outline of the plot, the results of the investigations and the progress of the legal battle. [illegible] the latter part of 1902 that the first intimation of extensive land frauds reached the ear of Secretary Hitchcock, and the circumstances connected therewith are of rather a singular character. It has been said that it takes a thief to catch a thief, and strange enough the first information of frauds in the land entries was given by a man who had been in the employ of land-grabbers, and who was threatening to expose the frauds in order to enforce the payment of hush money. He sent letter after letter to the general land office at Washington, but it is said that Binger Hermann, at that time commissioner, ignored the letters, and then sent evasive replies in an effort to suppress the matter. But when the letters became too persistent a special agent was at last sent to investigate to Tucson, Ariz., from which point the letters had come. The report of this agent did not reach the department until September, and the clerk who read it was so impressed with its importance, as it stated that big steals and frauds were being perpetrated on the government, that he took it direct to Commissioner Hermann. There it rested.

Commissioner Hermann Exposed.

About this time Secretary Hitchcock received a confidential letter, intimating that such a report had reached his department. He at once sent for Hermann and asked for the report, [illegible] upon its being produced, the commissioner's resignation was demanded. The latter requested three or four weeks time, which, it is charged, he spent in destroying press books and other tell-tale evidences of corruption, and for this he has just been indicted at Washington.

Impressed with the seriousness of the situation, Secretary Hitchcock at once assigned Arthur B. Pugh, an attorney of the interior department, and Harry E. Steece, a special agent of the general land office, to make an investigation. When they reached Arizona they found that the man who had been instrumental in starting the investigation had changed his mind and refused to make any further statement. They then proceeded to California and after a brief investigation returned to Washington and reported that the frauds were evidently extensive and that the services of a detective would be necessary to work [illegible] the evidence. Chief John E. Wilkie, of the United States secret service, was called in and at his suggestion one of his operatives, William J. Burns, was placed in full charge of the secret service end of the case. As a preliminary to his work Mr. Burns spent a month in the general land office, familiarizing with the general details of the work and gathering all the evidence at hand.

Fine Detective Work.

Fortunate circumstances favored him and before he started for the west he had secured a confession from J. J. Barnes, who had been employed in the general land office for 35 years. This gave him inside information which he was not slow to use on reaching California. His investigations led him into Arizona and Oregon and other western states, and when he had the details well in hand, he boldly faced B. F. Allen, who for years had been a trusted agent of the interior department and who at the time was forest superintendent at Los Angeles, Cal., and charged him with complicity in the frauds, with the result that Allen broke down and confessed that he was connected with F. A. Hyde, an extensive land speculator, and at present under indictment for conspiracy and awaiting removal to Washington for trail.

The trail now led to the office of the forest supervisor, Grant I. Taggart, whose reputation up to this time had been above suspicion. Burns' rigid examination forced the details from Taggart of how he had established the boundaries of the forest reservations in his territory, under the direction, he said, of John A. Benson, who was another land speculator, and who with Hyde is now under indictment.

Traps Set.

With the inside information thus obtained, the secret service man returned to Washington, and proceeded to entrap certain men in the general land office, for by this time he knew the men he wanted. There were two men especially implicated in the chain of evidence which he had thus far forged link by link. One was W. D. Harlan, chief of the special service division, and who up to this time had the entire confidence of the department. He had charge of the special agents whose duties are to investigate all depredations of the land office. The other man was William E. Valk, who had charge of the line selections. Burns succeeded in wresting confessions from both men.

At the diction of the detective, Harlan wrote a decoy note to Benson, stating that he had a matter of great importance to communicate to him and asking him to write him care general delivery, as he feared his mail was being watched. No reply was received to this and it developed later that some means Benson had been warned of the trap. Another letter was written and mailed to Benson and this time Burns made certain that Harlan did not send any warning. The result was that Benson on the receipt of the letter informing him that he was needed in Washington came on at once, and from the New Willard summoned Harlan and Valk to visit him. All three men were now under the closest surveillance of detectives, and Burns told Harlan and Valk to keep the appointment and to take any money which was offered them. The trap was sprung and Burns, it is said, has $100 which was given to Valk and $200 given to Harlan, marked and held for future reference.

An Important Arrest.

Benson was immediately arrested and taken before the United States commissioner. He gave bonds for $5,000, but defaulted and skipped to New York, where he was again arrested and where he has been fighting the removal proceedings ever since. The case has at last reached the United States supreme court, from which a decision is expected soon.

How Clerks Were Bribed.

And now just a word here as to the skillful way in which the clerks in the general land office at Washington and the special agencies in the western states were approached and finally completely brought under the control of the unprincipled land sharks. One of the conspirators would call upon them and ask for ordinary information that had nothing whatever to do with the land steals, and which was perfectly proper for the clerks to give. This information would require a little research on the part of the clerk, and when it was finished the inquirer professed himself to be deeply grateful and on leaving would press a $10 bill into the hands of the clerk, and if he raised any protests, would say: "Oh, give it to your wife."

Here was a temptation easy to yield to, for it seemed so innocent and harmless, as he had only furnished information which was legitimate and the inquirer had merely given an expression of gratitude for services rendered. But that was but the first step. In a few days the conspirator would call again and want still other information which did not have to do with the land cases. The clerk, eager to oblige, supplied the information, and $50 offered by the grateful inquirer was more readily accepted than the $10 had been. Now the clerk was fixed, and when the conspirator came out boldly and sought information in regard to land cases, and the clerk would protest that he could not give it, he was coolly informed that he must do as he was bid, for he had accepted two or three bribes from him already, and if it became known he would lose his place and perhaps go to the penitentiary. The clerk, realizing his position, would yield, and in a short time would be deep in the meshes of the great conspiracy.

After Big Game.

But the big game had not been winged as yet, and it was really the big fellows which the department was anxious to get. But step by step the trail was leading up higher and higher, and desperate as were the efforts to end the investigation, powerful as were the influences exerted to discredit the work and place Secretary Hitchcock in false light, strong as were the counter charges brought against the secretary of the interior to have him removed, not for an instant did he hesitate or pause in his purpose to run to the ground every one in any way connected with the land frauds, whether United States senator or poor $1,200 clerk, the tool of the real conspirators.

The first hint from Arizona had led to unearthing big frauds in California, and now the trail led into Oregon, where the confession of Frank H. Walgamott brought about the conviction of a pretty bunch of prominent people, among them S. A. D. Puter, who is alleged to have had dealings with Senator Mitchell in the land frauds. From this beginning all the timber land prosecutions in the state of Oregon started. It is charged that a Portland man and a millionaire lumber dealer of Minnesota had acquired more than 300,000 acres in Oregon. With the conviction of Puter, McKinley and others, Burns did not rest, but proceeded to worm from them information which resulted in the charges of the bribing of United States Senator Mitchell, of Portland.

The plot thickened and as it did so the barriers raised to investigation became more determined and effectual. But as Secretary Hitchcock and Attorney General Knox came to appreciate the extent of the land frauds, they decided to have more legal aid, and Francis J. Heney, one of the ablest criminal lawyers of the Pacific coast, was secured to look after the Oregon end of the cases. And here is where Senator Mitchell and others of the big fry come in, and right here is one of the most interesting and startling portions of the lands fraud story. When the grand jury had been summoned and a vigorous investigation begun, Attorney Heney tried to induce Senator Mitchell to go to Oregon from Washington as a witness, but this he at first refused to do. But when he was informed that matters were becoming serious for him and Hermann, they both started for the west.

Startling Developments.

But if the grand jury could not get hold of Senator Mitchell as a witness, it could and did secure his law partner, Judge A. H. Tanner, and the developments resulting from his testimony, your son or anyone. Can't you immediately on receipt of this drop everything and come direct here? Bring with you in trunk, but don't let your family or anyone know, all the company's books, day ledger, all of them, also your bank book, and am extremely anxious to see for myself precisely what the books show, besides it is important that we should talk over with Fulton, who is to help to defend me, in regard to the cases. I hope you can come; if so, don't let a soul know you are coming, not even Harry, and if you conclude to come wire me as follows: 'Johnson leaves Grant for Washington this evening.—Tanner.' I do hope you can come and immediately, before you are called upon before the grand jury. Sincerely your friend,

"JOHN H. MITCHELL."

"Don't show Harry this letter nor tell him anything in it. Don't let him see our books. Tell him nothing.

"Keep all important letters in safe, and safe and office carefully locked, as those scoundrels will get in if possible.

"Burn this without fail."

The dramatic scene in the senate chamber at Washington where, before his colleagues, Senator Mitchell solemnly, and tearfully, and vehemently, declared his innocence of the charges brought against him, is still fresh in the public mind, but the courts at Portland will have to decide that point.

How the "System" Worked.

And now a word about "the system" by which it was possible to perpetrate such gigantic frauds against the government and steal whole townships of valuable timber land, much of which was made up of giant trees ranging in size from 30 to over 50 feet in diameter, and from 200 to nearly 500 feet in height, it must be admitted at the start that the laws of the United States made easy the system and invited the unscrupulous to defraud the government. The act of June 4, 1897, allows the exchange of lands within the limits of United States forest reserves, by the owner thereof, for other public lands outside of the reserves. Under the pretense of acquiring school lands as settlers innumerable sections would be taken up by organized raiders under applications signed with fictitious and forged names. At first five and ten dollars apiece were paid for these signatures, which were obtained from all classes of people. But after awhile this was considered a useless waste of money, and the conspirators boldly forged the names as necessity demanded. These applications for land with the forged names signed to them would be sent to notaries public and indorsed as though the persons whose names were attached to the papers had made the applications. At the same time deeds would be sworn to or assignments made out and names forged to them, the assignments always being made out to the firm that instigated the proceedings, or to some one who would accept the titles in their behalf, the state law providing that after an application for purchase had been legally filed the applicant might assign the land. In this manner patents to something like 150,000 acres of school lands in California and Oregon were fraudulently obtained. These selections were of the very best public lands, including large tracts of the finest timber lands that can be found in the public domain.

By the creation of forest reserves within the states of California and Oregon—generally in the mountainous regions—large tracts of undisposed school lands, frequently of a worthless character, were included in such reserves. Under the act of June 4, 1897, referred to above, these states could relinquish the school lands to the United States and select other lands outside of the forest reserves in lieu of them, selling these lands thus selected at prices from five to 20 times as much as the prices that could be obtained for school land inside the forest reserves before the government withdrew them. In this way the land grabbers have acquired school lands for which they paid $1.25 an acre, and sold for $5 to $20 an acre.

Government Employes Involved.

"The system" extended to Washington, for to further their schemes employes in the general land office there, who had been drawn into the conspiracy by liberal bribes, kept certain men informed regarding the exact date when the withdrawals of land would be made for the purpose of creating new forest reserves. The advance information thus obtained would enable them to file in the state land office their fictitious applications to purchase school lands within such forest reserves ahead of anyone not in the combination. Arthur B. Pugh, in his report to the secretary of the interior, stated that one firm had secured in this way the filing of applications to purchase about 240,000 acres of school lands within proposed forest reserves, the withdrawals for which were made only a few months previous to the beginning of the investigation.

And now as to the railroads. Under similar provision they were able to acquire thousands of acres of valuable land. The Northern Pacific obtained 400,000 acres of Oregon timber land by relinquishing desert land and locating script received for it. Although the road has but 40 miles of track in Oregon, it obtained large tracts of valuable timber lands, and the exchange of this 400,000-acre grant for timber lands in Oregon is at present the subject of investigation by the legislature of Oregon.

The Government Position.

Mr. Pugh, as attorney for the interior department, in speaking of the government's position in the case, says:

"There is no doubt that a great conspiracy can be shown in these cases and that the exchange of these lands with fictitious titles for lands with perfect titles would be a gross fraud upon the government. This was one of the most ingeniously planned and deeply laid conspiracies to defraud the United States that the government has had to deal with. While the proceedings based as a basis for the selections under the act of June 4, 1897, are located within the states of California and Oregon, the public lands secured in exchange for such selections are scattered throughout the various public land states and territories. The very best of the undisposed of lands were selected in exchange. In the timbered sections the most valued timbered lands were taken. In the arid regions, land containing springs, or on which sources of water supply were found, were taken. If the fraudulent actions had not been arrested there would have been obtained in this manner patents from the government to hundreds of thousands of acres of the very best public lands."

investigation, news items in the papers of the country have told of the developments in the case. Occasionally the public has been startled by the name of some prominent man being connected with the frauds, as was especially the case when Senator Mitchell was indicted on the charge of accepting a bribe in connection with some of the land cases, and his now famous, "burn this letter," was made public.

One Gigantic, Systematic Plot.

First of all we want to remember that the land frauds are not an aggregation of isolated cases, independent of each other in methods and purpose, but are really one gigantic, deep-laid and systematic plot which was being persistently and successfully carried on in Arizona, California, Oregon and other western states by men of wealth and influence who had a lust for the public domain.

Lawson, in his revelations of Wall street methods, speaks of "the system," but the New York money kings in their alleged raids on the stock markets and the pocketbooks of the small investors never worked a more thoroughly organized system than have the special agents of the land office and a former judge.

In Oregon convictions have already been secured in the cases of Clyde Lloyd, S. A. D. Puter, Horace G. McKinley, Emma L. Watson and D. W. Tarpley. Franklin Pierce Mays, state senator from Portland, is now on trial, and the trial of Senator Mitchell is to begin shortly.

Judge A. H. Tanner, the law partner of Senator Mitchell, was indicted for perjury and later pleaded guilty and it is stated made a confession implicating Senator Mitchell.

Former Land Commissioner Hermann, now congressman from Oregon, is under indictment on the charge of destroying records of the land office at Washington, and in addition to this he is under indictment with John [illegible] Hall, ex-district attorney; Edwin Mays, ex-assistant district attorney; F. P. Mays, state senator; Hamilton H. Hendricks, secretary and treasurer of the Butte Creek Land, Live Stock & Lumber company, and Special Agents C. E. Loomis and S. D. Stratford of the land office, on the charge of fencing in a large part of the county of

According to an article in the Booklover's Magazine, there is no farmer in the world like the Japanese farmer. Progressive experts now admit that there is nothing in all the annals of agriculture that ever approached the scientific skill of Japanese husbandry. If all the tillable acres of Japan were merged into one field, a man in an automobile, traveling at the rate of fifty miles an hour, could circle Japan in eleven hours.

The contractors are placing their material and getting ready for the work on the new Government dam in the Ohio river, and soon the work will begin in earnest. The dam will be located at a point between Home City and Fern Bank almost at the station called Arden. This is an immense undertaking and it is estimated that it will take five years to complete the work. This will give employment to many men and be a benefit financially to all towns in the neighborhood of the work.

Mules are much the cheapest and most efficient animals for farm work, seldom sick or lame, very long lived good for twenty-five years of hard work. A draft horse is worn out at 12 or fifteen years. The mule, like the Arab is all bone, sinew and muscle and can draw very heavy loads. A mule seldom kicks or balks; if it runs away it keeps the road and seldom does damage: and best of all they are able to live and labor on half the feed a horse needs. They are in their best work plowing corn; a mule will follow the row closely, turn on the corn at the ends and never step on a single hill. They will turn in half the time a draft horse will. You can grow more corn with mules than with horses. The mule is all right and has a noble record.

All persons interested in Base Ball are requested to meet at Burlington next Saturday afternoon for the purpose of organizing the Boone base ball club for 1905.

The warm weather last month, made the ball tossers feel very much like taking up the sport again. In fact the base ball fever struck some of them good and hard.

Several of the ball tossers met at the park last Saturday and tried their wings and batting eyes. Billie Gray, of Bullittsville, was among them, and his pitching apparatus seemed to be in fine working order.

Scranton Bros., of Rising Sun, write that they are well pleased with the results of the small ad. they have in these columns. The RECORDER appreciates such testimonials as to the worth of its columns as a medium through which to reach the public.

Miss Kittie Gaines says the RECORDER was misinformed as to the action of her horse at the railroad crossing in Erlanger as she and her sister were going to the city, several days ago; that it was not frightened by the train; but, on the contrary, behaved very nicely.

Years ago the local lawyers were very busy about this time before every term of circuit court taking depositions, but very little has been doing along that line for the approaching term of that court. The circuit court comes and goes now days without creating any stir beyond the usual. So much the better for all except the lawyers.

often ends in a sad accident. To heal accidental injuries, use Bucklen's Arnica Salve. "A deep wound in my foot from an accident," writes Theodore Schuele, of Columbus, Ohio, "caused me great pain. Physicians were helpless, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve quickly healed it." Soothes and heals burns like magic. 25c at all druggists.

Gov. Hanly, of Indiana, has appointed Dr. A. H. McGlasson, of Madison, a member of the Board of Veterinary Examiners, of that State. Dr. McGlasson is a son of Henry McGlasson, of Taylorsport, this county and a son-in-law of Capt. Chas. Kotmyer, of Constance. Dr. McGlasson's term of office will be for four years, and he has many friends in this county who congratulate him on his appointment. The board consists of two Republicans and two Democrats, Dr. McGlasson being one of the latter.

Gaines Robinson, of Richwood, was in town last Thursday, a few hours. Mr. Robinson told the RECORDER of an occurrance the like of which seldom occurs. The sons of his brother, Frank, were hauling hay from Mr. Gregory's, one day last week, when one of the racks on the haybed broke and let considerable weight upon one of the wagon wheels, the friction from which set fire to the hay. A strong wind was blowing and the young men had to hustle to get the team unhitched from the wagon, the entire woodwork of which, except about one foot of the tongue, was consumed by the fire. The fire occurred on the Richwood and Beaver turnpike near Mrs. Wolfe's barn, which, for a time, it was feared would take fire from the burning hay. The occurrance created considerable excitement in the neighborhood.

A boy about 19 years of age arrived in Burlington about dark, last Wednesday, and, going to Marce Riddell's store, said he wanted to telephone to his people in Richmond, Indiana. He gave his name as Phelps, but from some reason he did not use the telephone. He stayed all night at the Boone House, and next morning he went out the Florence pike. In a few hours Charles Craven telephoned to Sheriff Allphin that a strange boy was in that neighborhood, and had drawn a pistol on some of the Limaburg school children. The sheriff started in pursuit of the boy, whom he overtook near James Kelly's on the road between Limaburg and Hebron. He found the gun on the boy, and now he languishes in hotel Adams, awaiting trial, the lowest penalty for carrying a pistol is $25 and 10 days in jail. Some think the boy is not balanced mentally.

LATER.—Since the above was put in type Phelps was taken before County Judge Cason, who gave him a lecture and discharged him, telling him to get back to his home in Richmond, Indiana, as soon as possible. His pistol was confiscated.

An effort is being made to establish a rural free delivery mail route from Burlington down the East Bend road to Waterloo, thence to McVille, thence to Bellevue, thence over the Bellevue and Burlington pike to Commissary, where the delivery of mail would cease, owing to route No. 1 covering the road from there to Burlington. It is claimed that 200 or 300 boxes would be put up on the route in a short time, and that more than 1,000 people would be served. The route would be over nearly all dirt road, but that is the case with many of the routes in this State. The citizens of the territory through which the route would pass are very anxious that it be established, and the RECORDER hopes their desire will be gratified. Another good route to get into operation would be from Burlington to Limaburg, thence to North Bend by way of Hebron, returning by way of Bullittsville. The required distance for a route could be gotten, and a very large body of people served, as it would pass through a thickly populated part of the county, and there is no doubt but the people would like to have the service. Who will interest themselves in giving the matter a start?

C. W. Robineon, of Constance, wants it understood that he is doing business at the old stand, notwithstanding reports to the contrary.

"So many have said, "I have only been away from Boone a few years and still there are few familiar names left in the paper," I have been away, not so many years, perhaps, but it will take a great many more before the names I love best pass away from its pages entirely. How I enjoyed the items of 1975. One item was omitted. It was to the effect that "Hon. Chas. Wilson was visiting among his folks last week. It might have added, also, that Charlie is getting to look old but there are others, who would be much younger at that time. Charly's items wont always hold water but they leave plenty of room to exercise ones imagination while trying to decide which are facts and which are freaks of his fertile brain. One absent cousin enjoys your items very much Charlie, as well as every other little scrap of news from old Rabbit Hash. When spring comes and time to renew my subscription, I most always remark that "the RECORDER is too high. I don't believe I will send this year." My husband always takes me entirely in earnest and says: "Why, you can't do without your home paper if it cost twice as much," and as I never argue the case with him (a dutiful wife never argues with her husband), I write the first opportunity. Well, I must not weary you, and wish the RECORDER and all its friends a happy and prosperous year."

STATE NEWS HAPPENINGS

THE BABY POISONER.

It Is Feared the Colored Woman May Be Lynched.

Paducah, Ky., March 28.—Mrs. Mary Brockwell, whose three children, aged 3, 4 and 5 years, died from poisoning under suspicious circumstances, broke down and confessed that she killed them by giving them morphine and coal oil. The woman said that her husband was in an asylum and she could not support the children. She also said that George Alberton promised to marry her if she got rid of the children. Alberton was arrested as an accessory.

Mrs. Brockwell is now trying to claim she remembers little about the poisoning. She says privation, destitution and suffering during the cold months have made her crazy. She is a native of Symsonia, Graves county, and, while attractive-looking, is of inferior intelligence.

Paducah, Ky., March 31.—The police are losing faith in Mrs. Mary Brockwell, the confessed murderess of three of her children. In the latest statement she says Jerry Tubbs, a cousin of George Albritton, also persuaded her to poison her children.

WILL PLEAD SELF-DEFENSE.

Fitzhugh Renfrow Shot and Killed By Hiram Powers.

Owensboro, Ky., April 1.—Fitzhugh Renfrow, a wealthy merchant of Narrows, Ohio county, was shot to death by Hiram Powers, a sawmill man. There had been ill feeling between the men since the dissolution of partnership several years ago. The last trouble was over damage to a fence from fire. It is alleged Powers was drinking. He advanced on Renfrow, who retreated. Later he attempted to pick up a brick when Powers fired. Five shots were fired into the man's body. He died in ten minutes. Powers was arrested and taken to Hartford. He will plead self-defense.

THE HUNT PROPERTY.

Steps Have Been Made To Take It Over By the State.

Frankfort, Ky., March 31.—The state capitol commission heard the report of Attorney General Hays on his examination of the title of the Hunt site property selected for the new capitol building, and took steps to take over the property for the state. The commission will meet again about April 10 next, when Architect Andrews will present his additional drawings of the building, and the commission will arrange to advertise for bids for the work of construction. The commissioners hope to have the contracts awarded not later than May 15 next.

THE JAIL BURNED.

Two Prisoners Died in Terrible Agony.

Owensboro, Ky., April 1.—Wm. Givens, a miner, and Dr. John Hale, of Roseville, Hancock county, were arrested Thursday night at Dark on the charge of drunkenness and placed in jail at Deanefield, Ohio county, 20 miles from here. At 1 o'clock Saturday morning the jail was discovered to be in flames. When the door was broken open the burned bodies of both men were found on the floor. Life was extinct. They had died in terrible agony in endeavoring to escape from jail.

Tax Collectors Enjoined.

Paducah, Ky., March 31.—Attorney J. M. Worten, owner of property in two city additions, filed suit against the city of Paducah, the mayor and other officials enjoining them from collecting any taxes on his property for 1904 on the grounds that the recently made tax levy is invalid.

Louisville Tobacco Market.

Louisville, Ky., March 31.—Eight hundred and two hhds of burley were offered on the tobacco breaks, prices ranging from $3.95 to $16.50. One hundred and thirty-seven hhds of dark were offered at prices ranging from $3.40 to $6.40. The market was more satisfactory than the previous day.

Capt. Boss Expires.

Covington, Ky., April 1.—Capt. A. F. Boss, one of the oldest pioneer citizens of Northern Kentucky, and widely known river man, died at his late home at Demossville, Ky., aged 95. Deceased came to Boone county, Ky., in 1815, and when 15 years of age entered into the river business.

Sponsor For Confederate Reunion.

Georgetown, Ky., April 1.—Miss Annie Askew has been chosen sponsor of the George W. Johnson camp of this city, at the reunion of the United Confederate Veterans' association at Louisville June 15 and 16. She is the daughter of Judge James F. Askew.

"Spotty" Wing Escapes.

Eddyville, Ky., March 30.—"Spotty" Wing, notorious Cincinnati crook, has escaped from the penitentiary by scaling the walls. He was serving a 16 years' sentence for cracking a safe in Livingston county a few years ago. A big reward is offered.

Mt. Sterling, Ky., April 1.—The trial of Mrs. McGraw, who is charged with murder in Menefee county, was continued. Mrs. McGraw is accused of killing two women by putting arsenic in their coffee.

BAIL WAS REFUSED.

Judge Parker Will Investigate Breathitt County Conditions.

Lexington, Ky., March 28.—Judge James Hargis, Elbert Hargis and Sheriff Ed Callahan, of Breathitt county, were remanded to jail by Judge Watts Parker without bail pending their trial for the murder of James Cockrill. Alex H. Hargis was admitted to bail in the sum of $15,000. Judge Parker delivered a lengthy oral opinion on the conditions existing in Breathitt county. He said he thought it was a matter for the state to investigate thoroughly, and to that end will devote much time of this court to the investigation.

In delivering the opinion he said that, while the proof against Alex Hargis was very strong in some parts, the fact that he was not in Jackson the day of the shooting, and had not been there for several days prior thereto, was sufficient to convince him that Alex. Hargis had no knowledge that the crime was to be committed at that time.

Senator A. G. Hargis was released on a bond of $15,000, signed by Gus Straus, Joe Skain, E. F. Vanderen and John Flood. He returned to his home in Winchester.

THE CONTEMPT CASES.

Subpoenaes Served on James Hargis and Ed Callahan.

Lexington, Ky., April 1.—Judge Benton, of the Clark circuit court, at Winchester, served subpoenaes on James Hargis and Ed Callahan in jail here on the charge of murdering Cockrill, the Winchester case in contempt of court proceedings against B. F. French et al. in which Hargis and Callahan are defendants. The contempt charge is in spiriting away Mose Feltner, Sam Fields and Ruck Colton during the recent Marcum damage suit in Winchester.

The jailer here has not yet been ordered to surrender the prisoners. It may entail another clash of the courts, as this court is said to be unwilling to let them go.

TOM WHITE.

It Is Persistently Rumored He Has Made a Confession.

Lexington, Ky., March 31.—It is persistently rumored that Tom White, now in the Covington jail under a life sentence for the murder of Jim Cockrill for complicity, in which offense the Hargis brothers and Sheriff Ed Callahan are under indictment in this county, has made a confession which the prosecution has been relying upon to supply the missing link in the chain said to be necessary to implicate the four prisoners here. The rumor has it that the confession has either been made or will be made to Attorney B. Jouett, of Winchester.

Suits Against Oil Companies.

Owensboro, Ky., April 1.—The commonwealth's attorney filed 66 suits against the Standard Oil Co. and the Evansville Oil Co., 60 against the former and six against the latter. A thousand dollars is asked in each petition for failure to have retail license to sell oils in other counties of the state. Indictments have been returned.

Killed By the Cars.

Newport, Ky., March 31.—Chief of Police Deputy received a telegram from the authorities of Cleveland, O., stating that Frank Grossheim, 20, had been killed by a train there. No details were given. Grossheim's parents reside near the corner of Tenth and Patterson streets.

Bought Sheet Mill.

Ashland, Ky., March 30.—The Ashland Iron and Mining Co. has closed a deal with the Ashland Sheet Mill Co., by which the former secured control of the latter's local holdings. The sheet mill employs 300 men, and will be put in operation at once.

Killed His Wife.

Covington, Ky., March 30.—While bending over a washtub Mrs. Nannie Russell, 37, was stabbed to death by her husband, James Russell, at their home in Madison pike, in Latonia, Ky. He made his escape. He had just been released from jail.

Child Killed By a Train.

Lexington, Ky., April 1.—Alice, the three-year-old daughter of Landsay Obanyon, was run down and killed by a train near this city while trying to cross the tracks. Her body was ground to pieces.

Looking For the Driver.

Newport, Ky., March 30.—The police were asked to find Al Baldwin, 19. Baldwin drives a wagon for Henry Melching, an expressman, and it is alleged he collected $47 and disappeared, leaving the team on Main street, near Fourth, Cincinnati.

Warner To Hang May 19.

INVESTIGATING BEEF TRUST

Commissioner Garfield's Failure to Find Anything Wrong in the Combine.

The report of Mr. Garfield, commissioner of corporations, on the beef trust, has provoked wide and for the most part unfavorable comment. He finds in brief that there is really no trust—that is, that, though there is a merger, there is no "general interownership of stock"—that the packers have no monopoly, as they control but 45 per cent. of the business; that their profits have been very small, and that they are in no way responsible for the high price of beef. Now it may be, says the Indianapolis News (Ind.), that Mr. Garfield has reported the facts precisely as they are, but it will seem to most men that he has made the case for the packers pretty strong. The question of what the packers make is not important, for we all know that they have prospered greatly. It may be that their slaughtering business is conducted on a small margin, though we cannot think that it is so small as two per cent. and less on the volume of business, as Mr. Garfield reports. But even if this be so, they earn from 14 to 17 per cent. on their private car lines, and make good money out of their by-products. If the trust is not making money on its beef its operations are still obnoxious and are in restraint of trade.

The trust is charged with keeping down the price of cattle and keeping up the price of beef. Mr. Garfield does not think that it has done either of these things. He finds that cattle have been very high in price when conditions warranted it, and that the price fell sharply when conditions changed. He also says that the price of beef fell when the price of cattle fell. But the people know that for years beef has been exceedingly costly. They know, also, and Mr. Garfield says that this is so, that even if the trust does not wholly monopolize the beef trade, it does this in the larger cities. The trust slaughters 98 per cent. of the cattle slaughtered at the eight leading western centers. In these cities, therefore, cattle must be sold to the big packers exclusively—or practically so. Here is a chance to depress prices, whether it is improved or not. As to the selling of beef, the monopoly is quite as great. In New York the trust furnishes 75 per cent. of the beef, in Boston more than 85 per cent., in Philadelphia 60 per cent., in Pittsburg more than 50 per cent., and in other important cities from 50 to 90 per cent. of the total beef supplied. It is clearly a big seller all over the country.

This being so, it seems to us that it would have been well to go into the question of the relations between the packers and the retail butchers. It is said to be a fact that in many places it is the practice of the trust to protect the butchers in whatever monopoly they may have, to discourage or prevent any cutting of prices, and by assuring the butchers against any competition to enable them to hold up the price of beef without any reference to the high or low price of cattle. We all know that there is here a very powerful, even if only a partial monopoly; that for some reason the price of beef continues to be extremely high, and, in spite of Mr. Garfield's report, there is a general belief that there is a combination somewhere that is working against the interests of the people. We would say, further, that bookkeeping is a very uncertain business. You have to know on what basis charges and credits are made before you can know whether profits are large or small. When a corporation is engaged in many kinds of business, as in this case, it is easy to shift items in such a way as to make it appear that the profits of one business are either larger or smaller than they are. We remember how the anthracite coal roads mixed up coal prices and freight rates. On the whole, we fear that there is a good deal more in this beef trust than Mr. Garfield found.

POLITICAL POINTS AND NOTES.

—If it is really so that the beef trust is finding it hard to make ends meet, perhaps the sympathetic consumers would be glad to chip in.—Binghamton Leader.

—There seems to be no adequate excuse for trouble between rival presidential candidates at this stage of the game. Three and a half years of incubation would be apt to addle any boom.

—The Washington papers report that the fireworks at the inauguration surpassed all former displays! No doubt of it. This is a fireworks administration, anyhow.—Houston Post.

—Some people are beginning to fear that President Roosevelt may change his mind and decide to be a candidate again in 1908. Is it necessary to explain who these worried people are?—Chicago Record-Herald.

—Certainly. Porto Rico deserves the same attention that we are giving to the Philippines. If it were as far off it would get it, too. Being at the front door we feel sure it cannot run away, and so neglect the poor thing.—Brooklyn Eagle.

—The Standard Oil trust could survive such a report as that from Mr. Garfield's department.—Rochester Herald (ind.)

—Of course, we shall grant independence to the Filipinos when they are capable of self-government—we to be the judges—but Mr. Taft is confident that the contemplated action is far enough away for investors to feel reasonably safe in developing the natural resources of the islands. Altogether, the situation ought to look good to almost everybody, except, possibly, the Filipinos, whose views are still in course of training.—Indianapolis News (ind.)

OUTLOOK OF DEMOCRACY.

Missing Element at the Last Election May Decide the Next Campaign.

The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, a republican paper that is decidedly independent, and never gets anywhere near the position of party organ, locally or nationally, sees some chances of a democratic triumph in 1908. It refers to the fact, says the Washington Post, that numerous democrats in congress have rallied to Mr. Roosevelt's support in his attempts to curb the power of the trusts and secure government railway rate regulation, and says that "does not mean that the party must go out of business." It is the opinion of the Bulletin, as of every intelligent citizen of the United States, that "the country needs the services of a strong and coherent opposition in congress," and our contemporary tells the democratic party that it should be able to form such an opposition as a result of the congressional elections of 1906.

All that is true. Although a disheartening record of six successive defeats in congressional canvasses stares the party in the face, it really ought to have strong hopes of large gains, and possibly of a majority, in the next house. The election of 1874 effected a change scarcely less remarkable than that would be. In the middle of Grant's second term an immense republican majority in the house gave way to a democratic majority about as numerous. It is true that the republican party was in bad shape, and that conditions generally favored democratic gains. But there are a good many indications that in 1906 discord and demoralization will not be strangers in the republican household of faith.

At this time there is really no such thing as the national democratic party, but there are probably as many men who call themselves democrats as there ever were. Given an organization and stimulated with hope, the disorganized mass of democrats could get together and put up a strong fight. The democratic abdication after its great victory of 1892 has been and still is a misfortune to the country. The impotency which has rendered the so-called opposition powerless for good is responsible for much harm. Had the democrats been a real menace to republican ascendancy, there would have been fewer abuses of power and less neglect of duty. The Bulletin concludes its brief discussion with the remark that "the present condition of national politics is distinctly abnormal, and unless all the lessons of American history are at fault, it will not continue permanently. Sweeping as the last democratic defeat was, and following as it did on two other disastrous reverses, there is not reason why members of the party should regard its condition as hopeless." The most suggestive fact in this connection is that there were 3,092,000 voting citizens who did not show up at the polls last November. That element may decide the next campaign.

STANDARD OIL INQUIRY.

The Cautious Individual Will Not Grow Hilarious Until Further Developments.

For ways that are dark and tricks that are vain, Standard Oil is commonly credited with leading all other corporations, says the Detroit Free Press. This fact of itself tempers the enthusiasm which might otherwise be aroused over the proposed investigation of its course by the bureau of corporations. But when it is announced that the method of procedure will be similar to that followed in the inquiry into the operations of the alleged beef trust there comes a feeling of distrust that will not down.

The Standard Oil company has for years been one of the most flagrant offenders. Its unfair practices have been a matter of common knowledge, yet efforts to fasten any guilt upon it have been rewarded with an indifferent degree of success. Charging a corporation or individual with a crime is one thing; securing a conviction, even though the burden of proof may be upon the one against whom suspicion is directed, is an entirely different matter. The elusiveness of Standard Oil has long been recognized, and its ability in escaping the clutches of those who seek its downfall furnishes little encouragement in the present instance. Commissioner Garfield proposes making the inquiry into the operations of the oil trust as comprehensive and exhaustive as possible. He has the sanction of the administration and the assistance of a dozen or more states. Everyone will wish him well and share the hope that there may come out of the investigation something tangible upon which to base action against the trust. But in the face of the beef trust finding, the cautious individual will restrain his enthusiasm for the present and refrain from shouting until there have been further developments.

—Lyman Abbott says that "wealth is a danger." Forget it, Doctor, or rely on Commissioner Garfield to prove that it is a loss.—Albany Argus.

—Mr. Fairbanks is fearful that the man who succeeds Cortelyou may succeed also in upsetting his (Mr. Fairbanks's) presidential plans. Mr. Fairbanks wants to succeed somebody, too.—Binghamton Leader.

—Secretary Taft has made plain the administration attitude on Filipino independence. We are to give them their independence in a generation or so, not sooner, provided they ask for it and we want to give it to them. That ought to stop the clamor of those folks who have been demanding a definite statement of our plans for the archipelago.—Washington Post.

STOP! WOMEN,

AND CONSIDER THE ALL-IMPORTANT FACT

That in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private ills to a woman—a woman whose experience with woman's diseases covers a great many years.

You can talk freely to a woman when it is revolting to relate your private troubles to a man—besides a man does not understand—simply because he is a man.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing full well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty impels them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probably examinations of even their family physician. It is unnecessary. Without money or price you can consult a woman whose knowledge from actual experience is great.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation:

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established the eternal confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Out of the vast volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge that will help your case. She asks nothing in return except your good-will, and her advice has relieved thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.—Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Following we publish two letters from a woman who accepted this invitation. Note the result.

First letter.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"For eight years I have suffered something terrible every month with my periods. The pains are excruciating and I can hardly stand them. My doctor says I have ovarian and womb trouble, and I must go through an operation if I want to get well. I do not want to submit to it if I can possibly help it. Please tell me what to do. I hope you can relieve me."—Mrs. Mary Dimmick, 50th and B. Capitol Sts., Benning P.O., Washington, D.C.

Second letter.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"After following carefully your advice, and taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I am very anxious to send you my testimonial that others may know their value. You have done for me.

"As you know, I wrote you that my doctor said I must have an operation or I could not live. I then wrote you, telling you my ailments. I followed your advice and am entirely well. I can walk miles without an ache or a pain, and I owe my life to you and to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I wish every suffering woman would read this testimonial and realize the value of writing to you and your remedy."—Mrs. Mary Dimmick, 50th and B. Capitol Streets, Benning P. O., Washington, D. C.

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health so many women whose testimony is so unquestionable, you cannot well say, without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me." If you are ill, don't hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice—it is free and always helpful.

What Everybody Says.

Jamboree, Ky., April 3rd.—(Special)—"I suffered for years with my back," says Mr. J. M. Coleman, a well-known resident of this place. "Then I used Dodd's Kidney Pills and I have not felt a pain since. My little girl complained of her back. She used about one-half box of Dodd's Kidney Pills and she is sound and well."

It is thousands of statements like the above that show Dodd's Kidney Pills to be the one cure for Backache or any other symptom of deranged kidneys. For Backache is simply a sign that the Kidneys need help.

Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure Backache. They also always cure Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Dropsy, Rheumatism, Bladder and Urinary Troubles and Heart Disease. These are more advanced stages of kidney disease. Cure your Backache with Dodd's Kidney Pills and you need never fear them.

ABRAHAM AND NOAH

Scripture Authority:—"And Noah lived after the flood three hundred and fifty years."—Gen. 9:28.

TRANGE would it not have been if Abraham had not known Noah, for the latter lived 58 years after Abraham was born in Ur of the Chaldees? Strange would it not have been if the man who knew God, who had heard Him speak, who had obeyed Him and been miraculously delivered from death, should have not become the teacher of the man who longed to know God, and who was to become the father of God's chosen people and the ancestor of the Christ?

In Ur of the Chaldees, where idolatry was rife and where Terah, the father of Abraham, was given to the worship of the false gods, it could not be expected that Abraham would find the light which he sought. He must be driven forth, and in the story of "Abraham's Awakening" we have suggested how this crisis in his life may have come. The crisis came at the point of loyalty to the highest and best light which he possessed, and it is here that the crisis always comes. And Abraham fled from Ur and though he knew not whither he went, Providence directed his footsteps, as God will always do for those who seek Him.

Footsore and weary on the afternoon of the third day since he had left Ur, Abraham threw himself down at the foot of a great palm tree that grew by the river side, for he had journeyed along the path which skirted the Euphrates, fearing to strike off over the wide stretches of sand that extended off in the distance away from the refreshing waters. The scant provisions which he had taken with him had been supplemented with the fruit of the palms and other trees that grew luxuriantly along the river's side, but now as he partook of his last cakes he wondered what he would do for his next meal. He wondered how far he had come in the three days of his wandering and how much farther he would have to go to find a safe refuge.

He wondered what he was going to do and what was going to become of him. Ah! how in the dark hours of uncertainty the myriad questions rise specter-like before one's mind.

If Abraham had known how to pray to the unknown God, whom he longed to know, he would have done so. He knew how they called on the gods in the temple and besought their favor, but such would not do, he felt, in addressing the true, but unseen, God. Ah! if Abraham had only known it the attitude and longing of his heart to know the God of Whom he was as yet ignorant, and yet of Whom he had a vague consciousness, was real prayer and was heard and felt by God. Whose observing eye and unfailing ear never miss the faintest aspiration and breathing of the human heart towards Him. And God saw and understood. But Abraham as he sat there weary and discouraged knew it not. All seemed hopeless.

Suddenly he started and lifted his head from the folds of his tunic. Did he hear his name spoken? Impossible. But as he listened, again came the sound, and realizing now that he was not mistaken, he sprang to his feet and started in the direction of the voice.

"Ah, here you are," spoke the voice again, as he rounded the clump of bushes and came upon a stranger standing there.

Astonishment and perplexity rendered Abraham speechless and all he could do was to stare at the man. He had never seen him before and he was certain the man had never met him, and yet how did he know his name and discover that he was there. But to Abraham's questioning look, the other only simply said:

"I have come for you."

"For me," Abraham managed at last to exclaim, and yet his amazement was not so great as to make him insensible to the sweetness and comfort which came to his heart as he realized that some one in some way knew of him in his loneliness and need and was going to help him.

"For you," quietly responded the stranger. "This morning while in prayer the Lord God of Heaven and earth appeared in a vision to the aged patriarch, Noah, and spoke to him, saying: 'Send out into the way that leadeth down to Ur of the Chaldees, and there you shall find a man named Abraham, who seeketh Me. Him shalt thou instruct in the matters pertaining to the worship and service of the true God.' And I am come in obedience to my master's command. Let us hasten, for the day is far spent and we have some distance to go."

And so saying he turned and walked rapidly down the path, and Abraham obediently followed. His weariness was gone now, and his heart was stirred as he pondered over the words of the messenger. Surely this God who had spoken to Noah and told him of himself (Abraham) when he was yet a great way off must be the God whom he longed to know. Thus deep in thought, Abraham silently followed his companion and as the evening shadows were deepening into the darkness of the night they reached their destination. The sound of their footsteps announced their coming, and before they had reached the door it was flung open and before them stood the great, grizzled, gray-bearded form of Noah, bidding them welcome.

Abraham never forgot that meeting and he never ceased to find comfort and joy in the thought of the wonderful providences of God which had brought him into fellowship with the aged servant of God. The days which followed were wonderful days of privilege and opportunity for Abraham. Think of what it must have been to have sat at the feet of that brave, faithful servant of God, Noah. To have heard from his lips the wonderful story of the creation, as Noah himself had heard from the lips of Methuselah. To have heard of God's wonderful dealings with man, of their wanderings from Him and of His faithfulness and patience towards them; of Enoch's translation; of the building of the ark and of the miraculous preservation therein of Noah and his family, and of all the events as known to Noah since the repeopling of the earth.

It is all a wonderful story as we read the brief and concise account which God has given us, but what a privilege it must have been to have heard it all from the lips of a living witness. Some day in the other land when we are gathered home and meet the patriarchs of old such may be our privilege.

Abraham, whose heart had yearned to know the true God, had that longing satisfied and thus the closing years of Noah's life found their glorious and crowning mission in instructing the father of the Hebrew race, and Abraham, as he abode with Noah, rejoiced that God had counted him worthy of such honor and privilege.

And Noah's mission ended, and his work completed, God took him, while Abraham, prepared for the mission which he was yet to fulfill, turned his thoughts homeward, and thither he went shortly after Noah's death.

As he journeyed his thoughts ran back over the few short years since he had left Ur, and what contrasts were presented. He went out ignorant of God and came back with the joy and hope of His acquaintance. He went forth a friendless fugitive, he was returning as the friend of God. He had gone forth knowing no guiding hand, he was coming back because the hand of God was consciously leading him. Surely, the years of seclusion and retirement with Noah were well and profitably spent.

But what of Terah, his father, and the others whom he had left behind in Ur? How had it fared with them? Such questions had come to him repeatedly during his absence, and now as Abraham entered the city and neared his old home he wondered what he would find. Would they blame him for going? Would they be glad to see him?

As an answer to the last questioning thought, the door of the house opened and his father stepped forth and at the sight of him he sprang forward with a glad and startled cry which alarmed those within and soon Abraham was the center of an animated and joyful group. Until Abraham had gone they had not realized how much they looked up to and loved him, and how large a place he had filled in his quiet, earnest, thoughtful way in the home.

"But, Abraham, it will not do for you to remain in the city," exclaimed Terah, after the first surprise and excitement caused by Abraham's return had passed. "If the priest hears you are back I fear it will go hard with you, for we have felt his displeasure and the displeasure of the king, and have suffered much at their hands," the father continued in consternation.

"Father, the true God whom I have come to know and serve since leaving you, will protect me and thee and bring us out in safety, I feel sure," Abraham responded, quietly.

During this conversation, Sarah, who since her father, Haran's, death, had made her home with her grandfather, had been listening intently, and upon her face there played the mingled emotions of anxiety and fear, and love and hope, as she thought of the peril of Abraham, and reaching out her hand and placing it appealingly upon the arm of her grandfather, she said:

"May we not leave this place, and go where we need not fear the priest or king?"

A glad light sprang to the face of Abraham, for he had returned with the hope strong within his breast that he might bring his father to leave the corrupt city with its idolatrous practices, and the thought that this fair and beautiful woman would be glad to go with them stirred Abraham's heart with a new joy.

"Would you be willing to leave all the luxury and ease of this city, little one?" asked Abraham, fondly.

And by way of answer she drooped her pretty head, and a radiant flush suffused her face as she realized that she had unwittingly revealed her secret, for she had long loved her handsome uncle and admired his noble character and sterling worth. And his thoughts toward her had been those of deepest affection, which had strengthened during the years of his absence.

And so it came to pass that during the days which followed, Terah's household was in a fever of preparation for a wedding and a journey. "And Terah took Abraham, his son, and Lot, the son of Haran, his son's son, and Sarai, his daugbter-in-law, his son Abraham's wife, and they went forth with them from Ur of the Chaldees, to go into the land of Canaan; and they came unto Haran and dwelt there."

IN RELIGIOUS FIELDS.

Rev. Dr. Shadrach L. Bowman, of Newark, N. J., has just celebrated his half century in the ministry.

There are 17 Queen Esther circles in Rock River conference, and the prospect is that there soon will be several more.

The bishop of Durham thinks that it is no foolish emotionalism which causes some of the Welsh converts to take their old fathers out of the workhouses and give them a home.

Rev. Stephen Gladstone, recently inducted into the rectory of Barrowby, Lincolnshire, England, inherits his father's command of language. Like "the great commoner," too, he believes in simple, reverent and dignified services.

The late Bishop McLaren was a newspaper reporter in Pittsburg previous to studying for the ministry. It was while reporting the proceedings of a religious convention that he got his inspiration to study for a church career.

Who Owns the Railroads?

H. T. Newcomb, of the District of Columbia Bar, has compiled statistics sbowing that 5,174,718 depositors in savings banks of six eastern states are directly interested in the joint ownership of $442,354,086 of steam railroad securities, that insurance companies doing business in Massachusetts hold $845,889,038 of steam railroad stocks and bonds, and 74 educational institutions depend on $47,468,327 invested in similar securities for a portion of their income. Other fiduciary institutions own enough railroad securities to bring such holdings up to more than a billion and a half dollars, about one-sixth of the entire capital invested in railroad property. These investments represent the savings of the masses, there being twenty million holders of life insurance policies in the country, as many more of fire insurance policies, and an even greater number of depositors in banking and trust institutions, where investments are largely in railroad securities.

Truths that Strike Home

Your grocer is honest and—if he cares to do so—can tell you that he knows very little about the bulk coffee he sells you. How can he know, where it originally came from, how it was blended—or with what—or when roasted? If you buy your coffee loose by the pound, how can you expect purity and uniform quality?

LION COFFEE, the LEADER OF ALL PACKAGE COFFEES, is of necessity uniform in quality, strength and flavor. For OVER A QUARTER OF A CENTURY, LION COFFEE has been the standard coffee in millions of homes.

LION COFFEE is carefully packed at our factories, and until opened in your home, has no chance of being adulterated, or of coming in contact with dust, dirt, germs, or unclean hands.

Lieutenant George G. Warren, of No. 8 Chemical, Washington, D. C., says: "It's an honest fact that Doan's Kidney Pills did me a great lot of good, and if it were not true I would not recommend them. It was the strain of lifting that brought on kidney trouble and weakened my back, but since using Doan's Kidney Pills I have lifted 600 pounds and felt no bad effects. I have not felt the trouble come back since, although I had suffered for five or six years, and other remedies had not helped me at all."

REGARDS TO HARRY LEHR.

"Dance at Doc Clore's Tuesday night. Doc is a pleasant entertainer and his guests are always made to feel at home. A pleasant time was had by all.—Commissary correspondent Burlington (Ky.) Recorder."

Bro. W. L. Riddell:—You will be surprised on receipt of the above. I was looking over the Los Angeles Record of March 6, 1905, and came across the item, and being acquainted with all the parties, that is the paper and Doc, I thought I would send it to you. You see that the little old Boone County Recorder is widely known. I have been here 5 months and have seen no cold weather—hardly cold enough for an overcoat only since the rains commenced. We have had eighteen rains here since it began raining, the greatest number for any one season in the last 10 or 15 years, and everybody is expecting a good year and fine crops. They had the rainmaker, Hatfield, and is claimed that he brought these rains. He was to get $1,000 for eighteen rains to fall before June 1, 1905, and he has delivered the goods with prospects for as much more. Guess they will have to give him $2,000 to stop the raining, from the looks of things now. Give my regards to everybody, and tell Doc he got his name along ways from home. I will send you next Sunday's Examiner if I don't forget it. It is the only Democratic paper published in this city.

Yours very truly,
WILL S. GIBSON.

1022 Flower Street.

While the dirt roads in Boone county are not the best roads in the world, there is no question but what the overseers have improved their condition very much in the last few years by putting rock on the bad places. If the owners of the land along the public highways in the county would organize and donate as much as one week in every year to hauling stone for use on the roads, with the understanding that the overseers should have them broken and spread, paying for that work with road money they draw, the principal thoroughfares in the county would, in a few years, be put in pretty good condition. The road money each year would pay for the breaking and spreading of a very large quantity of rock, but when it has to be used to pay for the hauling, (and in many instances also the stone used), and the breaking and spreading it does not make much of a show. Boone county has a large mileage of road, much of which is hard to keep in repair, especially if there are many hard rains, and those interested in roads should inaugurate a more liberal policy towards them. The overseer comes in for much criticism, in many instances unjust, as he is expected to accomplish too much for the money he handles, while he receives not an act of encouragement from those to whose interest the work he does mostly redounds. The people of Boone county can, in one year's time, improve the public roads very materially by concerted action along the line above indicated, but so long as they continue to pay their road tax which is insufficient for the purpose so many expect it to accomplish, and not are willing to supplement it in the least by placing on the roadside any of the necessary material which nature has so abundantly provided, so long will the money now spread over the roads in the county, be to a considerable extent wasted. It takes money and labor to make good roads, and the overseers have not the command of a sufficiency of neither nor both of these to accomplish much. Help the overseers by putting in some of your spare time hauling stone to be used on the roads.

On the 25th of last December, Marcus Barnard shot and wounded Jesse Bowman, while out hunting. Young Bowman died of the wound in about a week. It has been understood all along that the shooting was purely accidental, but one day last week the father of the unfortunate young man had Barnard arrested, charged with homicide. He was brought before Judge Cason, who admitted him to bail in the sum of $1,000 for his appearance before the grand jury. Jonas Stephens went on his bond.

It has been the opinion of a great many people for years past that the school law should be so revised as to require but one trustee in each district. Last Hope Vanished.

When leading physicians said that W. M. Smithard, of Pekin, Ia., had incurable consumption, his last hope vanished; but Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, kept him out of his grave. The French government's statement of last years' receipts from the tobacco monopoly shows a clear profit of 355,000 francs. A curious feature of the statistics is that the largest sum is derived from the sale of two-cent cigars, the proceeds of which would suffice to build three new battleships.

His excellency, the viceroy of the Two Kuang, at Kuelin a short time ago, at the execution of a famous rebel chief, stepped forward and caught some of the blood and drank it. Whether he wished to become impregnated with the courage of the robber, or whether it was a feeling of revenge that prompted the act, can only be surmised.

Already there are two special courses of instruction provided for automobiles, one at Aschaffenburg, Germany, and the other at Brussels, Belgium.

The founder of the Red Cross movement, Henri Dunant, is still alive at the age of 76. He resides near Lake Constance, Switzerland, and is in poor health. His plan for aiding the wounded was for years scoffed at in Europe as the conception of a mere crank, and the credit of being the first ruler to consider it sympathetic ally and to adopt it in his army is due to Napoleon III. of France. Afterward at the Geneva conference of 1864, the nations of the world accepted M. Dunant's proposals.

On a piece of birch bark, by the light of a tiny oil taper, Robert McNeill, who laid down his life in the quest for riches, scrawled a last message to his loved ones and bequeathed to them the wealth that was his. Vio'a and Freda Finn, of Spokane, Wash., daughters of the deceased sister of McNeill, are the ones to whom the dying man left his property. They were notified by long-distance telephone.

Charles F. Gilpatrick has no patience with those persons who complain that they can not eat because they have no teeth. Mr. Gilpatrick has just had five teeth pried out of his jaws, so that food may be inserted between them to keep his interior machinery going. Mr. Gilpatrick is an ossified man, and his jaws have become locked shut by the hardening of the joints upon which they swung. On the poor farm in Hiram township, Maine, where he is being cared for, Mr. Gilpatrick is spoken of as "the petrified man."

Despite all talk as to the existence of race prejudice in this country, the number of colored men of character and ability who are winning tributes of respect from their white fellow-citizens is steadily increasing. The Grand Army of the Republic of Massachusetts has recently elected as department commander a colored veteran. The man thus honored by the comrades side by side with whom he fought in the civil war is J. H. Wolf, of Boston, who, because of this recognition, will be conspicuous at the next G. A. R. encampment at Denver.

On March 5 last, Secretary James Wilson completed eight years' service as secretary of agriculture. He has been reappointed, for a third term, by President Roosevelt. Should the secretary keep his seat to the end of the present administration he will have 12 continuous years of service in one cabinet office to his credit. This record has not been equaled since the early days of the republic. PUBLIC TRIP ENDED.

The President Leaves For the Hunting Grounds.

In the Meantime the Seat of the United States Government Has Been Temporarily Established in a Fort Worth Hotel.

Fort Worth, Tex., April 10.—In a suite of rooms on the parlor floor of the Hotel Worth, in this city, the seat of the United States government has been temporarily established. The official mail intended for the eyes of President Roosevelt is directed to this apartment and in the absence of the president, who is hunting coyotes and jack rabbits over the Kiowa-Comanche reservation in Oklahoma, is given attention by Secretary Loeb. Most of this business will be acted upon by the secretary and directed to various departments in Washington where it originated. That which requires the personal supervision of the president will have to wait until communication will be had with the hunting party. After delivering the president into the hands of his western friends, who have undertaken to furnish him with wholesome recreation for a few days, the official escort boarded the presidential special and returned to this city.

IN THE CHINA SEA.

Fifty-one Russian War Vessels Have Passed Singapore.

The most important fighting vessels of the squadron, including the battleships Kniaz Souveroff, Alexander III., Borodino and Orel, with their complement of cruisers, torpedo boat destroyers, etc., did not arrive and their whereabouts is unknown.

St. Petersburg, April 10.—There is reason to believe that Vice Adm. Rojestvensky's entrance into the China sea has been followed by orders for the cruisers Gromoboi, Rossia and Bogatyr, which have been ready for some time at Vladivostok, to put to sea. Whether it is the intention to send them south immediately or to hold them in the vicinity of Vladivostok is not known. Their appearance outside the roadstead of Vladivostok would constitute a potential threat against Adm. Togo's rear which will compel the retention in or dispatch of a number of heavy fighting ships to Japanese waters. Thus Adm. Togo seems to be virtually placed between two fires.

WORTH REMEMBERING.

There are three entirely different kinds of ingredients used in making the three different varieties of baking powders on the market, viz: (1) Mineral-Acid or Alum, (2) Bone-Acid or Phosphate, and (3) Cream of Tartar made from grapes. It is important, from the standpoint of health, to know something about these ingredients, and which kind is used in your baking powder.

(1) Mineral-Acid, or Alum, is made from a kind of clay. This is mixed with diluted oil of vitriol and from this ——— a product is obtained which is alum. Alum is cheap; costs about two cents a pound, and baking powder made with this Mineral-Acid sells from 10 to 25c. a pound.

(2) Bone-Acid, or Phosphate, is the basis of phosphate baking powders and the process is fully described in the patents issued to a large manufacturer of a phosphate powder. The U. S. Patent Office Report gives a full and exact description, but the following extract is enough:

"Burned bones, after being ground, are put into freshly diluted oil of vitriol and with continual stirring and in the following proportion," etc.

(3) Cream of Tartar exists in all ripe grapes, and flows with the juice from the press in the manufacture of wine. After the wine is drawn off the tartar is scraped from the cask, boiled with water, and crystals of Cream of Tartar, white and very pure, separate and are collected. It differs in no respect from the form in which it originally existed in the grape. Cream of Tartar, then, while the most expensive, is the only ingredient that should be used in a baking powder to act upon the soda, as its wholesomeness is beyond question. Cream of Tartar baking powders sell at about 40 to 50 cents a pound.

Such are the facts, and every one, careful of the health of the family, should remember this rule:—Baking powders selling from 10 to 25 cents a pound are made of Mineral-Acids; those selling from 20 to 30 cents of Bone-Acid; and those from 40 to 50 cents of Cream of Tartar made from grapes.

A WOMAN WHO TRIED TO RUN A REPUBLIC

MRS. ELLA R. READER, THE WOMAN IN THE SANTO DOMINGO CASE.

FROM TYPEWRITER TO DIPLOMACY

Interesting Story Revealed by the Senate's Failure to Pass Treaty with President Morales—Agreed to Place Country on Sound Footing in Return for Important Concessions.

Washington.—Imagine a treaty between two republics, one of them your own, negotiated by a woman. Then imagine her after the successful conclusion of the pact, controlling the finances of the other party to the agreement, paying its debts and virtually running the country, and you have the goal for which one of the "gentler sex" was recently striving. One would almost as soon expect to see a woman seated in the president's cabinet as mixing in such international affairs.

Would Finance a Republic.

Nevertheless had the plans of Mrs. Ella Rawls Reader successfully matured she would to-day be financing the republic of San Domingo and attempting to place the country on good terms with its neighbors; but when everything seemed to be progressing favorably her deal was rudely nipped by the failure of the United States senate to ratify the treaty which had been prepared.

It was just before the adjournment of the special session of the senate that Senator Morgan, of Alabama, made public some interesting information regarding the San Dominican treaty and which has served to show that Mrs. Reader, although practically unheard of before, is without doubt one of the most daring promoters of the day. She is a woman with a remarkably interesting history. Her husband is Athole B. Reader, formerly of New Zealand, Morocco and Ceylon, but now a citizen of the United States. He has ably assisted his shrewd wife in her undertakings.

Life of Mrs. Reader.

Mrs. Reader is said to be 30 years old, but she looks younger. Her complexion is a wonder; her figure is girlish. She was born in Marion, Ala., of a family closely acquainted with Senator Morgan and other statesmen.

At 15 she married a man named Phillips, who was a clerk in a candy store in Birmingham, Ala. Their married life was unhappy and they separated, Phillips coming to Chicago, where he committed suicide in a hotel.

Thirteen years ago she went to New York to make a living as a stenographer. Within three years she was the head and sole manager of the largest typewriting establishment in New York, with 40 girls working for her. Her offices were besieged by men who had important work to be done accurately. From an expert operator she became a superintendent of operators. In 1896, according to her story, she was sought by Senator Scott and Congressman Manley, then bossing the McKinley campaign, to take charge of certain private correspondence.

After that work piled in from Wall street. Several important assignments came to her (she was then Miss Ella Rawls) from the city. For reporting the work of the Venezuelan boundary commission she was endorsed, she says, by the late William L. Strong, J. Kennedy Tod, and others. Everything was prosperous for the young woman who had come from the south with nothing but ambition.

She went to London in 1899 and became connected with the firm of J. G. White & Co. She had not wasted her time in Wall street. The sultan of Jahore came to London. He had up his sleeve the contract for the building of the Jahore railroad, costing $5,000,000. Miss Rawls met the sultan socially. J. G. White & Co. got the railroad contract.

The tuppenny tube had been built in London, but was troubled with vibration. There was a call for somebody who could cure this evil. Miss Rawls was associated with the Sprague Multiple Control company. She took a look at the vibrations, and in 1901 the Sprague company got the contract for stopping the shudders.

Her Second Husband.

Miss Rawls was still in the employ of J. G. White & Co. when, in 1901, she met and was won by Mr. Reader. His career had been quite as interesting as her own. He was born in New Zealand, a British subject. He is rather short, very dark, with black eyes and mustache. He could pass as a South American any time. He was private secretary to Sir Charles Ewan Smith the British minister to Morocco, in 1892. In 1897 he became private secretary to Sir West Ridgeway, governor of Ceylon. Various circumstances caused him to become familiar with affairs in Peru, and while he was still interested he met Miss Rawls in London and married her. Together they have worked since then, and together they now stand. Mr. Reader has the deep mind, Mrs. Reader the quick wit.

They worked out a great scheme of mining improvement in Peru and interested the western copper millionaire, James B. Haggin. According to Mr. Reader, he and his wife were to have 10 per cent. commission for promoting this scheme and, according to the same story, the plans went through beautifully, except that the 10 per cent. was not paid.

The Peru financial arrangement is said to have stopped a threatened revolution in that country.

Dealings with San Domingo.

This is the early history of the Readers and brings them up to the time they began their dealings with San Domingo. Their statements regarding their dealing with President Morales concerning a treaty with this country, and their relations with William Nelson Cromwell, the well-known New York lawyer, who played such a prominent part in the Panama deal, make interesting reading. It is said that they are more than a little suspicious that it was Mr. Cromwell who betrayed their dealings with the distressed republic to the Washington government and caused the bargain they thought they had made to be knocked in the head.

"It was in the fall of 1904," said Mr. Reader, "that one of the secret agents of President Morales, located in the city of New York, was a young man named Perez, a native of San Domingo.

"These secret agents, by the way, who represent Gen. Morales in the United States, principally reside in New York. There are always more than one, and they are called secret agents because, although representing the same government, they are nearly always unknown to each other. The reason of the existence of these secret agents need not be stated here, but they are considered necessary to the safety of every president of Santo Domingo.

"The gentleman in question was a friend of ours. At this time we were engaged in exploiting mining property which we owned in Peru. Mrs. Reader, at that time, had been invited by the president of Peru to act as his agent in this country, and the papers appointing her fiscal agent were being prepared by William Nelson Cromwell.

"She was about to go to Peru with these papers when she was requested by Perez, as he claimed, with the consent of Gen. Morales, to try and have me interest myself in the affairs of Santo Domingo. He stated to me that he had heard of the success of Mrs. Reader in conciliating both sides of a revolutionary outbreak in Peru and practically establishing a government there without a civil war. We could not at that time take up the Santo Domingo suggestions, owing to our Peruvian engagements, but, Perez and Gen. Morales continuing their invitations and stating that they desired us to represent them in this country as intermediaries with the United States, we finally consented to do so.

"Upon the suggestion of Mr. Perez the papers for that purpose were prepared, and at the invitation of Gen. Morales I prepared to proceed with Mr. Perez to Santo Domingo to have the papers executed, acquaint myself with the conditions, and receive his instructions.

Says Cromwell Knew of Deal.

"The papers were submitted by us to Mr. Cromwell for his approval, and it became necessary to explain the conditions to him under which we were led to consider these agreements. All the things which are set out in this statement were made known to Mr. Cromwell and talked over at length with him, and he advised us that he considered it was a favorable enterprise, that these papers would place a great deal of power in our hands and that he had no doubt that the concessions which they were promised by the Dominican government in return for our services would be of great value and could be readily exploited with capital that could easily be procured in this country, and that our official status and our friends in this country would enable us to deal without any difficulty with the heads of the United States government.

"Mr. Cromwell also promised that on my return with these papers properly executed he would take me to Washington and introduce me to Mr. Hay; he explained to me, especially with respect to the desire of the United States to procure the bay of Samana as a coaling station, what authorizations and instructions I should especially see that I got from the Dominican government so as to enable him with full and complete credentials to negotiate with the United States government for the sale of that bay to it.

"With these papers I left New York, accompanied by Mr. Perez, on December 21, 1904. These papers provided for Mrs. Reader to be the fiscal agent of the Dominican government in the United States, and authorized and empowered her to negotiate with the United States government for the sale of the bay of Samana and for all differences between the Dominican government and the United States and other foreign governments, with full power of attorney to represent the Dominican government.

"It was arranged with Mr. Cromwell that as soon as these papers were signed by President Morales the signatures should be verified by the United States minister at Santo Domingo, and that as Mrs. Reader would then be the authorized fiscal agent of the Dominican government in the United States they should be cabled to her and to the authorities at Washington and that Mr. Cromwell and Mrs. Reader should then proceed to Washington and commence negotiations while awaiting the arrival of the papers and my return from Santo Domingo. It was understood with Mr Cromwell that at Mrs. Reader's request Gen. Morales should appoint him her legal adviser as the fiscal agent of the Dominican government and himself be the counsel for the government of that republic.

Morles Willing to Negotiate.

"Mr. Perez and I arrived at Santo Domingo on December 30, 1904, and were met on board of the boat by Gen. Morales, who gave us a hearty welcome. It was not long before I had a private talk with the president and to the authorities at Washington and that Mr. Cromwell and Mrs. Reader should then proceed to Washington and commence negotiations while awaiting the arrival of the papers and my return from Santo Domingo. It was understood with Mr Cromwell that at Mrs. Reader's request Gen. Morales should appoint him her legal adviser as the fiscal agent of the Dominican government and himself be the counsel for the government of that republic.

Morles Willing to Negotiate.

"Mr. Perez and I arrived at Santo Domingo on December 30, 1904, and were met on board of the boat by Gen. Morales, who gave us a hearty welcome. It was not long before I had a private talk with the president thanked him for his invitation to come to Santo Domingo, sent through Perez, explained the reasons why Mrs. Reader could not accompany me, and told him we were not only assured of an immediate hearing at Washington, but of the strongest financial backing in the United States to deal with the concessions which he proposed to give.

"I was presented to Mr. Prichard, his minister of public works, and to Mr. Sanchez, his minister of foreign affairs. I had an extended conversation on the matter in hand with Mr. Sanchez, and the president invited me to visit him again in a day or two.

"On New Year's eve I attended the ball given at the Union club. President Morales was at the ball, and so was United States Minister Dawson. The next day, Sunday, I spent in preparing with greater perfection of detail the documents. On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday I had interviews with the president at his house, and with his foreign minister at the palace, and we discussed everything. The foreign minister and I were instructed to draw up the necessary papers for signature by the president and his various secretaries of state, and it was arranged also to obtain the signatures of the president and secretary of congress.

"These matters occupied a week, and on January 6 I cabled Mrs. Reader in New York: 'Expect to obtain everything in about a week.'

Deal Is Called Off.

"On that very day Mr. Perez learned that the president had received a communication from United States Minister Dawson, and had in consequence paid him a visit, but what the nature of the interview was I did not learn. On Monday, January 9, when I called at the place, Mr. Sanchez informed me that they had a communication from Mr. Dawson not to proceed with my negotiations, but to deal direct with Washington.

"I asked him if this was not very sudden and unexpected, and he seemed confused and anxious to avoid giving offense.

"I saw the president and asked him why he had proceeded so far with me, had accepted everything, and had gone so far as to make out the telegram appointing Mrs. Reader as his fiscal agent and representative in Washington, if he had not intended to complete his arrangements.

"President Morales also seemed confused and unable to give a satisfactory answer."

As to the cause of the sudden discontinuance of the negotiations and the rejection of the treaty by the United States senate, several explanations have been given. Mr. Cromwell declares that he is not and has never been interested in any San Dominican affairs.

It is the verdict of a great many of the most prominent newspapers that the Readers would have made an utter failure of their undertaking, but they have never been able to convince the two daring promoters of that. Mr. Reader declares: "We would have put Santo Domingo on a new financial footing. The country would have no more trouble with foreign countries, its debts would have been attended to and we would have arranged a treaty with the United States."

KITCHEN FURNISHINGS.

Should Be Neat and Attractive Enough to Worker Therein to Minister to Her Content.

The value of attractive kitchen utensils is not often appreciated. Housewives give their servants battered saucepans and tins, and expect them to keep these spotless and to take pleasure in cooking with them. A servant doing kitchen work generally takes interest in it if she has utensils in good condition to work with. One actually enjoys washing dishes in a brand-new dishpan.

If the kitchen itself is a neat, picturesque room with snowy curtains at the windows, neatly oiled floor, clean, glazed paper on the walls and everything comfortable and convenient, almost any servant will feel an inspiration to keep it in that condition.

In furnishing a kitchen one may, on the other hand, make the mistake of having too many utensils and too many patented contrivances. The average servant girl, who is only used to the simplest and most ordinary utensils at home, will invariably leave the patented things on the shelf and use any common makeshift.

Though the kitchen should be simply furnished there is no reason why the things a servant does use cannot be picturesque and in good condition. Nowadays there are many charming mixing bowls, etc., in blue and white earthenware, that look better on the shelves than the common ware, and are often just as cheap.

It is wise not to have too much kitchen china for the servants to use at mealtime. There should, of course, be a sufficient supply, but if there are too many to draw from the servants will never report breakages to the mistress, and it is said that some lazy servants will not take the trouble to wash their own dishes, but leave them in some out-of-the-way corner of the cupboard until the whole supply is used.

It is sometimes asserted that because a servant girl is a human being there should be pictures, etc., in the kitchen, a nice rug on the floor and a screen before the stove or sink. Any experienced housekeeper knows, however, that this is not practical, and no sensible servant will be bothered with things purely ornamental, always in the way and always collecting dust or grease. A kitchen is merely a workshop. After working hours are over the average servant would rather sit or rest elsewhere, and some place ought to be provided for her. Where several servants they can visit in the "servants' dining-room," and they should have the pleasure of making that as cozy as they wish.—Boston Budget.

TO REDUCE ONE'S WEIGHT

No Matter How Much Avordupois One Has Strict Attention to Diet Will Lessen the Burden.

If you are anxious to get thinner, you may indulge in good and appetizing food to an unlimited extent, and yet, if you obey the simplest rules, you will steadily lose flesh. Indeed, the result is beautifully certain. Would you, for example, like to lose a pound and a half in the first 24 hours, one pound the next day, and an average of three-quarters of a pound thereafter? If so, you have only to follow these instructions:

Eat meat, any kind you want, and plenty of it, but only the lean part. Eat eggs, as many of them as you like. Eat all the fruit you can stuff, barring only bananas. Eat every vegetable, excepting potatoes and corn. But cut out pastry, bread and sweets.

You see, meat fat does not go to make muscle or blood. Such of it as is not consumed as fuel is converted into fat in the body. The same is true of sugar and of wheat and the other cereal grains. Therefore it is that these things must be avoided, if one desires a shrinkage of the belt. But it is an immense consolation to be able to indulge ad libitum in a diet sufficiently varied and at the same time to lose flesh right along.

Nearly all vegetables, fortunately, are mainly water, and water, of course, doesn't fatten. Beets, for example, and carrots, celery, tomatoes, cauliflower, cabbages, lettuce, cucumbers, eggplant and turnips may be eaten to an unlimited extent—a variety surely sufficient for anybody. All fruits, except bananas, are in the same category, and for this reason a person threatened with overplumpness may consume them in unrestricted quantities. As for meats (if lean), as well as eggs, they are muscle and blood makers, and could never contribute fat to the most corpulently inclined individual.

Peach Compote.

Use either fresh, canned or dried peaches, and stew until very soft; sweeten well and allow them to simmer in the water in which they are cooked; then remove from the fire, and when cold strain and turn into moulds of rice. Make the moulds by lining ordinary cacups with boiled rice and leaving a deep impression in the center, this depression to be filled with the peach mixture, which may require a little gelatine if it does not "boil down" to the right consistency.

Coffee Jelly.

One-half box of gelatin or two tablespoonfuls of granulated gelatin, one-half cupful of cold water, one cupful of boiling water, one-third cupful of sugar and two cupfuls of boiled coffee. Make the same as orange jelly and serve with sugar and cream.

Dyspepsia of Women

ABSOLUTELY NEEDLESS AGONY

Caused by Uterine Disorders and Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

A great many women suffer with a form of indigestion or dyspepsia which does not seem to yield to ordinary treatment. While the symptoms seem to be similar to those of ordinary indigestion, yet the medicines universally prescribed do not seem to restore the patient's normal condition.

Mrs. Pinkham claims that there is a kind of dyspepsia that is caused by a derangement of the female organism, and which, while it causes a disturbance similar to ordinary indigestion, cannot be relieved without a medicine which not only acts as a stomach tonic, but has peculiar uterine-tonic effects also.

As proof of this theory we call attention to the case of Mrs. Maggie Wright, Brooklyn, N. Y., who was completely cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after everything else had failed. She writes:

"For two years I suffered with dyspepsia which so degenerated my entire system that I was unable to attend to my daily duties. I felt weak and nervous, and nothing that I ate tasted good and it caused a disturbance in my stomach. I tried different dyspepsia cures, but nothing seemed to help me. I was advised to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial, and was happily surprised to find that it acted like a fine tonic, and in a few days I began to enjoy and properly digest my food. My recovery was rapid, and in five weeks I was a well woman. I have recommended it to many suffering women."

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement, or has such a record of cures of female troubles, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The Patient's Difficulty.

Doctor—But surely you can locate the pain.

Patient—That's just it, doctor; I can't. I'm so thin that I can't tell whether it's in my chest or in my back.—New Yorker.

For Quick Relief from Rheumatism Pains, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, Weakness, Catarrh, or Blood and Nerve Diseases use Pusheck's Kuro. It has no bad after effects, is perfectly safe, does not contain any injurious ingredients, relieves those who are overworked or exhausted, dispels headache, induces restful sleep. You can depend upon it every time. No other medicine like it.

It has been decided by the courts of New Jersey that if a householder asks his cook to run out and get liver and bacon for breakfast, and she takes a tumble on the ice while running, he is liable for doctor's bill and damages. The prudent man will wake up his wife and send her.—Chicago Daily News.

Contentment comes neither by culture nor by wishing; it is a reconciliation with one's lot, growing out of an inward superiority to our surroundings.—J. K. McLean.

DYSPEPSIA YIELDS

A NINE YEARS' VICTIM FINDS A REMEDY THAT CURES.

For Two Years Too Weak to Work—A Dozen Doctors Had Tried to Check Disease. Treatment That Succeeded.

All sufferers from weaknesses or disorders of the digestive organs will read with lively interest the story of the complete recovery of Mrs. Nettlie Darvoux from chronic dyspepsia which was thought to be incurable.

"To be ailing for nine years is not a very pleasant experience," said Mrs. Darvoux, when asked for some account of her illness. "For two years I was critically ill and could not attend to my household duties, and at one time I was so weak and miserable that I could not even walk. My trouble was chronic dyspepsia. I became extremely thin and had a sallow complexion. I had no appetite and could not take any food without suffering great distress."

"Did you have a physician?"

"Yes, I took medicine from a dozen different doctors, but without getting any benefit whatever."

"How did you get on the track of a cure?"

"A book about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills was thrown in our doorway one day. My husband picked it up and read it through carefully. He was so impressed by the statements of those who had been cured by that remedy that he immediately bought three boxes of the pills and insisted on my taking them."

"Did they help you at once?"

"I began to feel better the second day after I started to use the pills and by the time I had taken the three boxes I was entirely well. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can cure even when doctors fail, and they cure thoroughly, for a long time has passed since my restoration to health and I know it is complete and lasting."

The surest way to make sound digestion is to give strength to the organs concerned. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills give new vigor to the blood. No other remedy yields such radical results.

"The RECORDER struck the keynote on the public road problem, last week," said a friend the other day, and he continued: "The suggestions contained in the article of last week are well worthy the consideration of the land owners, as by a concerted action along the lines mapped out great improvements would be made in the public roads in a manner that would inconvenience no one, neither in money nor in labor. The dirt roads of to day are distinctively the farmers' roads, and they are more interested in their condition than anybody else. The time has come when the farmers in Boone county are in competition with the farmers of the entire country in the markets, and they cannot afford to have their produce virtually under lock and key several months in every year because of the impassable condition of their roads, when nature, in her generosity, has provided them with a means by which to avoid such a condition of affairs. In many sections where the topography of the country is no more favorable for maintaining roads than is that of Boone county, good roads are to be found, and they are the result of a liberal policy pursued by the owners of real estate, who are the persons at last to reap the benefits derived from having roads over which the business centers to which they haul their produce can be reached at any time of the year. Thousands upon thousands of perches of stone in Boone county have waited for centuries to be put to use. This immense wealth of stone is accessible to the roads and is at the disposal of those who would be benefitted by its use thereon. These people have the teams, and considerable spare time every year, for placing large quantities of stone along the road side, to be broken and spread with the money which they are required to pay annually as road tax, which being supplemented with a few days' spare time and the labor of idle teams, would soon make a showing on the public roads which those who united in such work would forever after be proud. If the land owners of Boone county will take advantage of the means at their command, it will be but a short time until the principal roads in the county will be in good condition. Of course in some places the roads will have to be taken out of creeks or branches before they can be improved, but that is a small matter and will be no obstacle when there is manifested a general disposition to make a practical solution of the road problem in Boone county."

Misses Olga Kirkpatrick and Artie Hughes saw a strange but beautiful sight about 11 o'clock on Monday night of last week. They were at the dance at the Boone House, and while standing in the door on the east side of the dining room their attention was attracted by a flash which they supposed was lightning, but upon looking up they saw a large ball of fire moving in the sky, and behind it a short distance was a very bright spot of a considerable area. The ball of fire disappeared as did also the beautiful, bright space, giving the young ladies only a few seconds in which to witness a magnificent and unusual display in the region above. They reported to the other guests what they had seen, but no one considered it as an omen of anything unusual and the dance proceeded without interruption.

There seems to be a disposition among the Burley tobacco growers of this county to raise as large crops as possible this year and not allow a single plant bed to be sown for a planting in 1906. We fully realize the importance of this agitation, as it seems the Burley growers have come to the last ditch, will perfect their organization and hold the '05 crop until they double the price. The Burley tobacco has the lands denuded of timber, impoverished the soil and put the farmer "on the hog." In a few years more there will be no new land soil, as the present will be worn out in the cultivation of this product that is sucking out the fertility of the soil. —Carrollton News.

Mrs. Mary Watts, widow of the late William Watts, of Francesville neighborhood, and mother of assessor Owen S. Watts, died last Friday night. Mrs. Watts was an old citizen of this county being close to 80 years of age. She was a daughter of the late William Whitaker and a half sister of Mrs. W. T. Snyder, Thos. S. and Walter Whitaker. The funeral was preached at Sand Run Baptist church, of which she had been a member for many years, at 10 a. m. last Monday by Rev. M. D. Early.

The sudden death of Reuben Hager, of East Bend, last Friday morning, was a shock to the entire neighborhood. He had gotten his horse to take his daughter to school, and was stricken by heart disease. His wife saw him when he fell from his horse. Mr. Hager was about 60 years of age, and was a good citizen and a very prosperous farmer.

CURES STOMACH TROUBLES

THE body gets its life from food properly digested. Healthy digestion means pure blood for the body, but stomach troubles arise from carelessness in eating and stomach disorders upset the entire system. Improperly masticated food sours on the stomach, causing distressing pains, belching and nausea. When over-eating is persisted in the stomach becomes weakened and worn out and dyspepsia claims the victim.
Thedford's Black-Draught cures dyspepsia. It frees the stomach and bowels of congested matter and gives the stomach new life. The stomach is quickly invigorated and the natural stimulation results in a good appetite, with the power to thoroughly digest food.
You can build up your stomach with this mild and natural remedy. Try Thedford's Black-Draught today. You can buy a package from your dealer for 25c. If he does not keep it, send the money to The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn., and a package will be mailed you.

There is one thing certain about the weather—it will not be so severe any more this spring as to make ice that will do to put up.

When the weather began to assume a winterish tinge, last week, some of the early gardeners wished they had not planted so much garden.

Tobacco plants are coming on rapidly, and the crop will be pitched early this year if the growers get their ground ready, and the necessary season shows up.

The papers asking that a rural mail route from Burlington to Bellevue via Waterloo and McVille, have been forwarded to the post-office department at Washington.

The weather began being a little erratic last week, but some March weather should be expected this month, as March did very little business at the old stand this year.

Chas. Glore and Dick Tanner, of Hebron, came over one day last week, and were not in town long until they began painting things red, having the contract to paint F. P. Walton's large house.

While it was snowing last Thursday evening some commenced growling about having March weather in April. It will be impossible for April to furnish satisfactory weather after March put up such a fine quality.

The old saw failed to cut'er this time. March came in like a lamb and went out the very same way. In fact the weather of last mouth was finer than that of any March in the last 169 years according to our best recollection.

A committee is now soliciting special premiums for the next fair at Florence, which will be of the same standard as that attained by the 1904 exhibition, which, as a county fair, had few equals, while there was none better.

Frightful Suffering Relieved.

Suffering frightfully from the virulent poisons of undigested food, C. C. Grayson, of Lula, Miss., took Dr. King's New Life Pills, "with the result," he writes, "that I was cured." All stomach and bowel disorders give away to their tonic, laxative properties. 25c at all druggists.

The popularity of the rural mail route that leaves Burlington continues to grow, and those who are being served would raise a tremendous row if an effort should be made to discontinue it. Having the mail brought to the door or within a reasonable distance thereto, is a convenience you have to enjoy to appreciate.

Drs. Wolfstine, of Cincinnati; Duncan, of Burlington, and Senior, of Florence, held a post mortem on the remains of Albert Snyder, last Friday morning. The examination disclosed a large tumor on the lower part of one lobe of the brain, which was the cause of the young man's long and intense suffering, ending in death.

After an illness of five months, Albert Snyder, oldest son of Superintendent of Schools, D. M. Snyder and wife, died at 5:30 o'clock a. m., last Thursday morning in the 26th year of his age. The young man was taken sick five months ago, and was an intense sufferer most of the time until about six weeks ago, when he got better and continued to improve until about a week before his death, when the disease appeared again and resulted in death. On the Saturday before his death he and his mother were out driving, although he was suffering with his head some. On Wednesday his suffering was severe and continued until the end came on Thursday morning.

Albert Snyder was the most exemplary young man in this neighborhood, and had started out to make a useful man of himself. He had been an employe of the German National Bank of Cincinnati, for several months and was, on account of his industry, regularity of habits, and pleasant disposition, a favorite with the officials of the bank, whose perfect confidence he enjoyed, and who often called upon him to perform some of the most responsible duties that came up in the course of the bank's very extensive business. He was a prominent young member of the Ninth street Baptist church, Cincinnati, and was beloved by the members of his church, especially by the younger element, who mourn with the bereaved family, the wounded hearts of which only time can heal.

The remains were placed in the vault in Odd-Fellows' cemetery, to await a final interment.

The funeral services were conducted at 2 p. m., last Friday in Burlington Baptist church, by his pastor, Rev. J. H. Hergit, of Ninth Street Baptist church, Cincinnati. The discourse was full of comfort for the bereaved family and friends, and a beautiful tribute to the young man, whose life is worthy the highest emulation by both young and old.

The pall-bearers were Irvin Rue, Otto Crisler Luther Adams, Cecil Gaines, Percy McCrone and Frank Luck, the two latter of Cincinnati.

Captain Jackson's Grays have met the enemy and are theirs, being taken into camp, last Saturday, at the Burlington ball park, by a score of 8 to 3, by the Belleview boys. Conner and Sandford were the battery for the visitors and with some assistance rendered by Brady at short and Cook at first, won an easy victory. Conner mixed up his slow and fast balls and curves and slants in a manner that the Grays made only two hits off him, while he fielded his position in a faultless manner. If he keeps up the pace he struck last Saturday he will be the champion pitcher of the county this year. Walton, Gray and Hogan did the battery work for the Grays, but Walton was given miserable support the five innings he pitched, but the boys pulled themselves together in the last four innings and gave Gray good support. Earl Smith was the only Gray that covered himself with glory, last Saturday. In one inning he retired the visitors on three long flies to center, one catch being a very difficult capture. The Grays go to Bellevue next Saturday afternoon to play the same team, and will try to redeem their reputation.

The fiscal court was in session, on Tuesday of last week, but did no business of importance.

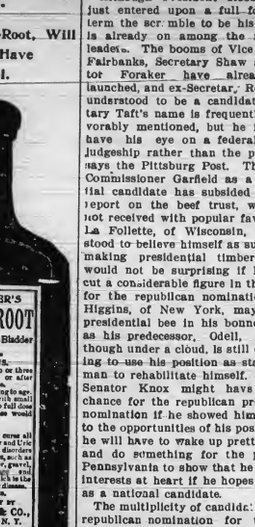
ARE YOUR KIDNEYS WEAK?

Thousands of Men and Women Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

To Prove What the Great Kidney Remedy, Swamp-Root, Will Do for YOU, Every Reader of This Paper May Have a Sample Bottle Sent Absolutely Free by Mail.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.



If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys begin to get better they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

Didn't Know I Had Kidney Trouble

I had tried so many remedies without their having benefited me that I was about discouraged but in a few days after taking your wonderful Swamp-Root I began to feel better.

I was out of health and run down generally; had no appetite, was dizzy and suffered with headache most of the time. I did not know that my kidneys were the cause of my trouble, but somehow felt they might be, and I began taking Swamp-Root, as above stated. There is such a pleasant taste to Swamp-Root, and it goes right to the spot and drives disease out of the system. It has cured me, making me strong and well and better in every way, and I cheerfully recommend it to all sufferers.

Yours gratefully truly,
MRS. A. L. WALKER, 331 East Linden St., Atlanta, Ga.

If there is any doubt in your mind as to your condition, take from your urine on rising about four ounces, place it in a glass or bottle and let it stand twenty-four hours. If on examination it is milky or cloudy, if there is a brick-dust settling, or if small particles float about in it, your kidneys are in need of immediate attention.

EDITORIAL NOTICE.—So successful is Swamp-Root in promptly curing even the most distressing cases that to prove its wonderful merits you may have a sample bottle and a book of valuable information, both sent absolutely free by mail. The book contains many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women whose high value and success of Swamp-Root is so well known that our readers are advised to send for a sample bottle.

In writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure to say that you read this generous offer in this paper.

SUCCESSOR TO ROOSEVELT

Ambitions That May Cause Embarrassment to the Present Administration.

Although President Roosevelt has just entered upon a full four years' term the seer mible to be his successor is already on among the republican leaders. The booms of Vice President Fairbanks, Secretary Shaw and Senator Foraker have already been launched, and ex-Secretary Root is also understood to be a candidate. Secretary Taft's name is frequently and favorably mentioned, but he is said to have his eye on a federal supreme judgeship rather than the presidency, says the Pittsburg Post. The talk of Commissioner Garfield as a presidential candidate has subsided since his report on the beef trust, which was not received with popular favor. Gov. La Follette, of Wisconsin, is understood to believe himself as suitable for making presidential timber, and it would not be surprising if he should cut a considerable figure in the contest for the republican nomination. Gov. Higgins, of New York, may get the presidential bee in his bonnet as bad as his predecessor, Odell, who, although under a cloud, is still endeavoring to use his position as state chairman to rehabilitate himself. Our own Senator Knox might have a good chance for republican presidential nomination if he showed himself alive to the opportunities of his position. But he will have to wake up pretty quickly and do something for the people of Pennsylvania to show that he has their interests at heart if he hopes to figure as a national candidate.

The multiplicity of candidates for the republican nomination for the next presidency may prove embarrassing to the present incumbent of the office. Each one of them will doubtless want him to show them some favor, and be inclined to be offended if he does not do so. His one safe course will be to remain neutral and to devote himself wholly to carrying out the pledges which he has made to the people and which secured him such a great majority. He will find this no easy task. Influential senators of his own party are evidently determined to thwart his wishes and to discredit him. All the indications point to his having a battle royal with powerful republican leaders if he attempts to secure the enactment of the measures carrying into effect ideas which he has enunciated and which have the support of the people generally.

The attitude assumed by the presidential candidates in Mr. Roosevelt's contest with the senate will doubtless have a large influence in deciding his own course toward them. Some of them may be forced into the fight between the senate and the president, and their prospects be either thereby advanced or injured. Until the questions which President Roosevelt has raised are settled by congress it will be impossible to make any intelligent forecast as to which of the numerous republican applicants for the next presidency will receive their party nomination.

POLITICAL OPINION ADRIFT.

——The butcher weighs the bone in your steak just as he did before Mr. Garfield made his report.—Washington Star.

——President Roosevelt is planning a house cleaning. The big stick will come in handy to beat the carpets with.—Des Moines Register and Leader.

——"Delaware republicanism," remarks the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, "is of the robust sort." Slight misprint. Delaware's republicanism is of the robust sort.—Albany Argus.

——After the action of the senate committee in striking out the $190,000 mileage appropriation graft, it was natural that certain members of the house might see the matter in an entirely different light.—Indianapolis News.

——The next session of congress will, in the view of the Washington Star, be enlivened by a debate on tariff revision. At one extreme it says will stand Champ Clark and those that follow him; at the other the standpatters.

——Those concerned in contemporary politics are watching with peculiar interest the distribution of patronage under the new administration. It seems to be assumed that the president will now take the appointing power altogether into his own hands and will make nominations to please himself rather than to please the senators. Theoretically, this is his right and duty; practically, the policy is sometimes hard to carry out.—Philadelphia Ledger.

——Of course, Commissioner Garfield didn't go into the question of "by products," which would give the beef trust something to cheer up over, even if it didn't make more than 90 cents on a dollar on each steer slaughtered. When you come to think of it, this, in itself, is nothing to make the packers low in their minds, if they kill enough steers, and nothing has been heard lately about a cattle famine. Big sales and small profits is the law of modern trade. Just think what a nice living Mr. Rockefeller makes for his family by selling kerosene at 15 cents a gallon.—Kansas City Star.

——President Roosevelt's argument that it is necessary to maintain a large navy in order to preserve the peace, is very forcible at the present time. With Theodore Roosevelt in the white house extraordinary measures should be taken to preserve the peace.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

——With the senate blaming the president for overstepping his rights, and the house rebuking the senate for infringing on the privileges of the lower branch, it looks as if a course of lectures by some good authority on the constitution would be useful now at Washington.—Boston Globe (ind. Dem.).

DESPOTISM OF IMPERIALISTS

Ex-Secretary Cortelyou's transfer to the postmaster generalship serves anew to emphasize the curious workings of the great federal machine erected by the republican party, which has for years gradually been concentrating political power in the heads of government departments and particularly has made the post office the center of party control.

Most people, says the St. Louis Republic, respect Mr. Cortelyou, the secretary to two presidents, as a reputable and extremely intelligent and capable man, and there has been at no time, even during the campaign, an effort to disparage him personally even on the part of the most narrowly partisan newspapers but his case is the extreme illustration of the inherent iniquity of the imperialistic machine encroaching upon the country's democratic institutions and threatening to override popular will.

Mr. Cortelyou was put into a cabinet position specially created in aid of the machine — the department of commerce, a position of official vantage bringing the party into intimate relations with and giving it a stronger purchase on the giant corporations of the country; a post eminently qualifying the holder for the place of campaign manager and collector of contributions. Graduating from the department of commerce, Mr. Cortelyou was made national chairman of his party during the campaign. Much unpleasantness arose from criticism offered against Mr. Roosevelt for taking a man out of the cabinet—out of the public service—to do party work of this kind; but it would have been strange indeed if the American people had not regarded Cortelyou's position and campaign collections in the light of his former employment. It would have been stupid in the people to have regarded his collections from the corporations as anything other than fat frylngs deliberately planned in the party mind. It was a sheer distrainment and extortion from the protected monopolies.

Precisely as the department of commerce fitted Cortelyou for the chairmanship, so did the latter place qualify him for the postal department. It is the big political department. However cleanly he may conduct it, notwithstanding his personal probity, he will inevitably have the great corporations and protected industries at his mercy—at the mercy of the machine, in any event. The post office department must powerfully strengthen the machine, under the management of men like Payne and Cortelyou, trained in party affairs, both in its relations to the financial and industrial powers and in its relation to the country generally the post offices of the country being the principal political feeders, as seen especially in the last campaign. The postal department is the source of perquisites, center of distribution and nucleus of control.

Imperialism's worst form is exhibited in the machine despotism, arrogation and abuse of power increasingly manifest in the republican party. With its growth in power and perfection of organization the party's necessity for pretense fades. The succession of appointments through which Mr. Cortelyou has been brought into the postmaster generalship marks the limit of party and machine daring.

The Benevolent Beef Trust.

Just how consumers were enabled, before the trust was formed, to buy all kinds of meats much cheaper while the cattle and sheep and hog growers were receiving better rates for their products is neither here nor there; let the dead past bury its dead. We are living in the active, costly present and dealing with conditions as we find them. Nor is it pertinent to inquire how the big packers have managed to pile up vast fortunes while occupying their time in serving the public for notning. Only unreasonable carpers will think of these things when they might be instructively reading Mr. Garfield's report. The important fact, officially certified, is that the beef trust is our kind and gentle friend, and that we should be bad off indeed without its kindly ministrations. Long live the benevolent beef trust, and long may the era of low cattle and high steaks continue to alleviate human suffering and bless mankind.—Kansas City Journal.

——Once let the people be aroused to the iniquity of a monopoly and they will find a way to end it or to mend it.—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

——Commissioner Garfield is certain that he has the evidence necessary to convict the packers' combine. All he lacks now is the conviction.—Chicago Daily News.

——The Providence Journal (ind., rep.) calls Secretary Taft's letter on the administration's policy toward the Philippines "frank and explicit," and adds: "Philippine independence becomes, therefore, an academic question so far as we are immediately concerned. It is our present business to do our best for our interesting wards and assist them along the path of progress as fast as is consistent with their capacity for orderly development."

The Modern Idea.

"How," asked the Sunday school teacher, "was a small man like David able to overcome a giant like Goliath?"

"Cause David understood jiu jitsu," promptly vociferated up-to-date little Jimmie Jones.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Called.

"Young man," said the long-faced individual, "do you know you're on the road to ruin?"

"What so?" replied the rake. "What are you doing on it, then; going or coming?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

STATE ODDS AND ENDS

FRANK B. HARPER.

The Famous Kentucky Turfman Was Taken By Death.

Versailles, Ky., April 5.—Frank B. Harper, the noted turfman and breeder, died at Nantura farm. He was 81 years old. Mr. Harper leaves two sisters, Mrs. B. A. Owsley, of Midway, and Mrs. Moore, of Scott county. The latter is ill and at the point of death. Harper leaves an estate of over $104,000. Mr. Harper's funeral will take place at Nantura Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. Burial at Lexington. Senator Jo Blackburn will be one of the pallbearers.

Harper was one of the last survivors of that old type of turfmen to which the Bufords, Blackburns, Swigerts and R. S. C. A. Alexander, of this county, belonged, who bred and raced thoroughbred horses for pure love of the sport. His famous Nantura stud produced some of the greatest race horses in the world, and for many years the Harper colors were seldom lowered in defeat.

Lexington, Ky., April 7.—The funeral of Frank Harper, master of Nantura, at Versailles, was the occasion of one of the greatest turnouts of prominent horsemen ever seen here. After the funeral at Nantura farm the cortege came by pike to this city, where the burial took place. Senator J. C. S. Blackburn was one of the pallbearers. Mr. Harper was the Nestor of the American turf and the owner of Imp. Longfellow.

FRANK B. HARPER'S WILL.

He Cuts Out His Sisters and Their Children.

Lexington, Ky., April 8.—The will of Frank B. Harper, master of Nantura stock farm, was opened, disposing of an estate of $150,000 he cuts out his sisters and their children and makes two grand-nephews, United States Senator J. C. S. Blackburn and Susan Stafford, a colored servant, beneficiaries. Nantura farm, 600 acres and furnishings, silver, trophies, stock, etc., go to E. Harper Hawkins, the Wallace farm, 400 acres, goes to Clinton Hawkins, another grand nephew. The Spring Station farm, 160 acres, is given to Senator Blackburn, and Susan Stafford, colored, is given $2,500. His sisters are Mrs. Barbara Owsley, of Midway, Ky., and Mrs. Mary J. Moore, of Georgetown. Both have children whose claim would rank ahead of the beneficiaries.

GIFT ACCEPTED.

Captain of Battleship Kentucky Sends Ship's Thanks.

Newport, Ky., April 6.—J. P. Weckman president of the German National bank, has received a letter from Capt W. J. Barnette, commanding the battleship Kentucky, accepting the gift to the vessel of a silver loving cup, made by Newport school children. In accepting the gift Capt. Barrette stated in his letter, dated Pensacola, Fla.:

"The officers and crew of this vessel have been apprised of the generous action of the school children of Newport and join me in expressing to you the appreciation in which the gift shall be held on this ship. The cup may be forwarded by express or other transportation to my address at Pensacola, Fla."

PREFERRED DEATH TO ARREST.

Paducah, Ky., April 6.—Henry alias Charles Hutchinson, colored, who shot officer W. K. Baker at Fulton, Ky., last Monday committed suicide by firing two bullets into his head at Gilbertsville, Ky., twenty miles above here, while a posse was in pursuit. He first engaged in a battle with the posse using all his cartridges except two.

The Statehouse Site.

Frankfort, Ky., April 7.—The money was actually paid by the state to the owners of the site for the new statehouse. Frank Chinn, for himself and the Hunt heirs, was paid $28,530; John W. Rodman, $1,500, and Mrs. Mary Johnson, $2,000. The legislature appropriated $60,000 for the site, but about half this amount will suffice.

To Prison For Life.

Manchester, Ky., April 8.—In the Leslie circuit court Ran and Bud Asher were given life sentences for the murder of Charley Bloomer. Ten of the jurors, it was said, favored giving Bud Asher the death penalty, and when this news was conveyed to Asher the prisoner coolly remarked: "I wish the other two had been of the same notion."

The Head Waiter's Deed.

Leitchfield, Ky., April 8.—Wm. C. Cannon, colored, head waiter of a French Lick Springs hotel, shot and probably fatally wounded his wife and then committed suicide. The woman had left him, and had been staying for some time with her mother.

James E. Baker Died Suddenly.

Murray, Ky., April 6.—James E. Baker, democratic nominee for sheriff, died suddenly at his home here of heart trouble. He was jailer of this county and very popular. He leaves a large family.

IN PERIL OF A MOB.

The Marshal and His Friends Barricaded in His Home.

Owensboro, Ky., April 7.—Marshal Joe Evans, at Deanefield, a mining town, near here, fatally wounded John Divens, 22. The marshal claims he was forced to shoot him while trying to place him under arrest.

Recently an uncle of John Divens and Dr. John Hale were placed in the Deanefield jail. At midnight the jail was discovered in flames and the two men perished, their bodies being almost entirely consumed. Since that time there has been great feeling against the marshal and talk of mob law.

John Divens and another man went to a saloon and bought several drinks. Claiming they were disorderly the marshal told them they were under arrest. Divens pulled his pistol and fired three shots at the officer. Evans was wounded in the shoulder. Evans returned the fire with fatal result.

The marshal has gathered at his house all his friends, who say they will defend him in case of attack by a mob.

Owensboro, Ky., April 8.—John Divens, who was shot and wounded by Joe Evans, marshal of the town of Deanefield, died. Evans has gone to Fordsville and given himself up. He claims self-defense.

THE HARGISES TRIAL.

Cases Called, But Owing To a Missing Witness, Were Passed.

Lexington, Ky., April 8.—The trial of the Hargises and Callahan, charged with the murder of Jim Cockrill, was again called in the circuit court here, but, owing to the absence of Asa White, chief witness for the commonwealth, the case was again passed until next Tuesday. Commonwealth Attorney Allen said every effort had been made to find the missing witness, but as yet he had absolutely no trace of him. The defense insisted that the trial be entered into, but Judge Parker granted a postponement until Tuesday. He appointed a special bailiff to scour the mountain counties in search of missing witnesses.

TRICKED BY A BURGLAR.

Louisville, Ky., April 8.—Chas. Potter was arrested charged with breaking into the Christian Church Widows' and Orphans' home, 809 West Jefferson street. Patrolman Marsh was called over the telephone and told that there was a burglar in the orphans' home. When the officer reached the institution he was admitted by a man who told him there was a burglar in the rear of the house. Investigation showed that the burglar had fled. The patrolman's informant at the front door had also disappeared, and the officer realized that he had been tricked by the housebreaker. He saw Potter later and thinks he is the burglar.

THE GLORIOUS GATEWAY OF DEATH

OUR EASTER SERMON STORY by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher

Scripture Authority:—"The graves were opened, and many bodies of the saints which slept arose, and came out of the graves after His resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many."—Matt. 27:52, 53.

T WAS afternoon on that first Easter day. The sun, as though in sympathy with the new joy which had come to the earth, was shining forth in his strength. The notes of the birds were gladder, and the fragrance and beauty of foliage and flower was never more rich or full. All nature, as though conscious of that which had come to pass, seemed eager to offer her tribute to the risen Lord.

On the road over which Jesus had ridden so triumphantly but one week before a woman is seen hurrying. So intent is she on reaching the village just ahead of her that her feet fairly fly over the road. Her face is lit up by a wondrous glow, reflecting the joy and ecstacy which thrills within her heart. It is Mary, the sister of Martha and Lazarus, she who loved to sit at Jesus' feet.

That morning she had been with the women who had sought the tomb of their crucified Lord as the dawn was breaking, and had been a sharer in all that wonderful experience. About noon she had withdrawn from the rest and sought seclusion on the house top. As she sat in deep study and tried to realize and understand all that had came to pass, she saw a fair young woman advancing towards her with outstretched arms.

"Ruth," exclaimed Mary, as soon as she could speak, "I was but just thinking of you. Many in our company this morning have thrilled us with the wonderful stories of meeting friends and loved ones who had died. It is but the beautiful coloring to the glorious picture of Christ's resurrection, and I have been wondering if it was your blessed privilege to be among the number."

"Yes, dear Mary, Jesus has called me to be among the company which should share in His resurrection glory," and as Ruth spoke her face shone with a celestial light and holy joy.

"You remember how we met Jesus at the passover feast at Jerusalem at the beginning of His ministry, and the joy and peace which came to our hearts as we received Him. We had always been dear and close friends before, but how the new hope that thrilled us drew us into closer bonds of sympathy and fellowship. You remember how we longed to be near Jesus that we might receive of His teachings, and of the bitter opposition which met me at home? With you it was not so difficult, for your sister Martha and brother Lazarus were of an open mind and willing to receive the truth. When sickness came, and Jesus away off in Galilee—I never saw Him but once, you recall—I felt I could not die. I wanted to be with Him. I wanted to know Him better. I was not afraid of death, for when I came to know Jesus that fear and dread was all taken away, but I did so want to live to know Him better. But, oh, Mary! I did not know then that the dark gateway of death was to usher me into such larger privilege and blessing. And now this has come to pass that I have part in the resurrection with my Lord. How sweet and perfect is God's will!"

"Ruth, your parents have been bitter in their sorrow, and have felt rebellious against God's Great opposition to Jesus than ever before marked their conduct after your death, and they have steadfastly refused to see Him or hear Him speak on His many visits to Bethany and ourselves," explained Mary, for the unbelief of the parents of her dearest friend had been one of the bitterest griefs which she had been forced to endure, and her thoughts had been of them much of the morning.

"Yea, I know all this," sweetly replied Ruth, "but God hath graciously permitted me a revelation of His wonderful grace, and mother and father will yet be numbered among Jesus' disciples."

"Oh, how I have prayed and hoped that it might be so," exclaimed Mary. "When Lazarus died they were so kind in their ministry to sister and me, and our hearts were brought closer together in a common sympathy, but when Jesus came and brought our brother back from the dead, greater bitterness seemed to surge in upon them, and they have said over and over again: 'If Jesus could restore the dead why did He not let them suffer so? Why did He not give back to them their darling, and the one who had professed faith in Him?' Oh, if they could only know and understand!"

"And they will," responded Ruth, confidently, and giving her friend a parting embrace, she vanished from sight.

In Bethany that morning strange things had happened, too. The mother had been down to Ruth's tomb, as was often her custom, to weep, and had returned in great distress of mind and terror of heart. The stone had been thrust aside from the cavern's mouth and the place, where more than two years before they had laid the precious form of their darling, was empty. What could it mean? Who could have so desecrated the sacred spot?

And thus it came to pass that as Mary came rushing in with her wonderful message, she found the parents and neighbors in excited conference.

"Peace, dear friends, for I bring you glad message. Jesus, Who as you know was cruelly crucified three days ago, has risen from the tomb where He was laid after His death, and has appeared unto a company of us women this morning! I have seen Him! I have heard Him speak!"

How clear and sweet and strong her voice rang out and thrilled all present. That she had seen a vision, and that a new hope surged within her own heart, none present would doubt as they beheld her shining face.

"And more, dear friends," and as she spoke she drew near Ruth's father and mother, and laid her hand lovingly upon the arm of the latter, "many of the saints have risen with Him, and have been seen of many in Jerusalem."

As she spoke these words the father and mother started as if struck, and stared at her with eyes in which could be seen conflicting fear and dawning hope.

In a half whisper the mother gasped: "Her tomb is empty!"

A new light broke in upon Mary, as she took in the situation, and she bent down and spoke in low and tender voice, for her message now was for the parents. It should be their sacred privilege to hear the joyful news first:

"And I have seen her! And so shall you! Only believe!"

If Ruth were alive, the parents must see her. They did not think of her in her resurrected glory, but only as their treasure whom they wanted back in their home again. Their desire centered in the girl who had been the idol of their hearts, and they had no thought for the Christ through Whose power she had risen.

But it is only the heart of faith which is granted the vision of Heavenly things, and day after day as the parents haunted the places where Jesus and the others had appeared to the believing disciples they were broken and crushed by disappointment.

What days of waiting and struggle those were! How rebellious their hearts!

"Surely, Ruth, who loved us so dearly, will come to us," the mother exclaimed one evening. She had repeated that thought and hope of her heart over and over again since the resurrection day, and they had found sympathetic response in the heart of the father.

"Yes, but suppose she does not?" questioned the father. "If she is with Jesus, ought we not to be glad?" he asked, half hesitatingly, half fearfully, for he had not dared before to suggest the possibility of such a thing, for both he and his wife had expected that the first one to greet them when they came to Jerusalem would be their daughter. How blind is the human heart, how slow to believe.

A flood of tears and violent sobs was the response which startled and frightened him. Here was a new and unexpected display of emotion. As the sobs subsided, in broken voice she said:

"Oh, husband, I fear our love has been so unworthy of her. We have let our affection for our dear Ruth so fill our hearts as to blind us to God and make us indifferent to His claims upon us."

"And if this Christ is God's Son, ought we not to receive Him, as we refused to do so long ago, to the great grief of our daughter?" spoke up the father with a sigh, as though the expression of the thought took a great burden from his heart.

"I see it now, I see it now!" broke out the other. "How could we see our Ruth when we were refusing to see her Christ? Oh, how wicked and blind our hearts have been. Can God forgive us?"

At last the day when Jesus was to be received up into glory dawned. The followers of Jesus were gathered together, and while they waited Jesus came into their midst, and held sweet and blessed communion with them. It was the first vision of the Christ which the parents of Ruth had had since long before, when they had seen Him in Bethany at the tomb of Lazarus. Then their unbelief shut Him out; now their subdued and broken hearts opened full and wide to receive Him.

So absorbed were they in the message of Jesus, so wrapped in contemplation of the wonderful things He was saying, that they did not notice the shining figure which walked by their side. Jesus' last commission had been given. As He lifted up His hands and blessed that little company of believers, they bowed their heads in reverent worship, and then, lifting them, they saw Jesus slowly and majestically rising from the earth, while a cloud was seen to descend from the heavens to meet Him.

At that moment a gentle touch was felt upon the arm by the parents, and as they turned, the words: "Mother!" Father!" fell upon their ears, and before them stood the radiant presence of their daughter Ruth.

The vision of that moment, oh, how precious! How sweet to have Jesus give them thus the token of His love and blessing! Those words, that vision, that loving touch, how it remained as a sweet and holy memory during all the remaining days of their earthly pilgrimage! The heart may catch in an instant a vision that will never fade; it may hear just a word, the message of which will unfold with the years; it may feel a touch which will sanctify throughout eternity. And so it was that day. But a brief moment and Ruth was gone with her Lord into glory. And with beaming faces, "mother" and "father" lifted their eyes to their Lord and Christ as the cloud received Him out of their sight and exclaimed simply but fervidly:

"We thank Thee, Lord Jesus, for Thyself and for what Thou hast done for us."

EXECUTE IN GAY FASHION.

Chinese Kill Captured Men with Fanfares of Trumpets Accompanying Stroke of Executioner's Sword.

Newchwang.—With Japanese flags flying, a band of Chinese bandits beheaded two young Russians who were alleged to be spies at Sinmintin. The first one executed was evidently an officer, but he was wearing a Chinese overcoat. He knelt without a murmur, while his companion watched the death stroke.

The second captive was clothed in Chinese clothing throughout. He whimpered for a moment, but regained his nerve and struggled fiercely. He was thrown and killed while long trumpets fanfared. The chief of the bandits was a mild-mannered old man, wearing a Japanese sword. He watched the executions unmoved. "They are spies," he said, "and we should kill them. Besides, it is difficult to transport them."

One night the bandits surprised a small body of Russian scouts and killed 22, besides capturing the two that were beheaded.

The whole band, consisting of 200 cavalry and 100 infantry, formed a great circle on the outskirts of Sinmintin. The bronzed and storm-featured Chinese dismounted and held their gayly trapped and shaggy ponies. The men were armed to the teeth with long rifles and Mauser pistols. The infantry was mostly turbaned, but many wore Russian caps.

The Russian captives were brought to the center of the circle with a flourish of trumpets. They were stripped and their arms bound together behind their bodies. They were then turned over to a six-foot executioner, who smilingly drew his red-sheathed sword, afterward wiping the blade on the clothing of the dead men.

When the executions were finished the corpses were left lying on the sunlit road. Bugles were sounded and the bandit cavalry swung into their saddles, while the infantry fell into line and departed from the scene of execution.

SEES BENEFIT IN SPORTS.

Chicago.—The prize fighter and the gambler as elements in the betterment of society and the advancement of religion were introduced for the first time to the public by Prof. Albion W. Small of the University of Chicago, in a talk to the junior colleges of that institution.

Despite the fact that legislatures of many states have placed restrictions upon both the individuals cited, Prof. Small maintained that both might be misunderstood and underrated. Each may have his code of ethics, and it is not uncertain that that code is any the less high than the standard of those who disagree with them.

Discussing the possibility of a high standard of ethics and religion, Prof. Small said: "I can imagine such a thing as a religious prize fighter. Suppose, for instance, that some time Chicago should become the home of weakness and idleness. Then imagine a sturdy farmer boy, fresh from the country, where he has learned to spar. He sees the condition of the men about him and opens a sparring school. He says: 'I'll challenge them and teach them and arouse their athletic spirit.' Such a prize fighter, I believe, would deserve as much credit for the good he would do his fellow men as the widow who gave her mite."

Gamblers also have their moral code, he said, which might, taking certain factors into consideration, be compared to those of a saint without disparagement to the gambler.

In the Spring.

Lowndes, Mo., April 4th.—Mrs. H. C. Harty, of this place, says:

"For years I was in very bad health. Every spring I would get so low that I was unable to do my own work. I seemed to be worse in the spring than any other time of the year. I was very weak and miserable and had much pain in my back and head. I saw Dodd's Kidney Pills advertised last spring and began trestment of them and they have certainly done me more good than anything I have ever used.

"I was all right last spring and felt better than I have for over ten years. I am fifty years of age and am stronger to-day than I have been for many years and I give Dodd's Kidney Pills credit for the wonderful improvement."

The statement of Mrs. Harty is only one of a great many where Dodd's Kidney Pills have proven themselves to be the very best spring medicine. They are unsurpassed as a tonic and are the only medicine used in thousands of families.

There was quite a good attendance at the meeting of the Executive Board of North Bend Association of Baptists, held with the church in Burlington last Friday. The ministers present were J. I. Wills, Walton; J. W. Beagle, Latonia; C. W. Daniel, Covington; Hergit, 9th street Baptist church, Cincinnati; Layton Mattox, Big Bone, and M. D. Early, local pastor. The speeches made by the above gentlemen were very instructive and enjoyed very much by the audience. At noon an abundant and splendid dinner was served in the hall at the court house.

Dr. Wolfstine and friend, of Cincinnati, came to Burlington, last Friday, in an automobile, and as they were returning about noon they gave Dr. L. H. Crisler's horse a terrible fright near O. P. Tanner's about one mile out on the Florence pike. Dr. Crisler saw the machine approaching him and singnaled it to stop until he could open a gate near him and drive his horse and buggy into a field. The request was obeyed long enough for the horse and buggy to be gotten partially through the gate, when the machine passed at a high rate of speed, and the horse went up in the air, the Doctor holding to the bit at first, but was finally dashed to the ground, the horse falling also. Fortunately the Doctor escaped with only a slight bruise on one of his lower limbs, while the damages to the vehicle were slight, although the horse took a circle around the field with it. Charles Craven, who was riding with Dr. Crisler, says he does not see how it was that he came out of the mix-up alive. The occupants of the automobile certainly enjoyed the predicament into which they had gotten Dr. Crisler, as they looked back and laughed, which exasperated the Doctor until he wished for a Winchester snot gun loaded with buck shot. Dr. Crisler went in at Mr. Tanner's and telephoned to Marshal Eddins, of Florence, to stop the men and hold them when they reached his town. The Marshal halted them, but thinking he could not hold them without a warrant, which they inquired if he had, he permitted them to pass on, but so soon as the traction road was reached at Highland, one of the men left the automobile, fearing they would not escape so easily if the Covington police were asked to arrest them. The people who are gliding over the country in their $2,000 to $5,000 automobiles are a class who think the common people have no rights which they have to respect, and pass along the public highways at a high rate of speed with impunity, frightening horses and taking chances of causing the death of women and children, and it will not be long before some one of the numerous auto. drivers, with his hide full of lead, will occupy a prominent position on a cooling board. The people are getting tired of the conduct of the occupants of automobiles as they travel the public roads, and if they do not show more respect for their rights, they will provide a remedy that is both speedy and effectual, that's all there is to it.

Circuit Court.

The April term of the Boone Circuit Court convened last Monday morning with Judge Lassing presiding, and circuit clerk Duncan and his assistants, his father, and sister, Miss Ella, and sheriff Allphin and his deputy, and deputy jailer, Luther Adams, at their posts of duty. Commonwealth's Attorney, F. C. Greene, arrived from Erlanger at an early hour, ready for business.

A special grand jury was summoned and empaneled Monday afternoon to investigate the charge of incest against A. F. Glackin. An indictment was returned in about 15 minutes, only three witnesses, persons to whom Glackin had confessed his guilt, were examined. The special grand jury was composed of the following persons: L. H. Voshell, foreman; L. S. Beemon, Noah Barlow, J. J. Walton, George Terrill, Wesly Underhill. F. A. Utz, A. G. Fisk, L. A. Thompson, James Gaines, I. J. Riley, Charles Tanner. The special jury was dischrged as soon as the indictment was reported.

The petit juries were impaneled as follows, Tuesday morning:

No. 2.—C. B. Beall, James Botts, O. E. Aylor, J. C. Sebree, John L. Rich, James Pearson, Thos. Anderson, Ed Ries, Bruce Roberts, Irvin Rue, Leslie Goodridge, T. F. Grant.

A. P. Glacken was tried Tuesday morning and given 20 years in the penitentiary. The court sentenced him at once and gave him a lecture, which would have brought the tears to the eyes of an ordinary man, but it had little or no effect on him.

The service fee of my thoroughbred Jersey bull is $1. Ezra Aylor, Burlington.

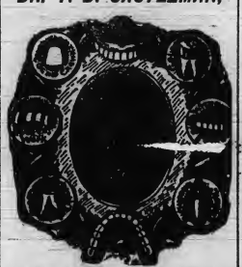
Hoosier Disk Drill-Drop Corn Planter.

THIS HOOSIER PLANTER is termed a Drill Drop Planter (or, by some styled cumulative drop) from the fact that when in operation the feed plates run continuously, drop one grain at a time to a valve and collecting the grains on the valve until a sufficient number is collected for a hill, when the valve is opened either by a wire check rower or hand lever, and the grains dropped into the furrow. When desiring to drill corn, the valve is simply held open, and the grains drop to the ground. It has 1¼-inch cold rolled steel axle and extra strong wheels with large heavy hubs and spokes; these wheels being supplied with concave or open tires, as desired. The double disks are made from special steel which insures perfect scouring. Both hand and foot levers can be used to raise or lower the disks. Spring device used for connecting front frame to rear frame; admits of heavy pressure on furrows and allows them to raise up in passing over obstructions, and also relieves weight on tongue. Feed thrown out of gear when disks are raised. Foot drop attachment enables operator to finish end rows without help. Pivoted marker with malleable head. Tip-over corn hoppers. Compressed Oil cups located over chilled cone disk bearings. Easily reached and turned with the fingers.



Supplied with one set of plates with holes for large corn and one for small corn. Change of distance and change of number of grains required for a hill, made by changing speed of feed rod. With the three sizes of sprocket wheels on axle and feed rod, grains can be dropped nine different distances, or the number of grains in a hill can be varied to suit. Corn may be drilled either 10, 13, 14, 15, 17, 18, 20, 24 or 26 inches apart, or the number of grains may be varied from 1 to 5.

The Burlington Grays and Bellevues played a very interesting game of ball here Saturday, the score standing 3 to 2 at the close. Gray, pitcher for the visitors, seamed to have trouble at the bat in finding Brady's slants and drops, and Ray Conner found it equally hard to connect with Grays delivery. It was a nice game throughont, and Bellevue only won by a neck.

A BIG NAVAL BATTLE

It is Expected to Occur in the Vicinity of the Pescaderes.

Toga Was Taken by Surprise—No Information Received in St. Petersburg as to the Whereabouts of Rojestvensky's Squadron.

St. Petersburg, April 17.—There is no information from Vice Adm. Rojestvensky's squadron, but the admiralty would not be surprised to learn of skirmishing between scout ships and the inauguration of torpedo boat warfare soon is not unexpected. The naval organ here expresses the opinion that Togo was taken completely by surprise when Rojestvensky suddenly appeared at the entrance of the China Sea and is now concentrating his widely scattered fleet near the Pascadores, where it is believed a sea fight will probably occur.

Sipinghai, April 17.—Captured Japanese spies place the number of the Japanese army at 400,000 and state that the losses at the battle of Mukden are already being replaced by drafts from home battalions.

Hong-Kong, April 17.—The steamer Telmechus reports that she heard firing 150 miles north of the Natuna islands at 3:20 o'clock on the afternoon of April 12.

Singapore, April 17.—The North German Lloyd steamship Prinz Heinrich reports that she sighted 18 vessels of the Russian Baltic squadron in Kamranh bay at noon on Friday last. The steamer did not sight any Japanese warships. Kamranh bay is in Cochin China about 200 miles northeast of Saigon.

Tokio, April 17.—The following official announcement was made:

"The force advancing north from Singking, driving the enemy before them, occupied Yingecheng, 38 miles north of Singking at 1 o'clock on the afternoon of April 14.

"A detachment of the same force, co-operating with cavalry, occupied Pachiatz at 6 o'clock in the evening of the same day.

"The enemy's force near Pachiatzu consisted of seven sotnies of cavalry and one battery of artillery.

"They first retreated toward Yingecheng then came back to Pachiatzu. Finding it occupied they were thrown into confusion and they retreated in great disorder over Peling Pass, two miles north of Pachiatzu. There is no change elsewhere."

PANAMA RAILROAD.

A Reorganization of the Company Will Take Place In New York.

New York, April 17.—Secretary of War Taft, who is here to attend the annual meeting of the directors of the Panama Railroad Co., in this city, had this to say on the affairs of the railroad:

"The annual meeting will result in a complete reorganization of the company. The government is now in control of all the stock. It is absolutely essential for us to control the affairs of the railroad in the interest of the work of constructing the canal. We desire to have the affairs of the road conducted in harmony with the commission, which will have charge of the general construction work. With this end in view the directors of the Panama Railroad Co., at their meeting, will elect Theodore P. Shonts, the new chairman of the Panama canal commission, president of the Panama Railroad Co.

"With Mr. Shonts at the head of the company it is certain that its affairs will be conducted most satisfactorily."

A FIERCE BLIZZARD.

Denver, Col., April 17.—A special from Newcastle, Col., says that a fierce blizzard raged at Camp Roosevelt, 25 miles south of there. So vicious was the storm that no one ventured out of doors. The greater part of the day was spent by the president and party around the camp fires telling hunting stories.

The News also has a dispatch saying that the mail carrier who covers the territory adjacent to Huntsman hills, reached Newcastle and verified the report that he killed a large cinnamon bear with the first shot he fired. It required several hours' chase to bring the animal to bay.

EVERY ONE ASKS HIM

HOW HE GOT RID OF HIS OBSTINATE MUSCULAR RHEUMATISM.

Mr. Jones Tells of the Way by Which He Treated Himself Successfully When Doctors Failed.

Six physicians, all of them good, one of them a specialist, had done their best for Mr. Jones at different times during three years, and still he suffered fearfully from the tortures of rheumatism.

The rheumatism that had been dormant in his system was suddenly brought to an acute stage by exposure while he was drawing ice in February, 1901. From that time on for a period of more than three years he was a constant sufferer. He tried many kinds of treatment, but the rheumatism wouldn't budge. When regular doctors failed, and one remedy after another proved useless, many said: "I should think he would give it up and save his money."

Of his condition at this time, Mr. Jones says: "My rheumatism started in my right thigh, but in time it appeared in every muscle of my body. I lost the use of my left arm entirely and nearly lost the use of my right one. My feet were badly affected, especially the bottoms of the heels. When my right side was affected there was swelling, but the left side didn't swell when the disease settled there. The internal organs didn't seem to be involved at all. The trouble was all in the muscles and the nerves."

Among the few who still encouraged Mr. Jones to think that a cure might yet be found was a friend who had reason for great confidence in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and acting on her advice he bought a box of them in September, 1904. The story of what followed is brief, but nothing could be more satisfactory.

"When I was on the third box," says Mr. Jones, "I could realize a change for the better. I felt sure then that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were the right medicine for my case. I kept on with them for several weeks longer and now I am entirely well, and everybody is asking what I took."

CATCHING AN AMAZON.

Lawyer's Wit Turned Aggressive Woman's Defiant Words Against Herself.

About a year ago there was tried in a court of Kansas City a case in which there was retained as counsel Mr. Bartholdt, who is a representative from Missouri in congress.

Among the witnesses for the opposing side who were cross-examined by Mr. Bartholdt, says the New York Herald, were a man of diminutive stature and sheepish manner and his wife, an individual of Amazonian proportions and a correspondingly aggressive air. The husband was evidently very much cowed by his better half, for when he was being questioned he would from time to time glance timidly at the lady, as if to seek permission to reply to the interrogatories.

During the cross-examination in which the lady in turn was subjected by Mr. Bartholdt she evinced considerable impatience. Finally, when one question was urgently repeated to her several times, she suddenly exclaimed in an angry tone:

"Now, you needn't think you can catch me that way. You've tried that three or four times already. No, sir, you can't catch me!"

"Madam," observed Mr. Bartholdt, with the politest of bows, "you have no cause for alarm. I have, I assure you, no desire whatever to catch you, and your husband looks as if he were sorry he did."

Hoped It Was True.

"Before you married me," he complained, "you used to say that there wasn't another man like me in the world."

"Yes, and now," replied the wife, "I should not like to think that there was!"—Boston Globe.

HONEST CONFESSION.

A Doctor's Talk on Food.

There are no fairer set of men on earth than the doctors, and when they find they have been in error they are usually apt to make honest and manly confession of the fact.

A case in point is that of an eminent practitioner, one of the good old school, who lives in Texas. His plain, unvarnished tale needs no dressing up:

"I had always had an intense prejudice, which I can now see was unwarrantable and unreasonable, against all muchly advertised foods. Hence, I never read a line of the many 'ads.' of Grape-Nuts, nor tested the food till last winter.

"While in Corpus Christi for my health, and visiting my youngest son, who has four of the ruddiest, healthiest little boys I ever saw, I ate my first dish of Grape-Nuts food for supper with my little grandsons. I became exceedingly fond of it and have eaten a package of it every week since, and find it a delicious, refreshing and strengthening food, leaving no ill effects whatever, causing no eructations (with which I was formerly much troubled), no sense of fullness, nauses, nor distress of stomach in any way.

"There is no other food that agrees with me so well, or sits as lightly or pleasantly upon my stomach as this does. I am stronger and more active since I began the use of Grape-Nuts than I have been for 10 years, and am no longer troubled with nausea and indigestion." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

QUEER SECT WATCHING FOR MILLENNIUM'S DAWN

"Israelites," Under the Leadership of Benjamin and Mary, Gathering at Benton Harbor, Mich., to Welcome Christ.

RETURN FROM HEAVEN EXPECTED ANY DAY

The Year of 1916 Fixed as the Time When Christ, Aided by "Israelites," Will Begin His Thousand Years' Reign Over the Earth—Other Peculiar Tenets of Their Faith Are Celibacy, Vegetarianism and Unshaven Locks and Beard.

Benton Harbor, Mich.—A half truth is always dangerous. A strange mixture of truth and error has brought a large company of people together in this city in preparation for the second coming of Christ, and the inauguration of the millennial age.

Benjamin and Mary, the long-haired prophet and prophetess of these Israelites as they call themselves, for they claim to have discovered themselves as one of the lost ten tribes, can quote you the Scripture which would seem to justify their ideas, for the many peculiarities of their faith are taken from the Bible.

So does Dowie use the Word of God, for he bases all his strange claims upon the teachings of the Sacred Book. So does Mrs. Eddy use or misuse it, finding, as she believes, teachings which have given the world Christian Science. So have scores and hundreds of other people in this day and in days gone by used God's Word to bolster up their peculiar ideas of religion.

It has been said that it is possible to go to the Bible and find seeming authority for any faith or practice which distorted or diseased human mind or heart could want. And it is also true that no matter how absurd or pernicious a doctrine one may advance, there are always people to be found who will accept and follow it as the truth.

But we did not start out to deliver a lecture on the use and misuse of the Bible, but our purpose is to tell the story of the colony of the House of David, formerly known as the "Flying Rollers," or the "Holy Rollers," as clearly and fairly and fully as possible, believing that the story will prove interesting as well as instructive. But we wanted to emphasize the fact that the doctrines which the "Israelites" believe and teach find their seeming justification in the Bible. Certain truths are taken from their proper setting, and into others their own interpretations are read, so that we find a strange jumble, a confused mass of truth and error, and, as we have already said, a half truth is always a dangerous truth.

Millennium Coming.

The "Israelites" believe that the end of the present age will come in 1916, and that then will be inaugurated the thousand years' reign with Christ.

They are looking for the return of Christ to earth again at any time now, and because of their peculiar fitness and preparedness he will present himself to them at the Benton Harbor mecca.

The strictest celibacy marks the life of the colony, and this they hold is one of the ways that they will prepare themselves in flesh and spirit for Christ's coming.

The special claims which they make for themselves are that they are the long lost tribe of Israel and that they are the 144,000 spoken of by Daniel, the prophet, who shall share with Christ in the rule over the world during the millennial period.

Benjamin and Mary are held as sev[illegible] sent by messen[illegible] angels, the messengers sent by God to the inhabitants of this world. And this is how they figure it out:

The Seventh Angels.

Benjamin and Mary are the seventh from Johanna Southcott, the English woman who founded the strange sect more than a century ago. She was said to have succeeded in interpreting the "Flying Roll," spoken of in the book of Revelation, or the apocalypse of St. John. Of course, before interpreting she had to find it, as St. John merely saw it in one of his visions and he failed or neglected to translate it. But the English woman saw it again. She not only saw it. She read it. It was in the vernacular of "old merrie England" and she succeeded in copying it into terse and vigorous English. She was the first "messenger" of a new faith. After her came three other messengers. Then came John Wroe, who was the fourth messenger, and next came the somewhat famous James J. Jezreel. Benjamin, therefore, is clearly the seventh in descent. But he alone of the seven messengers is to have the crowning glory of an immortal body, for Benjamin is the last of the "messengers" and it has been determined that he "shall see the millennial age and Christ, its only ruler," and that after 1,000 years on earth he shall ascend into Heaven with the entire host of the 144,000 to be numbered among the elect.

It is the teaching of Benjamin that with the exception of Christ, Elias, Enoch and a few more of the celebrated Scriptural personages, the 144,000 constituting the elect, with Benjamin himself at their head, shall be the only human beings whose physical bodies will ever be found in Heaven. The "souls and spirits" of all the other inhabitants of earth, from the beginning to the end of time, may ascend into Heaven, but their bodies will stay forever in their graves or somewhere in the universe, or in chaos, as physical, material substance. When the Bible extends the promise of a resurrection of the body at doomsday it is not the real body but the "spirit" which will rise, the Israelites say, from the graves of mother earth. "The spirit, not the body, is what is sleeping in the grave," they say, "and only the spirit will resurrect, as the body has returned to dust its elements and must so remain," excepting "the one hundred and forty and four thousand" of the elect.

Mission of the Sect.

It is the mission of the "Israelites" to prepare the world for Christ's second coming and to keep a holy vigil until the reappearance of the Redeemer upon earth once more. They assert that "the second coming is due now and may be expected to be made manifest at any moment to all the world."

This is more decidedly startling than anything that the "Israelites," the whilom "Flying Rollers," had announced at any time before. It was understood in Benton Harbor that the "second coming," an event which is to precede the beginning of the millennium, was just 13 years away—that it had been scheduled to arrive in 1916. But this appears to have been a sad mistake. It is the "end of the world," or, more accurately speaking, the end of the "present order of things," that is timed to arrive in 1916. The change from the present order to the holy reign of Christ during the millennium may require some time for inauguration, say Benjamin and Mary.

They are emphatic in declaring that the "end of the present order" will take place in 1916; that in that year the Christ will have successfully launched the millennium, and that thereafter He will reign and govern for 1,000 years as the acknowledged sovereign and ruler of all the earth.

They assert that the presence of the person of Christ may not at first be recognized by any but the few, and that He may be some years on earth before He will make manifest His identity with the stupendous miracles foretold in the Scriptural Book of the Revelations. Here is where the Israelites have the advantage of the rest of us—they expect that Christ will make Himself known to them first, as they say that He will know they have thoroughly fitted themselves to receive Him and accept His Divine leadership on earth.

Strict Celibates.

In reference to their system of celibacy, Benjamin and Mary have this to say:

"Our institution of celibacy is not the race suicide the American president condemns. The teaching as well as the practice is this: When a person discovers that he or she is one of the number chosen to await the second coming of Christ—the visitation appointed for 1916 or soon before that time—that person is expected forthwith to adopt the mode of life of a celibate, so as to be of that noble purity of mind and body that can alone be deemed fitting and worthy in all who are preparing to greet the Redeemer on His second advent upon this earth. If the persons who accept this call to the holy life have been married and have had children there is no harm done. All that is required of them is that they become celibates when they join our movement and that they remain true celibates thereafter to the end.

"It is easy to see how different is this from the race suicide condemned by your great president. In the first place, we hold that after the end of the present order, which event is to take place in 1916, it will be found that it would not have made much difference whether the present inhabitants of the world had race suicide or not, provided the race suicide had been accomplished by the lawful abstinence known as 'celibacy.' For with the inauguration of the millennium, under the glorious rule of Christ, there will be a transformation of the human body that will render it immortal. By the exercise of His Divine power at His second coming the Christ will cause the blood in our bodies to become transformed into spirit. This replacing of the blood with spirit will render the body immortal. Only in this way can the body be saved. It was the way in which were saved the bodies of Enoch, Elias and Esdras, who, without suffering the ordeal of death, ascended gloriously into Heaven.

"It is our belief that when Christ inaugurates in 1916 His glorious reign of the millennium He will find here on earth, but especially in Benton Harbor's House of David, the Israelite remnant described in the book of David as the 144,000 that shall constitute the elect. These, because they have faithfully awaited His second coming, will escape death. Their bodies will become immortal and they shall rule jointly with the Redeemer until the millennium ends with the destruction of the earth. Then they shall ascend with Christ into Heaven, where, because of their Christ-like and perfect bodies, they shall sit nearest to the Heavenly throne and be 'greater than the angels,' even as in the Scriptures Christ Himself is said to be greater than all the host of angels and seraphs and cherubim."

There were addenda by another of the Israelites, a matronly lady known as "Mary II." She was formerly Mrs. Mary MacDermott, of Los Angeles. But she left a comfortable home and a happy family to take up the Israelite's life of abnegation and vigil at Benton Harbor. She said:

"We will not depopulate the earth with race suicide practices like celibacy after the millennium is inaugurated. On the contrary, the Israelites—that is to say, the elect, or the people engaged in this movement of ours—will then populate the earth with immortal beings. We believe that our celibacy saves possible children from possible suffering. What's the use of having children now, if the world, as at present constituted, is to come to an end in 1916?"

Preaching in Many States.

Disciples of Benjamin and Mary are now preaching their cult in many states of the union, especially in the south and southwest. The disciples travel in "prairie schooners" overland and preach out of doors in city, town, village and gulch. Chicago has been let alone so far. But it will not be for long, as extensive plans are now being made for a descent upon that metropolis, where the devil is supposed to be well intrenched.

The colony of "Israelites" is located about a mile outside of the city town, and it is the mecca to which the "remnant," or the "lost tribes of Israel," are turning in these days, that is, according to the statement of Benjamin and Mary.

A company of 86 Australians recently arrived, after a long two months' pilgrimage by way of the Suez canal and England. They claim to be one of the lost tribes. The patriarch of the party is William G. Bulley. He is 70 years old and has been an "Israelite," or "Holy Roller," or "Flying Roller," as they are variously known, for 34 years.

"I went to Australia with nothing but my grip in my hand 60 years ago," he said, "and have seen the [illegible] grow. We were not so far advanced as the Benton Harbor branch. We existed a dispensation from the fifth angel, or messenger, John Wroe. As soon as Mary and Benjamin came to us we recognized they were possessed of divine power and we left all to follow them."

The Colony.

The colony buildings comprise a group in which the members of the cult are housed and fed and employed. The largest of the frame structures is the administration building which stands in the center. There is a carpenter shop, a bakery, the kitchen, where the vegetables and other food, exclusive of meats, are cooked, for the Israelites among their other peculiar tenets hold that vegetarianism is the only dietary pathway along which the elect of God should walk, and so the flesh of beast, bird and fish is barred from the colony with as much rigor as ordinary people would observe in guarding against smallpox or other scourge.

But what they lack in meats they make up in vegetables, and on the day that the Australian pilgrims arrived they had a 16-course dinner for their delectation, all provided without recourse to meats, or meat gravies or soups. And there were cakes and pies and cookies and doughnuts galore. The cooking in the kitchen is all done by steam, the prophet Benjamin having designed the apparatus himself when not busy with his preaching and other duties.

There is a printing department in the colony, and a school, and the "Tabernacle," where the meetings are held. So much for what might be called the plant of this peculiar sect. Now as to the appearance of the members of this colony.

The People.

It is striking, to say the least. No razor or shears are allowed to touch face or head, and both men and women alike wear their hair hanging loose down their backs. The dress of the women is extremely plain, and queer little poke bonnets of straw are worn. The men follow no style or rule in their clothing, the main purpose seeming to be to have something to put on. Some of them wear queerly-tilted, flat-topped hats, and most of them have strong intellectual faces.

Benjamin.

Benjamin, the prophet, is a man of about 46 years of age. He was born in Kentucky, but since his early childhood he has been a wanderer. He has visited nearly every state in the union in his travels. He was converted to the new religion about 14 years ago and since that time has been preaching its doctrines. For a number of years he was in Ohio. He came here two years ago with his wife, Mary, who was also born in Kentucky, and she shares with her husband the duties of leader of the House of Israel.

Benjamin is of medium height, rather slenderly built and has an extremely fine face. His hair is of light reddish brown and hangs down on his shoulders in long silken curls. His beard is silken and curly and his features are aquiline and well formed. His complexion is clear, pink and white, and his eyes are blue and clear. His manner is gentle and well bred. His hands are white. Every movement is as of a man at peace with himself and the whole world. He teaches and preaches gentleness and peacefulness and he impresses his personality upon all with whom he comes in contact. He undoubtedly has a wonderful influence over men, for his followers listen to his voice as though it were the voice of deity. They eagerly drink in every word he says and believe implicitly that he has been sent to lead the world into the millennial period.

Mary, the coworker and assistant leader, is a slender woman, with jet black hair, an aquiline nose, snappy black eyes, and aggressive wide-awake manner. She is a nervous little woman and bears the weight of her duties easily. She shares with her husband all the honors attached to his position and is his constant helpmate. She wears her hair down her back, never uses a hairpin and attires herself in calico except on Sunday, when she dresses well. There are many other [illegible] in the cult in which they could be distinguished in appearance.

In the hall or "Tabernacle," Benjamin is a striking figure as he addresses his followers. On the occasion of our visit he wore a white flannel suit, with white canvas shoes to match. Jewelry that made a great display, although not especially valuable, adorned his person. In his shirt front was a magnificent topaz stone, whose saffron glint was dazzling as the speaker swayed and surged on the billows of his vehement oratory. His preaching was ultra-emotional and exceedingly rapid. His object seemed to be to give a bird's-eye-view of the peculiar cult of which he is the apostle.

In his delivery of the reasons for the faith that is in him Benjamin touched upon a wide range of topics. His reasoning was not always the most cogent that one young woman whose red hair hangs down her back like a curtain of flame and there are several men with hair hanging about their shoulders. Many of the men are both handsome and distinguished in appearance.

could be desired and it would hardly satisfy the "higher criticism." But it satisfied his auditors, few of whom have more than the merest rudiments of enlightened education. They sat there in awe and wonderment, drinking in the saving gospel which they believe came from this man as an inspiration from the Almighty. They did not notice his anachronisms, his poor grammar, his faulty science and his badly-mixed metaphors—or, if they noticed them, their faith was not weakened thereby, but made the more strong, perhaps, because of the unpolished channel through which the gospel of salvation was coming to them in so miraculous a manner.

"Like the waters that cover the sea, our faith will cover the world," was a dogma that he reiterated many times.

Believes Other Religions False.

He said that all the other religions "are false religions" and that the greatest of the world's theologians knew not whereof they spoke. The central point in his religious system seemed a revival of the Buddhistic doctrine of reincarnation. But it was a doctrine that had more than a germ of flattery for himself and his followers. It expressed his belief and promise that himself and his followers, to the number of 144,000, were and are simply the "incarnated angels" who participated in the great battle fought between Satan and Michael, the archangel, in Heaven on the occasion of the great rebellion in Heaven.

Some Curious Prophecies.

They say that seven vials of wrath mentioned in the Bible are to be poured out upon the earth in a short time and they look for bloodshed, for disaster and for all manner of evil immediately before the ushering in of the thousand years of peace. It is asserted that those gathered in Benton Harbor will escape all the trouble and wrath and will come out unscathed from the fiery trials to be given the remainder of the earth.

The new city—destined, they say, to be the capital of the world—is to be governed by the son of man; or, in other words, by Benjamin. He is to be the head of the city and he is to have four pillars to assist him. Besides these four, there will be 12 kings, 24 elders and 70 preachers. It will be the duty of the latter to go through all the world and to tell the people what is to come. It was announced that they would not be sent out until they receive the power from on high, as Christ is said to have received it, and then when they went they would be able to perform miracles and convert the people rapidly. They are out now over all the land, but it has not been heralded abroad that they have performed any miracles.

Benjamin says that a time will come when there will be a second pentecost. The Holy Ghost will descend upon the people as upon Christ at the River Jordan, and, instead of blood in their veins, the people will have spirit. Then they will be pure and powerful and be able to withstand all manner of temptation and overcome all evil.

FOR THE VEGETARIAN.

A Few Recipies For Those That Deny Themselves Meat on Principle and Those That Do Not Care for It.

At the present moment vegetarianism is an almost universal (may one say) fad, and it behooves every housewife entertaining her friends to make sure that her menu shall comprise a sufficient number of vegetable dishes to satisfy her guests. How long the fancy will last who can say, especially as doctors disagree enthusiastically as to the merits of a meat or vegetarian diet. It is probably perfectly true that we not only eat, most of us, a great deal too much generally, but that up to the present time meat has occupied far too large a position in our diet. Under these circumstances, perhaps, the following recipes may help to give a cachet to the menu without unduly increasing the consumption of meat. It must be remembered that vegetable cookery, to be a success, requires quite as much attention and care as any other cookery, a point which is, however, only too frequently overlooked.

Curried Lentils.—For cold weather this is an especially acceptable dish. Put three large tablespoonfuls of good lentils into a pan with enough salted water to cover them nicely, cook them in this till perfectly tender, but not broken, when you strain them from any liquid that may be left. Fry a large minced onion in an ounce of butter till quite tender, then in the same pan fry half a teaspoonful of mild curry powder for a minute or two; next add three sliced tomatoes (canned ones will do), a heaping teaspoonful of flour, and half a pint of boiling water, any of the water in which the lentils were cooked there may be, and lastly stir in a teaspoonful of good curry paste, being careful to get it all smooth. Stir to this the lentils with a knob of loaf sugar, the juice of half a lemon, and one ounce of butter, and stew it all till thick. Make a wall of nicely-boiled rice on a dish, ponr the lentils, etc., in the center, and serve very hot. Where liked, a drop or two of tabasco or a good dash of tamarind juice is a great addition.

Dry Vegetable Curry.—Take some remains of cold cooked vegetables, cut these into neat pieces, and let them heat gently, without actually boiling, in some good curry sauce; when these are quite hot and well flavored lift them out with as much of the sauce as adheres to them, and fry them in a buttered saute pan very gently over a slow fire till the gravy is mostly absorbed, and the vegetables are covered with a powdery kind of sauce. Have ready some fried square croutons well dusted with grated Parmesan and coralline pepper, pile the vegetables on these, and serve very hot.

Salsify au Gratin.—Put a pound of salsify (the black or scorzanera is the best for this) into a pan, with rather more than a pint of water, half a teaspoonful of salt, a dessertspoonful of lemon juice, and about two ounces of butter. Bring this all to the boil, draw it to the side, and let it simmer slowly but steadily for half an hour, when you lift it out and leave till cold. Now butter some gratin shells, or dishes, and dust them with breadcrumbs seasoned with freshly-ground black pepper and salt; have ready a rich bechamel sance lightly flavored with essence of anchovy. Peel the scorzanera, slice it down, and pack the shells with alternate layers of the salsify, bechamel sauce, and seasoned breadcrumbs, repeating these till the dishes are full, and finishing with the breadcrumbs, on which you dot little pieces of butter. Bake in the oven till it is thoroughly hot and the surface is nicely browned, and serve at once.—The Queen.

HOUSEKEEPING NOTES.

Zealous young housekeepers sometimes make the mistake of cleaning paint with sand soap. Don't! It only scratches the paint; the other soap will do the work.

Take your carpets, and even your oilcloths, up once a year.

If you put matting down, be sure the floors are thoroughly dry before it is laid.

Year-old matting gains new life by being wiped up with salt and water.

Clean springs and woodwork of beds carefully, going over joints and ends of slats and every crevice with corrosive sublimate, by way of guarding against possible dust creatures.

Clean out closets and bureaus with turpentine and water and use generous proportions of the turpentine. It's a good ounce of prevention against moths.

THOMAS H. PAYNTER, of Greenup County.

The above is a good picture of Hon. Thomas H. Paynter, Judge of the Court of Appeals, and candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator to succeed Hon. Joseph C. S. Blackburn, the incumbent. Judge Paynter is now in the prime of life, and one of the ablest lawyers in the State. His record as one of the Judges of the highest courts in Kentucky is one of which any jurist should feel proud, and is especially gratifying to his friends who stood by him in his memorable contest when he defeated William Goebel for the nomination, which was made at Augusta in 1894. So eminently fitted for the Judgship is Judge Paynter, that at the conclusion of his first term on the bench no opposition was offered to his second nomination. He is a strict partisan, yet a just Judge, and never permits politics to sway him in his duties to the whole people as an official, and it is this high sense of duty that has made him so popular with the people of Kentucky regardless of party affiliations.

Before being elected as a Judge of the Court of Appeals, Judge Paynter served three terms as a member of Congress from the ninth district of Kentucky, where he made a good record, and ranked as one of the working members of that body. Judge Paynter has always made his canvass for nomination on a high plain, and his canvass for the nomination he is now seeking will be no exception to the rule, as is evidenced by his courteous letter, addressed to Senator Blackburn, declining his challenge to a joint debate of State and national issues. Judge Paynter takes the ground that no good could result to the party in Kentucky from a joint discussion at different points in the State between him and Senator Blackburn, and on that subject, no doubt, many of Senator Blackburn's friends agree with him.

Judge Paynter has occupied a seat upon the bench of the Court of Appeals during the most critical times in the history of the State, and has handed down opinions in many cases of vital interest to its welfare. Within a few months after he went upon the bench he delivered a dissenting opinion in the noted bank tax cases, which the court several years later, reversing itself, adopted, and which the United States Supreme Court upheld, and which is now the law. Not only is Judge Paynter a great lawyer, but he is a stalwart Democrat and an old fashioned Kentucky gentleman, and if elected to the Senate of the United States will carry ability, honor and prestige to that body. He will reflect credit not only upon himself, but upon the entire constituency he represents.

Cincinnati meat retailers say that the advance in beef prices in the last two weeks is beginning to be felt seriously by those in humble circumstances. With the price one and a half to two cents above normal, the butchers report a noticeable falling off in trade, especially in those parts of the city where workingmen live.

Land having broken so very nicely this year very little labor will be required to prepare it for planting. In many fields it is scarcely necessary to use a harrow or other implements for preparing the seed bed after the turning plow has done its work, but then the best time to cultivate the ground is previous to the planting of the corn or tobacco.

There is not another town in the county in which the streets present as neglected a condition as they do in many places in Burlington. This should not be the case, and can be changed with very little labor, and the conditions very much improved Note the neat appearance about the the premises of those who prevent the accumulation of scraps of old paper and other rubbish.

A gentleman who believes the roads ought to be improved as per the suggestions made in these columns in the last few weeks, said to the RECORDER the other day, "Keep the matter before those interested, and results will surely follow. The plan is inexpensive, and one that should be adopted without hesitation by those who have teams, as they are the persons who are mostly interested."

State Superintendent of Schools Fuqua is notifying all County Superintendents that the American Book Company has refused to renew its bond given under the old "county adoption" system and any business transacted with that company now under the old contract is transacted without bond. The bond was originally given for $10,000 and in the Mason County suit against the book company for breach of contract judgment was recovered for the full amount of the bond. The company now says it having paid that amount there is no longer any bond and refuses to renew it. It is believed further legal complications will result.

I suffered for four months with extreme nervousness and lassitude. I had a sinking feeling in my stomach which no medicine seemed to relieve, and losing my appetite I became weak and lost my vitality. In three weeks I lost fourteen pounds of flesh and felt that I must find speedy relief to regain my health. Having heard Wine of Cardui praised by several of my friends, I sent for a bottle and was certainly very pleased with the results. Within three days my appetite returned and my stomach troubled me no more. I could digest my food without difficulty and the nervousness gradually diminished. Nature performed her functions without difficulty and I am once more a happy and well woman.

The following business has been transacted in the county court in the last few days:

Citizens' Telephone Company listed for taxation on $1,350.

J. E. Ransom qualified as administrator of the estate of W. T. Roberts, deceased, and Levi Wolfe, Jas. W. Cleek were appointed appraisers.

Walter Crigler was appointed administrator of the estate of John W. Crigler, deceased.

A peculiar and painful accident happened at South Fork Christian church during Rev. Edgar Riley's morning services, last Sunday. Miss Ella Roberts, daughter of the late James Roberts, of that neighborhood, was occupying a seat five or six benches from the stove, and a celluloid comb she wore in her hair caught fire, and before the blaze could be extinguished a very considerable portion of her luxuriant growth of hair was burnt from her head, and a large blister made on the scalp. The occurrence created intense excitement, during which the young lady fainted and had to be carried out of the auditorium, and it was some time before the congregation got settled down.

Milton Wilhoit, one of the county's oldest and best citizens, died at his home near Florence, last Wednesday night in his 85th year. He had been married twice, his first wife being a daughter of the late Henry Aylor, and the mother of his two children, Ezra Wilhoit and Mrs. Butler Carpenter. By his last wife, a sister of postmaster James Murray, of Florence, he had no children. Mr. Wilhoit had owned and occupied the farm where he died for many years, and by his successful management had accumulated enough that he could pass his old age in ease and comfort. He was a man of strong mind and when he arrived at a conclusion there was no faltering, but his desire was always to be on the side of right and justice, and his dealings with his fellowmen were along that line. In his passing another of the old and honorable landmarks has been removed from the ranks of the few who bore hardships of early life in this county, preparing the way for those who came after them.

The Burlington Grays and the Belleview base ball team hooked up again last Saturday, on the ground of the latter. The game was close and exciting and Belleview pulled down the victory by a score of 8 to 2. Sandford and Brady for Belleview, and Gray and Hogan for the Grays, were the batteries and did nice work. Although the weather was too cold for playing each team put up a good article of ball, which was witnessed by a considerable crowd of spectators who kept close to a large fire that was built especially for their comfort. Following is the score:

Struck out—By Gray 10, by Brady 7.

Hits—Grays, 2 two and one three bagger. Belleview 2 singles and 2 doubles.

The Boones and the Grays will lock horns at the Burlington park next Saturday afternoon. Following is the lineup Saturday for the Grays: [illegible] Gray, Jackson, J. Kirk, H. [illegible] White, Hogan, Cline [illegible].

J. FRANK GRANT DEAD.

J. Frank Grant, Grand Secretary and Adjutant General of the Sovereign Lodge of Odd-Fellows and a native of Louisville, died at 4 o'clock yesterday morning in Baltimore, Md., after an illness of about seven weeks of Bright's disease.

Mr. Grant's case had been a puzzle to the doctors almost from the initial stages. February 20 last he was taken ill with rheumatic gout, which localized itself in his left ankle. This joint gave agonizing pain from the time of the first appearance of the trouble. On Friday of the following week he became a little delirious, the family and doctors supposing this symptom produced by the morphia administered. On Friday, March 3, his case had developed alarming conditions, becoming complicated with kidney trouble. Dr. Van Ness, the physician, called Dr. J. M. T. Finney to see him on the Sunday following. It was difficult to locate the source of the delirium, and this greatly puzzled the doctors. The alarming conditions were allayed, but the delirium continued at intervals.

March 15 his brother, Dr. H. H. Grant, went from this city to have a consultation with Drs. Van Ness and Atkinson. The patient continued to grow worse, when an operation on the diseased joint was recommended on Tuesday, March 21. Since the operation he had been considered beyond recovery, but his condition Monday was slightly improved. He was taking nourishment, which was regarded as a favorable symptom. During the night a change for the worse came and yesterday he died.

Mr. Grant was a native of this city. He was born at the home of his father, Dr. E. L. Grant, September 1, 1843. His mother's maiden name was Jane R. Prest, and was well known to some of the older members of St. Paul's church. His wife, who was Miss Franklina Garnett, of Boone county, survives him, also two daughters, Clara, the elder, is married to Edwin J. Curry, of Baltimore, Assistant Grand Secretary of Sovereign Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F. Elizabeth is married to Daniel Strother, a prominent lawyer, of Welsh, West Virginia.

Mr. Grant had one son, Dr. Charles L. Grant, who was well known in Louisville about ten years ago, and who at that time was in active practice of his profession, and demonstrator of surgery at the hospital College of Physicians, when his health broke down and he moved to Mexico, where he died in a few months.

Three of Mr. Grant's brothers are living—Drs. W. Ed and Horace Grant—all well-known physicians in Louisville. The other brother, Ernest L. Grant, lives in Boone county, Kentucky, on the old homestead.

Mr. Grant spent most of the early part of his life in Kenton and Boone counties, Kentucky, and in early manhood became a general merchant at Petersburg, Ky., and later on a banker on the same place. He had been an active Odd-Fellow for forty years. For twenty years he was an influential member of the Grand Lodge of Kentucky and had been one of the leading members of the Sovereign Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., for at least twenty years. About eight years ago he was elected Sovereign Grand Secretary, and moved to Baltimore, the headquarters of the Order of Odd-Fellows.

Under his care the financial interest of the office improved very rapidly. When he took charge a debt of several thousand dollars existed, but this was soon paid off and now there is a balance of over $100,000.

Mr. Grant was noted for his bigness of heart. He was very liberal and charitable and would never turn anyone away empty handed who appeared to be in distress. He was a man of most engaging personality, gifted in a high degree with the faculty of mimicking others, a capital after-dinner speaker and a charming story teller. He and W. W. Morris, of this city, for many years always traveled together to meetings of the Sovereign Grand Lodge, and, both being men of unusual wit, were looked upon as entertainers for the whole company. One of their friends once referred to them as the "end men" of the troupe.

The remains will be interred on his lot in the cemetery at Petersburg, Ky., to-morrow afternoon, April 14th, at 3 o'clock. This will be in accordance with his wish, as his family say while in perfect health he often said that after his death he wished to rest in Kentucky soil.—C.-J., April 13.

In 1871 Mr. Grant became a member of Morning Star Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Petersburg and entered the Grand Lodge of Kentucky in 1874; was Grand Master of the State Grand Lodge in 1884 and 1885, and Grand Patriarch of the State Grand Encampment in 1888. He represented the Grand Lodge of Kentucky in the Sovereign Grand Lodge at Los Angeles, Cal., September, 1888, and continuously from 1890 to 1896, when he was elected Grand Secretary of the Sovereign Grand Lodge, the head of the Order of Odd-Fellows in the world, and to this office he was re-elected bi-ennially ever since. He was one of the most courteous of men, classical and refined as a gentleman, a typical representative of the true Kentuckian, and Boone County was most proud of him.

The funeral services were conducted by the Odd-Fellows from the home of Dr. J. M. Grant in Petersburg, at 3 p. m., last Friday, in the presence of many friends and a large number of Odd-Fellows from the local lodges and from Baltimore, Cincinnati, Newport, Covington, Lawrenceburg, Aurora and Rising Sun. Some of the most prominent members of the order in the country were present, among them Past Grand Sire John C. Unnderwood, of Washington, D. C.; Past Grand Sire M. C. Cable, of Michigan; Grand Secretary R. G. Elliott, of Lexington, Ky., and others.

The floral offerings were numerous, beautiful and of most appropriate designs, Washington Lodge No. 1; Ontario Lodge, Canada, and the Grand Lodge of Kentucky being among the contributors. The pallbearers were Thos. F., Dr. James M., Dr. Ed., R. B., Homer and Armistead Grant, sons of W. H. Grant and cousins of the deceased.

Haran or Canaan ---Which?

Scripture Authority: "Now the Lord said unto Abraham, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto the land that I will show thee; and I will make of thee a great nation; and I will bless thee and make thy name great; and be thou a blessing; and I will bless them that bless thee, and him that curseth thee will I curse; and in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed. So Abraham went, as the Lord had spoken unto him; and Lot went with him; and Abraham was seventy and five years old when he departed out of Haran."—Gen. 12:1-4.

SHALL it be onward with God into unknown places, or abiding in the present place of possession and achievement? Shall it be weariness and trial of the journey, or ease and comfort of the present situation? Shall it be a striving for something better, or a self-satisfaction and idle contentment with that which has already been attained? Shall there be a giving up that there may be a fuller possession, a seeking that there may be a finding?

These are questions which some time or other come to every heart, and the manner of the answer, the nature of the decision, determines the direction of the current of the life, whether it shall be onward and progressive or stagnant and unfruitful. God calls to every soul. His hand points out the Canaan which He would have us occupy, and the response we give to the call, the faithfulness with which we follow the pathway pointed out, determines our destiny and our mission in life.

Haran, beautifully located, bountiful in her gifts, kind and generous in her association of friends and loved ones, a place we delight in, it seems just the spot where we should dwell. But while life is running smoothly and sweetly, and perhaps just as we have settled down to the ease and contentment of permanent abode there, there comes the revelation of a better land and the call to move on to possess it. And then it is the question: Haran or Canaan—which?

Haran is better than Ur, but it is not Canaan. It is a half way point which, like Abraham, many people reach. The start is made for the goodly land of promise, but fair Haran is so inviting that it becomes a resting place, and oh! too often, at last the permanent abode.

Scripture tells us that Abraham, Terah, Lot and Sarah, Abraham's wife, "went forth from Ur of the Chaldees, to go into the land of Canaan; and they came unto Haran, and dwelt there."

And there is where we find Abraham as our story begins. At Haran—dwelling in security and plenty, with Canaan forgotten, and no thought or ambition for the journey that would lead to the better land, the place of larger mission, and greater destiny.

Ah, if we are dwelling at Haran, the half-way point, when we had intended going onward and upward to a higher plane, to a larger place, to fuller life and mission, let us go out alone and hear God call us, and feel the touch which shall move us to follow Him to the place He would give us for a possession!

Hurry, Brother Abraham, our father, Terah, is dying and asks for thee. Since yester night we have feared that he would not live until your return. We have searched for thee in vain. Where hast thou been?" and quite breathless with his running and hurried speech the speaker paused an instant by the side of the man whom a few moments before he had spied coming across the fields, and for whom he had evidently been watching.

Abraham brought himself up with a jerk and shock, much as one might when running into an unseen obstruction in the dark. He had been in deep meditation and had not seen his brother, Nahor, coming, and the first consciousness of his presence came with the sound of his excited voice and his startling message. Like one wakened out of a dream, he paused in mute questioning, while over his face conflicting emotions were seen to play, as though grief and joy, disappointment and hope were struggling for the mastery within.

"Well," impatiently exclaimed Nahor, "we must hurry. Our father even now may be dead," and grasping the arm of Abraham, he hastened with him toward the tent which could just be seen through the grove of splendid trees which surrounded it. Neither spoke.

Nahor could not understand his brother's mood. He was surprised, nay indignant, at the manner in which he had received the news. He never had been able to understand him, much less now. A new something, a fresh element in his bearing, made him a deeper enigma to him than ever before.

When Abraham had left Ur of the Chaldees, refusing to be bound by the religion of the place, he laughed at him and derisively called him a fanatic. When he had returned and induced his father Terah and Lot and Sarah to leave with him for a distant land, he had angrily refused to go with them. Later, when he heard that they had stopped at Haran, and that it was a goodly land, he had removed thither with his family, hoping that Abraham had given up his notions become, as he called it, sensible other people. He had gods which he worshiped in and Abraham told him to worship, and but all-knowing while there had been no open quarrel, for Abraham was too quiet and amiable to quarrel with anyone, there was little that was common between them, and Nahor had no sympathy or patience with Abraham's views. And now as they hurried onward side by side, he was half angry, half perplexed by his brother's calm, thoughtful reserve, as though within there rolled a whole ocean of thought and experience to which he was an utter stranger.

Ah, could he have known the experiences of the past 24 hours which had come to Abraham, he would not have wondered so much.

Led by an irresistible impulse to be alone, Abraham, the day before, had climbed the heights of an adjacent mountain, and there in the solitude of the sheltering rocks with the heaven spreading its star-gemmed canopy over his head and the silver rim of the new moon shining out bravely and giving promise of larger, fuller light as the days should unfold, God had come to him and spoken, commanding him, saying:

"Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto the land that I will show thee; and I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and be thou a blessing; and I will bless them that bless thee, and him that curseth thee will I curse; and in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

Then the conflict of that night. All through the long hours he wrestled with himself and his desires. How could he go? Why need he go? Could he not serve God as well at Haran as elsewhere? What would his father say? What would Sarah, his wife, say? But faith and obedience were finally triumphant, and as he came down the mountain side and turned his face homeward it had been with the settled purpose to obey God at all hazards. And that peace and confidence which come from following the pathway of duty had filled his soul. But his one concern was his father. He was aged and infirm. He knew he could not take him with him. He was loath to leave him behind. Thus in deep thought, as he studied over the problem, his brother had met him and told him of his father's condition. Who can wonder that a peculiar light shone in his eye, and that conflicting emotions surged through his soul and made their impress upon his face? His brother could not understand, and he could not explain now. And so they walked along in silence and soon entered the tent door, and in the gloom of the far corner saw the form of the aged father.

Hearing the hurried footsteps, the old man half-raised himself, and, turning his head in the direction of the sound, he asked, in a thin, shrill voice:

"Has Abraham come?"

By way of answer, Abraham threw himself down by the side of his father's couch, and, placing his strong arm about him, drew him to himself.

"Where hast thou been, Abraham?" asked the old man, as he gazed searchingly into the face which bent over him.

Abraham hesitated. Could he tell his father of how God had spoken to him, and of his purposes and plans? He feared to, for he knew Terah's hopes centered about Haran, and that it was his desire that his children should make it their permanent home.

But apparently failing to note the embarrassment of his son, Terah continued:

"I have something of importance to say to thee. Ere I die I want to commend thee to thy God, and to urge thee to obey Him. Last night in a vision I thought I saw God pointing toward the south, and heard Him say: 'Canaan.' It was the land for which we started. It is the land to which God would have you go," and lifting up his hand, he blessed his children and grandchildren, and then, lying back in Abraham's arms, he passed peacefully away.

So unexpected were the words, bringing such new light and encouragement to one heart, and causing such wonder and perplexity to the others, that it was some minutes before all realized that Terah was dead. Then grief overcame other feelings, and the sense of loss shut out other thoughts. But when Terah had been laid away in the tomb, and the days of mourning were ended, Abraham called all the members of the family together and said:

"God has called me to leave Haran and to go to a land which He will show me. You all heard our Father Terah's last words. Can we doubt that God has spoken? Can we refuse to obey His voice?"

A deep silence followed. At last Lot spoke up and said:

"My desires are in Haran. I love its beauty. I enjoy its ease. But I believe in Abraham's God. I believe that He has spoken. I do not understand why, and yet I feel that Abraham is right, and I will go with him."

As Lot ceased speaking, a smile of mingled ridicule and scorn spread over the face of Nahor, and, with an impatient shrug of his shoulders, he said:

"It is better to keep what we have than to go after an uncertainty. The gods have been kind to us here; why should we tempt their anger by wandering elsewhere? As for this God of Abraham, I will not believe what I cannot see and what I cannot understand;" and so saying, Nahor turned and walked away—back to his fields and vineyards, back to the ease and luxury of the life at Haran, while Abraham and Lot, choosing to obey God, collected "all their substance that they had gathered, and the souls that they had gotten in Haran; and they went forth to go into the land of Canaan; and into the land of Canaan they came."

A PISTOL DUEL.

One Man Dead, Another Fatally and a Third Wounded.

London, Ky., April 17.—Jeff Goff is dead, Bill Miller probably fatally wounded and J. B. Landrum shot in the hand as a result of a pistol battle at Pittsburg, a mining town two miles west of here, on the L. & N. railroad. The affair is said to have been the outcome of a quarrel and fatal shooting that occurred about a month ago. At that time Dan Miller, a brother of Bill Miller, killed Zach Ward while trying to shoot Eli Hall. Landrum is a brother-in-law of Hall, and a warm friend of Zach Ward and his brothers, Frank and George. The latter two were with Landrum when the trouble occurred, and are said to have participated in the fight.

The row took place in Landrum's restaurant. Fully 50 shots were exchanged and the place was riddled with bullets. Landrum asserts that Goff came into the place accompanied by Bill Miller, and that the two at once opened fire on him. He returned the fire, emptying his revolver twice and forcing them to retreat.

Miller alleges that Landrum and the Ward boys sent for him, and as soon as he appeared began shooting, and that he shot back in self-defense. He also says that Goff, who was unarmed, got between them and was killed accidentally. Goff was shot seven times—in the breast, the left arm and through both hands. Miller is shot in the breast, thigh and arm. All of the parties were drinking.

ASSESSES RAILROADS.

The Kentucky State Board Fixes the Valuations.

Frankfort, Ky., April 15.—The Kentucky state board of valuation and assessment fixed the total valuation of the L. & N. Railroad Co. in the state at $32,267,405. From this was deducted the value of the tangible property of the company, valued at $23,073,755, to arrive at the value of the franchise, which is found to be $9,193,650.

This is an increase of $500,000 in valuation of franchise over last year. The board fixed the total valuation of the Illinois Central Railroad Co. at $15,975,180, and franchise valuation at $4,429,120.

It fixed the total valuation of the Southern Railway Co. in Kentucky at $2,586,650, and its franchise valuation at $1,045,980.

FIRST OF THE KIND.

An Ambulance Corps To Be Added To the Kentucky State Guard.

Bowling Green, Ky., April 15.—It was stated here from an authoritative source that two ambulance corps, of four members each, are to be added to the Kentucky national guard. The two companies are to consist of physicians and druggists, and are to be organized under direction of Col. A. T. McCormick, of this city, a member of Gov. Beckham's staff. One company will be located in Bowling Green and the other in Lexington. These will be the first ambulance corps ever established in the national guard in the United States.

SHE PLEADED GUILTY.

Mrs. Brockwell Will Be Given a Life Sentence.

Paducah, Ky., April 14.—Mrs. Mary Brockwell was arraigned in the McCracken circuit court. Her attorneys argued for continuance. After three hours' deliberation by the lawyers at 5 p. m. she came into court and pleaded guilty to willful murder. By agreement of her attorneys and the commonwealth she was given a life sentence in the Frankfort penitentiary.

Appointed Maid of Honor.

Mt. Sterling, Ky., April 17.—Miss Anna Johnson, of this city, was appointed a maid of honor for the Confederate reunion to be held in June. Miss Johnson will attend the reunion with her father, Col. Thomas Johnson, said to be the oldest living confederate soldier, being 93.

Slot Machines Are Out.

Bellevue, Ky., April 15.—On the stroke of 12 all slot machines in Bellevue were turned to the wall. This was pursuant to an order issued by Mayor Ellis. The "silent salesman" will have a few days more of grace in Dayton.

Officials Vindicated.

Covington, Ky., April 15.—Vindication for the officials of Covington and Kenton county from charges of corruption in connection with the operation of the Covington poolrooms was the result of the investigation of the Kenton special grand jury.

For Cutting Down Trees.

Frankfort, Ky., April 17.—The Franklin county grand jury made a report indicting Jules Darnell, City Engineer Tragier and the Frankfort Street Railway Co. on two counts, one of which charges the cutting down of trees in front of a city school.

Automobile Project.

Mt. Sterling, Ky., April 17.—W. B. Walker, of Cincinnati, has been in this city prospecting for an automobile line from Winchester, Clark county, via North Middletown. Mr. Walker represents an Ohio syndicate.

INVESTIGATION ORDERED.

A Hargis Juror Confessed That He Coached Attorney.

Lexington, Ky., April 14.—Sensational charges were made against the attorneys for Judge Hargis.

One juror admitted in open court that he had coached the attorneys as to good jurors for their client and got on the jury himself to help Hargis. The court is investigating the case.

The 300 men summoned for jury service were in court and many of them brought doctors' certificates and excuses, claiming to be ill, and asking to be released from service.

Almost an hour was taken up hearing these excuses and when this had been finished Attorney George Webb, for the defense, asked that the entire venire be discharged on the ground that the names of 37 of them did not appear on the books of the county assessor. Commonwealth's Attorney Allen opposed the motion and a lengthy argument was entered into.

Lexington, Ky., April 17.—After one of the most intense struggles in the judicial history of this county a jury was selected, impaneled and sworn to try County Judge James Hargis, of Breathitt county, on the charge of complicity in the killing of James Cockrill.

PORTRAIT AGENT KILLED.

He Failed To Bring Back the Original Photograph.

Tompkinsville, Ky., April 17.—J. W. Harlan stabbed and fatally wounded Porter England at this place. England, who was a traveling agent for a picture company, went to Harlan's house to deliver a picture, and while there, Harlan's family claims, used insulting language, which brought on a quarrel. England ran about two squares to the hotel, when he fell and expired on the door steps. He was 22 years old and lived at Leitschfield, Grayson county, Ky. It seems that when England tried to collect for the picture he did not have the original photo, the return of which Harlan insisted on before paying. England either had lost the photo or refused to give it up.

SNOW IN KENTUCKY.

A Furious Storm Prevailed at Frankfort For Hours.

Frankfort, Ky., April 17.—A furious snowstorm prevailed here for two hours. Fruit growers say the fruit was not injured by the snow, but the dry cold may ruin the crop completely. At London, Ky., the snow has been falling at intervals all day and the ground is well covered. The thermometer there is now at 30, and nearly all fruit is thought to be killed.

A cold wave struck the section around Owingsville and it is feared fruit is killed. At Weston, W. Va., the thermometer was below the freezing point.

Brother and Sister Killed by Lightning.

Bowling Green, Ky., April 14.—It is reported here that a double fatality attended a thunder storm that passed over Huntsville, in Butler county. Miss Barber, aged 21, and her younger brother were out when the storm came up, and took refuge in a barn. The barn was struck by lightning and both brother and sister were instantly killed, their bodies being found after the storm, when search for the missing ones was made.

Women Attack Poolroome.

Covington, Ky., April 15.—Five hundred men and women, with petitions bearing 3,010 signatures, urged the passage of the Covington anti-poolroom ordinance before a council committee, but the committee declined to favorably report the measure.

Mt. Sterling, Ky., April 15.—Cincinnati and Columbus, O., capitalists have purchased and leased 6,000 acres of fire clay lands in Carter county and will at once begin a survey and make plans for the erection of two large kilns and mills. The clay is said to be the richest in the state.

Crusade Against Billboards.

Newport, Ky., April 14.—A crusade is to be begun against bill boards in this city. Emulating the example set by Cincinnati for more attractive thoroughfares, the city authorities are to begin a movement looking to the suppression of the objectionable advertisements on dead walls, fences and other places.

"MY WIFE'S PEOPLE COMING"

"We Have Had a Splendid Winter" in Western Canada.

Canada's inrush this year is wonderfully great and considerably ahead of any previous year. It is always interesting to those who contemplate moving to read expressions of opinion from those living in the country. It is therefore our pleasure to reproduce the following written to an Agent of the Government and forwarded to the Immigration Branch of the Department of the Interior at Ottawa:

Birch Hills, Sask, Can., Feb. 1, 1905.

Dear Sir: I take pleasure in dropping you a few lines to let you know how we are getting along up here and how we like the place. We have been here close on to a year now and think the place is fine. We have been out every day this winter working in the bush getting out logs for buildings, etc., getting rails for fencing. We have not suffered with the cold as much as we did in Chicago. My little boys are out every day with their sleighs having a good time. The lowest the temperature has been this winter is 34 below and it is very still, no wind.

We had a splendid summer. We put up about 50 tons of hay and will have about 30 tons to sell; hay brings $8.00 per ton now and will be higher in the spring. We have 20 acres broke and ready for crop. We worked on the Can. Nor. Ry. for awhile this summer and am just 3 miles from the R. R. and townsite. The steel is all laid to within 2 miles of the River and we often see the train bringing supplies for the Bridge.

My wife's people are coming up about May. I wish you would write them and if there should be anyone coming to Prince Albert that could do with a half a car let them know. The homesteads are all taken up within 12 miles of us. I often think if this land were only in the States what a rush there would be; it is the richest land and the most productive I ever saw, and the climate is O. K.

I know that people back there that I write to do not believe me when I write them what a splendid winter we are having, they think we are all frozen up. We have only about 8 inches of snow, and there are cattle on the range that have not been rounded up this winter. Day after day the Ther. raises up to 50 and 60, and I don't believe we have had a day this winter that it has stayed at zero. My wife says that we used to think that zero was cold in Chicago. But we don't mind it one bit. Christmas night we went out and drove 5 miles with our 3 little boys, it was 20 below and there was not a whimper from anyone of them. I'd hate to do it in old Chicago.

Well, I guess I will close and you can tell anyone in the U. S. that they cannot do better than come to the Prince Albert District. I remain, Yours truly.

(Signed) J. D. HEAD.

TRADE AND TRAFFIC.

Japan has two commercial museums in which foreigners are allowed to display goods free of charge.

Austria-Hungary's exports of sugar last year were 4,700,000 metric hundredweights, 1,000,000 hundredweights less than 1903.

Reports show that 53 per cent. of the oil produced in the United States is from the districts west of the Mississippi: California, Texas, Louisiana, Kansas, Indian territory, Oklahoma, Colorado and Wyoming produce about 63,000,000 barrels of oil a year.

A Heavy Fine.

Under the Elkins law, any railroad company which pays rebates in any form, or any shipper who accepts them, is liable to a fine of from $1,000 to $20,000, upon conviction. It also prohibits the carrying of freight at less than the published tariffs. The Interstate Commerce Commission is empowered to detect and prosecute violators of this statute. President Knapp, of the Commission, states that since this law was passed, rebate paying has been as rare as forgery.

ALL BROKEN DOWN.

No Sleep—No Appetite—Just a Continual Backache.

Joseph McCauley, of 144 Sholto street, Chicago, Sachem of Tecumseh Lodge, says: "Two years ago my health was completely broken down. My back ached and was so lame that at times I was hardly able to dress myself. I lost my appetite and was unable to sleep. There seemed to be no relief until I took Doan's Kidney Pills; but four boxes of this remedy effected a complete and permanent cure. If suffering humanity knew the value of Doan's Kidney Pills they would use nothing else, as it is the only positive cure I know."

Easter Memories

By B. G. MASON

"Easter and eggs 30 cents a dozen! Why, when I was a boy I could get them for the asking. When that mite of a girl brought her brother's luncheon to-day she said: 'We won't get any eggs this Easter, John, they're too high.' Easter and no eggs! Think of it, Sarah!"

David Harris laid his paper across his knees, took off his spectacles, and looked straight into the blazing wood fire as if gazing on some enchanted picture.

"I wish she'd come every day," he murmured, softly. "Strange, but there was something about the girl that reminded me strongly of Beth. Something pink on her hat or around her neck, I don't know just what, but Beth and her pink sunbonnet haven't been out of my mind this afternoon."

"Easter was a great day at your house, Cousin David," remarked his companion.

"Yes, Beth and I usually spent the afternoon before hunting eggs and coloring them. There were great boxes of them behind the counter in father's store, but we preferred to run over to grandfather's far..., a mile or more away, and hunt for what we wanted; it was fun.

"Grandmother's reply to our yearly question was ever the same: 'Certainly, my dears; run out to the henhouse and fill your baskets.' But the substantial brick henhouse, with its sitting-room and dining-room, and its upstairs where the fowls went to roost, drew us not thither. We liked best to search for the hiding places of the outdoor hens; those that roamed over the farm at their own sweet will, stole their nests and laid whenever and wherever they pleased.

"Strikes! Such things were unknown. Those hens knew that they were born to lay eggs, and there was a jubilant cackling going on all day somewhere on the farm. It was always Easter with those hens.

"After the egg hunting Beth and I buried ourselves in the kitchen, for the remainder of the day, with pots, pans, kettles and dyestuffs. It wouldn't have been half an Easter to us without colored eggs. Logwood chips produced a beautiful purple, onion skins a yellow tinge. For variety we sometimes stuck bits of beeswax on the shells, which, in these places, remained white and gave the egg a spotted appearance.

"From mother's box of pieces Beth brought forth bright colored figured calicoes, reds, blues, greens, etc, colors that would 'run.' She sewed a bit of the cloth round each egg, then we dropped them into boiling water, where they remained a few minutes and came out with the figures and colors of the cloth stamped upon them.

"O, Beth! Beth! it's 20 years or more since you went away, and I'd give the world for a glimpse of your sweet face under that pink sunbonnet now," was the cry of the man's yearning heart.

The March wind whistled and shrieked without, emphasizing the silence within.

"Sarah," resumed Mr. Harris, rising suddenly, "I'd like to have John and his sister spend Easter with us; what do you say?"

"Why, yes, of course, with all my heart."

"We'll have them come, then, and we'll give them all the eggs they can eat for once. Don't believe they ever saw a hen's nest in their lives."

The next day Mr. Harris interviewed his office boy.

"John," said he, "who looks after you since your aunt died?"

"My sister Alice, sir."

"How old is she?"

"Going on 12, sir."

"Well, I want you and Alice to spend the day with me to-morrow. We breakfast at nine."

"Thank you, sir," replied John, his eyes fairly sparkling as he thought of the good news in store for Alice.

"Well bred, if they are poor," was Mr. Harris' mental comment as John and Alice appeared before him the next morning.

Their fresh young voices and cheery faces charmed him, and before the day was over he had fully resolved to adopt the orphans.

We'll have a new Beth and David growing up in our home. I'll take them out on the farm next summer and show them what hen's nests and hen roosts are like. We'll have Easter every day in the year."

Curious Customs of the Season, the Origin of Which Is Lost in Antiquity.

The distribution of eggs at Easter has descended to us from the greatest of the Chinese spring festivals, inaugurated more than 700 years before the Christian era.

The custom was particularly popular during the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries in England. The pope sent Henry VIII. an Easter egg in a silver case.

In Russia it is common to exchange visits and eggs on Easter day.

In Italy dishes of eggs are sent to the priests to be blessed, after which they are carried home and placed in the center of the table.

In Spain and Germany the eggs are not blessed, but they are highly colored and distributed among callers to be eaten or taken away according to the taste of the individual.

The custom, in one form or another, exists among the Jews, Greeks, Turks and Persians.

"Pass" was the ancient name for Easter, and the eggs were often called "pace," "pach" or "pass" eggs.

In Scotland eggs are taken to church to be blessed. They are afterward distributed among the members of the household and are either eaten or saved as keepsakes.

The decoration of ordinary eggs originated in England. Gilding the shells was the first step. This was followed by the additions of ribbons, pictures and various other devices to please the little folk.

These ... are given and received with the familiar Easter greeting: "Christ is risen!" and the answer: "He is risen, indeed!"

Germans first introduced games into the Easter celebration. Eggs were hidden about the lawn or grounds or in the house. Then the children hunted for them, the finder of the greatest number receiving a prize.

Sometimes the eggs were all put in one nest over which a rabbit was placed on guard. How this animal became identified with Easter is not known, but in time young children began to believe that the colored eggs were laid by the rabbit.

Egg racing is a favorite amusement of Russian, German and French children. The eggs are rolled down hill and the prize goes to the boy whose egg rolls the greatest number of races without damage to its shell.

This game is played by Washington children in the rear of the white house on Easter Monday.

In Germany there are tracks made of twigs down which each egg may roll without interference from any other one. The boy whose egg arrives unbroken at the foot of the hill collects "toll" of his opponent whose egg is cracked.

Another game is played by two boys who stand, each holding an egg, and suddenly strike them together. The owner of the heavy-shelled egg, if he possesses skill, can break the eggs of several players before his own is injured. Then he is a "cock of one, two three or four eggs," as the case may be.

Eggs are colored by means of the aniline dyes. By the addition of horns, ears, tails, legs or fins eggs may be transformed into many grotesque figures.—N. Y. World.

Immortality

By VICTOR HUGO

Man is an infinite little copy of God; that is glory enough for man. I am a man, an invisible atom, a drop in the ocean, a grain of sand on the shore. Little as I am, I feel the God in me, because I can also bring forth out of my chaos. I make books, which are creations. I feel in myself that future life; I am like a forest which has been more than once cut down; the new shoots are stronger and livelier than ever.

I am rising, I know, toward the sky. The sunshine is on my head. The earth gives me its generous sap, but heaven lights me with the reflection of unknown worlds. You say the soul is nothing, but the result of bodily powers. Why, then, is my soul more luminous when my bodily powers begin to fail? Winter is on my head and eternal spring is in my heart. Then I breathe at this hour the fragrance of the lilacs, the violets and the roses as at 20 years ago. The nearer I approach the end the plainer I hear around me the symphonies of the worlds which invite me.

It is marvelous, yet simple. It is a fairy tale and it is historic. For half a century I have been writing my thoughts in prose and verse; history, philosophy, drama, romance, tradition, satire, ode and song. I have tried all, but I feel I have not said a thousandth part of what is in me. When I go down to the grave I can say, like many others, I have finished my day's work, but I cannot say I have finished my life. My days will begin again the next morning. The tomb is not a blind alley; it is a thoroughfare. It closes on the twilight to open on the dawn.

Vanished.

When Easter comes your mood grows rash
And soon you find that you have spent
In various manners, all the cash
You save by being good in Lent.
—Washington Star.

Promise of the Resurrection.

God has written the promise of the resurrection, not in books alone, but in every leaf in spring time.—Luther.

English in Japan.

Two Japanese who have been in Gainesville for some time to purchase blooded cattle to be shipped to their native land, declares that within 50 years the language of Japan will be English. They say it is being taught in every school there. Farmers here say that the two Japs are using the American system of judging cattle.—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

Vice President's Nephew.

Frederick Fairbanks, a relative of the vice president, is winning fame in the musical world of London, where his fine ability as a pianist has called forth high encomiums. Mr. Fairbanks was born in Paris in 1868, and obtained the greater part of his musical education in Frankfort. For a time he was a teacher in the conservatory of Dresden.

What Good Corn Crop Means.

The farmers in the great corn states of the west are laying plans to broaden the basis of national prosperity by planting more corn than usual. Corn is our great crop. Unlimited corn stands for cheaper beef and pork, more business for the carriers and more purchasing power for the workingman's dollar.—Philadelphia Record.

Tough.

Lady—For goodness' sakes, Bridget, what kind of greens are these?

Bridget—The spinage was fed to the cow by mistake, ma'am, so I cooked up one o' them parlor palms. The guests won't know the difference.

"But Bridget! Those palms were artificial!"—Detroit Free Press.

Needed Everywhere.

Japan absolutely prohibits and prevents the smoking of tobacco by persons under 20 years of age. That is the sort of regulation much needed in the United States of America, as well as everywhere else.—Hartford Times.

The Wise Father.

A Cass county farmer wanted to get his daughter married off. A young man called the second time and the farmer began to object, saying he didn't like him. They were married the next week.—Kansas City Journal.

Odd Item of Expense.

"To burying carcass of a supposed elephant, washed ashore close to Ballycrovane Coastguard station, £1," was an item passed at the last meeting of the Castletownbere rural council, Cork, says the Irish Independent.

The Fools Are Not All Dead.

The recent failure of the get-rich-quick concerns, and the immediate rising of one on another's ashes, show the propriety of a national celebration of an All-Fools' day.—Baltimore American.

Spent on Golf.

It is calculated that $50,000,000 a year is spent on golf. There are 879 golf clubs in England, 760 in America, 632 in Scotland and 134 in Ireland, numbering altogether 600,000 players.

Already Triumphant.

Prof. Williston's dubious outgivings concerning the coming domination of birds over men must refer to the growing popularity of the stork.—New Bedford Standard.

The One Thing.

Mr. Jones—Mary, can a woman keep anything to herself?

Mrs. Jones—Yes; her private opinion of her husband.—Chicago Journal.

Injure Horses' Temper.

Motor cars are said to be having a very detrimental effect on the temperament of high-spirited and well-bred horses.

Know All About the Peerage.

"You don't recognize titles of nobility in this country?" said the distinguished foreigner.

"Oh, yes we can," answered Mr. Cumrox. "Father and the girls can not only recognize any but they can quote their market valuation off-hand."—Washington Star.

In France women can wear trousers by paying ten dollars a year. Consequently, as a rule, they do not care to. Perhaps this is fortunate, considering the American habit of following French fashions.—Boston Globe.

A Wonderful Discovery.

Broadland, S. Dak., March 28.—Quite a sensation has been created here by the publication of the story of G. W. Gray, who after a special treatment for three months was prostrate and helpless, and given up to die with Bright's Disease. Bright's Disease has always been considered incurable, but evidently from the story told by Mr. Gray, there is a remedy which will cure it even in the most advanced stages. This is what he says:

"I was helpless as a little babe. My wife and I searched everything and read everything we could find about Bright's Disease, hoping that I would be able to find a remedy. After many failures my wife insisted that I should try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I praise God for the day when I decided to do so, for this remedy met every phase of my case and in a short time I was able to get out of bed, and after a few weeks' treatment I was a strong, well man. Dodd's Kidney Pills saved my life."

A remedy that will cure Bright's Disease will cure any lesser Kidney Disease. Dodd's Kidney Pills are certainly the most wonderful discovery which modern medical research has given to the world.

PAINFUL PERIODS

While no woman is entirely free from periodical suffering, it does not seem to be the plan of nature that women should suffer so severely. Menstruation is a severe strain on a woman's vitality. If it is painful or irregular something is wrong which should be set right or it will lead to a serious derangement of the whole female organism.

More than fifty thousand women have testified in grateful letters to Mrs. Pinkham that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound overcomes painful and irregular menstruation.

It provides a safe and sure way of escape from distressing and dangerous weaknesses and diseases.

The two following letters tell so convincingly what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will do for women, they cannot fail to bring hope to thousands of sufferers.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Your medicine is indeed an ideal medicine for women. I suffered misery for years with painful periods, headaches, and bearing-down pains. I consulted two different physicians but failed to get any relief. A friend from the East advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so, and no longer suffer as I did before. My periods are natural; every ache and pain is gone, and my general health is much improved. I advise all women who suffer to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Mrs. Tillie Hart, of Larimore, N. D., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I might have been spared many months of suffering and pain had I only known of the efficacy of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound sooner; for I have tried so many remedies without help.

"I dreaded the approach of my menstrual period every month, as it meant so much pain and suffering for me, but after I had used the Compound two months I became regular and natural and am now perfectly well and free from pain at my monthly periods. I am very grateful for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."

Such testimony should be accepted by all women as convincing evidence that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound stands without a peer as a remedy for all the distressing ills of women.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound rests upon the well-earned gratitude of American women.

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, bloating, (or flatulency), general debility, indigestion and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, at once removes such troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine, for you need the best.

Don't hesitate to write to Mrs. Pinkham if there is anything about your sickness you do not understand. She will treat you with kindness and her advice is free. No woman ever regretted writing her and she has helped thousands. Address Lynn, Mass.

Heavy Cannonading Was Heard Off Saigon.

It is Suppose That Adm. Rojestvensky's Pacific Squadron Has Engaged a Portion of the Japanese Fleet or Scout Boats.

Saigon, French Cochin China, April 24.—The complete Russian fleet left Kamranh Bay on April 22 at midday. At night heavy cannonading was heard out at sea. It is supposed the Russian fleet was engaged with a portion of the Japanese squadron.

Before the departure of the squadron Vice Adm. Rojestvensky visited Adm. Jonquierres. No Russian officer or sailor landed from the fleet in Kamranh bay. They had expected a Nebogatoff's detachment of the squadron to arrive at any moment. The natives were highly pleased with the great rise in the price of provisions owing to the Russians' visit.

There is also a suspicion that Rojestvensky may simply make a technical removal from French territorial waters by going outside the three mile limit. Hence the incident will remain unclosed until the Russians depart from Indo-Chinese waters.

THE TEACHER'S FOE

A LIFE ALWAYS THREATENED BY NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

One Who Broke Down from Six Years of Overwork Tells How She Escaped Misery of Enforced Idleness.

"I had been teaching in the city schools steadily for six years," said Miss James, whose recent return to the work from which she was driven by nervous collapse has attracted attention. "They were greatly overcrowded, especially in the primary department of which I had charge, and I had been doing the work of two teachers. The strain was too much for my nerves and two years ago the crisis came.

"I was prostrated mentally and physically, sent in my resignation and never expected to be able to resume work. It seemed to me then that I was the most miserable woman on earth. I was tortured by nervous headaches, worn out by inability to sleep, and had so little blood that I was as white as chalk.

"After my active life, it was hard to bear idleness, and terribly discouraging to keep paying out the savings of years for medicines which did me no good."

"How did you get back your health?"

"A bare chance and a lot of faith led me to a cure. After I had suffered for many months, and when I was on the very verge of despair, I happened to read an account of some cures effected by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The statements were so convincing that I somehow felt assured that these pills would help me. Most people, I think, buy only one box for a trial, but I purchased six boxes at once, and when I had used them up, I was indeed well and had no need of more medicine.

"Dr. Williams' Pink Pills enriched my thin blood, gave me back my sleep, restored my appetite, gave me strength to walk long distances without fatigue, in fact freed me from all my numerous ailments. I have already taught for several months, and I cannot say enough in praise of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Miss Margaret M. James is now living at No. 128 Clay street, Dayton, Ohio. Many of her fellow teachers have also used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and are enthusiastic about their merits. Sound digestion, strength, ambition, and cheerful spirits quickly follow their use. They are sold in every drug store in the world.

ANOTHER RECORD IN LAND-HUNTING.

This Spring's Exodus to Canada Greater Than Ever.

It was thought in 1903, when over forty-five thousand people went from the United States to Canada, that the limit of the yearly emigration to the whea[illegible] of the Continent had been reached. But when in 1904 about as large a number of American citizens signified their intention of becoming settlers on Canadian lands, the general public were prepared for the announcement of large numbers in 1905. No surprise therefore will be caused when it is made known that the predictions of fully fifty thousand more in 1905 are warranted in the fact that the Spring movement Canadaward is greater than it has ever been. The special trains from Omaha, Chicago, St. Paul, Detroit, and other gateways, have been crowded. Many have gone to join friends and relatives who have prepared homes for them, and others have gone relying upon their own resources, satisfied that what others have done can also be done by them. This year much new territory has been opened up by the railroads, which are extending their main lines and throwing out branches in their march across the best grain and grazing lands on the Continent. This new territory has attractions for those desiring to homestead on the one hundred and sixty acres granted each settler by the Canadian Government. Many also take advantage of the opportunity to purchase lands at the low figures at which they are now being offered.

It does not require much thought to convince one that if Iowa, Illinois, Minnesota and other lands, with a value of from fifty to one hundred and fifty dollars an acre will give a good living by producing ten to thirteen bushels of wheat to the acre and thirty to fifty bushels of corn to the acre, the lands of Western Canada at seven to ten dollars an acre, producing from twenty to thirty bushels of a superior wheat to the acre, would produce a competence to the ordinary farmer in a very few years. These are the facts as they confront the reader. There are millions of acres of such land in Western Canada in addition to the other millions that are considered to be portion of the biggest and best ranges that ever invited the cattle and horse producer of the North American continent. What is particularly evident in Western Canada is the fact that the wheat lands, adjoining the grazing lands, make farming particularly agreeable and profitable. The agents of the Canadian Government, who are always willing to give information and advice to intending settlers, say that the acreage put under crop this season is greatly in excess of last season.

New York City.—What queer pranks Master Cupid plays at times! He draws his bow and lets his arrows by, and lo, and behold, all the world pauses to look and to listen.

Cupid knows that love has a universal language, and that it is potent to overcome every natural barrier. He knows that love pauses not to reason why, but that it dares to do, and even die, if need be, in its assaults on the strongholds of the human heart. He knows that there are no race or class distinctions, nor social conditions or barriers which love cannot with apparent reckless ease sweep aside. And because Sir Cupid knows all this full well, he dares to draw his bow and send his dart cleaving the heart of a young man whose wealth is counted in millions, whose social position is of the highest, a Yale graduate, and a club man, and the heart of a poor Hebrew maiden, a Russian Jewess, whose life has been spent amidst the world's humblest, and who has rolled cigars year in and year out that the mother and five other children might have bread and shelter. Cupid has strangely linked the proud name of John Graham Phelps Stokes and the unknown, yet euphonious name, of Rose Harriet Pastor.

Cupid's Double Play.

But Cupid has done more than this. He has made in New York what might be called a double play, and from one end of the land to the other his strange pranks are interesting and fascinating the reading public. A wealthy business man of Montreal, a man of mature years as well as of great riches, has fallen victim to the charms of a "hello" girl. Cupid has discovered an affinity between a Mr. E. R. Whitney, capitalist, of 70, and Miss Anna Bennett, telephone operator, and winsome maiden of some 20 summers, and this is the second remarkable romance which is setting the tongues of the gossips to wagging, and how romantic it all is! What fascinating reading! It is just as if the characters of some charming novel had stepped down into real life and were enacting a roll of which the boldest romancer in his most extravagant flights might have conceived. A double bill. Two romances in real life which are stranger than fiction.

Humble Origin of Rose Pastor.

Twenty-six years ago Rose Harriet Pastor was born in Augustovo, Suwalk, Russia, a child of the peasantry Toistoi and Gorky have told the world about. Of this period of her life Miss Pastor says:

"I was only three years old when I left Russia, but I think I can remember a little about it, just a very little, faint shadow of remembrance. Then there was London, where we lived in Whitechapel, and were very poor, indeed."

A chapter in her life which had its beginning in London in those early years had an interesting sequel in New York city recently, and reminds one of the fact that Pastor is not the real name of the young Jewess. Her father's name was Jacob Weissleider, and about a year after their removal to London he was divorced from her mother, and all trace of the man was lost.

Finds Her Father.

Mrs. Weissleider married a man named Pastor, and Rose took her stepfather's name. He died several years ago, and the support of the family fell on Rose, the eldest child. When she moved to New York, about two years ago, and obtained employment on the Jewish Daily News, she set about to find her father. Her friends assisted her, and about 18 months ago Bennett Lieberman, who worked with her, discovered an old tailor in a little shop on Scammel street. The name on the sign was "Yankel Weissleider." Weissleider was Rose Pastor's father.

Mrs. Pastor and her daughter sought the Scammel street place. The old shoemaker had taken unto himself a young wife. Mother and daughter never again revisited the place, and they have kept their secret. A short time after the visit Weissleider sold his shop and left the city. He is now believed to be in Scranton, Pa.

Early Struggles.

Of her early struggles and ambitions, and her successful overcoming of obstacles and hindrances, which would have overpowered the average person, she says:

"I learned to read there, and when I was nine years old we came to America. We lived in Cleveland, and when I was 11½ years old I went to work in a tobacco factory, rolling tobacco for cigars; always that for 12 years.

"When I first went to work, a man came in and sent me home. I did not know why then, but I do now. It was because I was too young to work in a factory. But it was not long until I was back at the work. I was not unhappy. I am never unhappy at work.

"One day a boy lent me 'Les Miserables.' That took hold of me in a wonderful way. That boy was the son of the owner of the factory. His father sent him through Yale. He went back to Cleveland, opened a law office and while waiting for clients wrote 'The Fugitives,' which was brought out last year."

Brighter Days.

And ..... John Graham Phelps Stokes was preparing for Yale, and leading the life of the rich, the Jewish girl, with the eyes of the dreamer and the hair of Rossetti's "Blessed Damosel," sat year after year at her bench, rolling the endless rows of cigars and dreaming, ever dreaming.

After 12 years her dreams found expression. She began to write bits of verse, and found a market for her work with the Jewish Daily News, of this city. A position was offered her on the paper, and she came to New York, relying on her own salary of $15 a week to support her mother and six younger children.

Five months after her arrival she was sent out on her first interview. To the shy, reserved girl it was a difficult task. She was sent to interview J. G. Phelps Stokes, of the University Settlement. Only a month previous Mr. Stokes' sister Caroline had startled the social world by marrying young Robert Hunter, a settlement worker. Rumor had it that they were to establish a rival settlement to the University, and that Phelps Stokes would join them.

Beginning of Remarkable Romance.

Miss Pastor was sent to get a statement from Mr. Stokes, and here is the beginning of the remarkable romance. Her simple, modest statement of this incident and what it has meant to her, is as follows:

"It will be two years next July since I came to New York and soon after I came I went to work on the Jewish Daily News. The first interview to which I was assigned was one with Mr. Stokes. I did not want to do it. I pictured him as old and stiff. My editor insisted. When I was told that he was out of town I was delighted. 'You will have to go again,' said my editor.

"Again I received the same information that he was not in town, and was relieved. An interview was arranged, however, and as I went to keep the appointment I met Mr. Edward King, and induced him to accompany me.

"When I met Mr. Stokes I said: 'Oh, I did not know you were like that,' and we fell to talking of many things that interested us both. In showing me around the building we stepped out onto a balcony, and, as we stood looking down to the people, I noticed his expression, and thought how much he looked like Lincoln—the same kind of beautiful homeliness.

"As we have come to know each other we have simply planned our lives together. That is all there is to it. I do not expect to change my way of living in any radical way. We will get an apartment on the lower East side, if we can find one there with light enough. That is the only luxury we shall insist upon."

No Claim to Beauty.

What is there about this child of the Ghetto, this young Russian Jewess which should have taken the eye and captured the heart of the quiet, reserved, thoughtful social worker and reformer, J. G. Phelps Stokes? She is simple and cordial in her manner, and she seems to expect the same qualities in those with whom she talks.

She is not beautiful, but there is that in her face which attracts and holds attention and interest as mere beauty would not. Her hair is the most striking thing as one first looks at her—auburn, and full of waves and lights. She parts it, emphasizing her low, broad brow.

Her eyes are brown, and her face lights up in a wonderful manner as she talks. Quite at her ease, without embarrassment, apology or boastfulness, Miss Pastor talks of her past life, of her meeting with Mr. Stokes, of their subsequent acquaintance and the development of their attachment and of the coming marriage on the anniversary of her birth, June 18.

The Man in the Case.

And Mr. Stokes views the circumstances in the strange alliance in the same, matter-of-fact way. He seems to think nothing unusual in one of his birth and position and wealth finding a bride whose life and training have been so different from his own. Mr. Stokes is a young man who, since the completion of his college course, has been interested in settlement work and social reforms. He is a member of one of the oldest and proudest families of New York, and is said to have inherited $10,000,000 from his grandfather. Years ago he voluntarily relinquished his social position with all its attractions, and the brilliant business prospects which his wealth and training opened up for him, and dedicated his money and his life to work among the poor, and in the ghetto of New York he has reared an imperishable monument to himself and incidentally won for himself a bride, who in spirit and purpose is at one with him.

Miss Pastor's View of the Ideal Man.

It is interesting to know what his bride-to-be thinks of the man she is to marry. She draws the picture as follows:

"Mr. Stokes is a deep, strong thinker. His youthful face takes by virtue of its frank, earnest and kind expression.

"One glance at his face and you feel that Mr. Stokes loves humanity for its own sake, and as he speaks on with the sincerity that is the keynote of his character, you feel how the whole heart and soul of the man is filled with well schmerz. You feel that, metaphorically speaking, he has sown his black young curls with the bleaching cares of half a million of men already.'

"Mr. Stokes is very tall, and I believe, six foot of the most thorough democracy. A thoroughbred gentleman, a scholar and a son of a millionaire, he is a man of the common people, even as Lincoln was. He is a plain man and makes one feel perfectly at ease with him. Nor does he possess that one great fault that men of his kind generally possess, the pride of humility. He does not flaunt his democracy in one's face, but when his democracy is mentioned to him, he appears as glad as a child who is told by an appreciative parent, you have been a good boy to-day."

The Romance of Another Type.

Such are the man and woman, and such is the network of romance which has woven itself into their lives and bound them together. As we turn to the Whitney-Bennett romance we find a very different type of love story. It savors more of the purely sentimental.

Miss Pastor and Mr. Stokes speak of affinity, and find the ordinary expressions of sentimental love crowded out by the deeper currents and purposes of life. The Christian and the Jewish maiden have lost sight of all class, race and social conditions, and each has recognized in the other the complement of self, that something, that inspiration, that sympathy, which will enable them both more surely and completely to realize their ideals in serving humanity.

But in the case of Mr. Whitney, of Montreal, the millionaire lumberman, and Miss Bennett, the pretty telephone girl, it is entirely different. Their romance is written all in love's most sentimental characters. A sweet voice floating over the wire, a pretty face seen afterwards, a lonely old widower with a susceptible heart, a courtship in which flowers, and jewelry, carriage and automobile rides, theater parties and dainty and elaborate suppers figure prominently. These are the elements we find in this charming story, and to many a reader it will prove the more interesting and readable of the two.

Her Sweet Voice.

It chanced that E. R. Whitney, a capitalist of Montreal, came to New York last year for a long stay. He took rooms at the Astor house. One day he called up a business friend at the Grand Union hotel. There was difficulty in getting his party on the wire. But it wasn't "Central's" fault.

Instead of imitating the rather hasty tones of Mr. Whitney, as does the average Central, or giving him a "Busy!" this operator on the other end of the line really tried to get the call for Mr. Whitney. So sweet was her voice and so charming her manner that the impatient business man at the other end was much impressed.

He got his party, an appointment was made and next day found Mr. Whitney at the hotel to transact his business. The interview over, again he sought the telephone. At the switchboard sat a charming young girl. Mr. Whitney gave her the number he wished, and when he heard her ask "8100 Cortlandt" over the wire, great light came over him.

Her Pretty Face.

At once he recognized the voice—it was the voice of the day before, when he had been so courteously treated over the wire. If the voice had pleased him, the sweet-faced girl who gave him his call delighted him. Mr. Whitney is 70 years old, but he hasn't forgotten the gallantry of youth. In the twinkling of an eye he had recalled the incident of the day before, and the blushing girl owned up that it was her voice that he had heard over the wire.

Now, Mr. Whitney is a man of decision. He admired the pretty telephone girl and he decided that it would be a saving of time if he could be nearer her when he wanted to use the 'phone. It isn't necessary to recount right here that perhaps there were other influences that caused his decision.

At any rate, on the very next day there appeared on the register of the Grand Union the name "E. R. Whitney, Montreal." He took an expensive suite and the Astor House knew him no more.

Devotion Itself.

Every day found Mr. Whitney at the "Central" office of the Grand Union hotel. Nobody could satisfy his wants as could Miss Bennett. They chatted pleasantly enough while he was waiting for his calls and finally the day came when the elderly millionaire ventured to ask Miss Bennett if he might take her to the theater after her day's work.

"If you meet my father and mother and they are willing," she said, very frankly.

"Nothing better," responded Mr. Whitney heartily, and that evening found him a caller over in Greenpoint at No. 213 Nassau avenue.

It was no mansion that he found. Instead, Miss Bennett's home proved to be a very modest little three-story wooden flat-house.

The Bennetts—father, mother and three sisters—lived on the top floor at that. Mr. Whitney found further that Miss Bennett's two sisters, Alice and Jennie, like herself were telephone operators, and that T. V. Bennett, the father of the three sweet-faced girls, was foreman in the Fleischmann yeast factory at Greenpoint.

The First Theater Party.

There was a very pleasant call, and at ten p. m. Mr. Whitney went back to his hotel in Manhattan. Next evening a handsome cab dashed up in front of the modest flat-house, and out of it stepped Mr. Whitney. Now, cabs are not over numerous in Nassau avenue, Greenpoint, and the neighbors wondered. They didn't have long to wonder, because out of the house came pretty Miss Bennett in her daintiest dress and was handed into the cab by the gallant Mr. Whitney. There was a delightful theater party for two in Manhattan, a little tete-a-tete supper afterward, and then the cab took the pretty telephone girl back to Greenpoint.

With this as a beginning, the rest was easy. There came an automobile sometimes, and as often other hansoms. Messenger boys delivered flowers and notes. Occasionally a jeweler's clerk brought something in a tiny velvet box to No. 213 Nassau avenue, Greenpoint, where jeweler's clerks are seldom seen.

Then the Proposal.

Of course, all this attention meant but one thing—a proposal. Last week it came, and on Saturday evening when Miss Bennett put on her hat and wraps at the end of the day's work she notified the hotel management that she had done her last day's work.

"I am to be married," she added.

"That very same Saturday Mr. Whitney went to the office of the Grand Union hotel and asked for his bill. He paid it and, calling a cab, drove over to the Hotel Astor, Forty-fourth street and Broadway, where he took suite No. 305. There he is now, getting ready for his wedding.

Loyal to Old Friends.

In her prosperity Miss Bennett has not forgotten her less fortunate friends of her "hello" days. The bridesmaid at the wedding is to be Miss Ida Schwindt, another telephone operator who presides at the switchboard of the Park Avenue hotel. Mr. Whitney has handed her a handsome check to provide herself with a bridesmand's gown. But of this or of her elderly fiance's wealth Miss Bennett will not speak.

Telephone Gossip.

There are certain things which at the other telephone girls in New York have heard, but which none of the interested parties will confirm. Call up any "Central," and she will tell you the gossip. These are, that Mr. Whitney has already settled $100,000 upon Mr. Bennett and that he and her father were present at the signing of the papers; that her wedding gift will be a $9,000 automobile; that Miss Schwindt has received $500 for her bridesmaid's dress and a diamond cluster ring for a souvenir, and that Mr. Whitney himself is one of New York's new unknown millionaires.

Mr. Whitney doesn't look his years. He is powerfully built, more than six feet tall, and has apparently many years yet to live. He is as sprightly and attentive as a man half his years. He made his money in asphalt and lumber.

giving the public something else to think about besides Standard Oil wickedness and "tainted" money, the beef trust investigation, or the Hyde and Alexander fiasco.

What the Lovers Say.

Of Cupid's work, Mr. Stokes says: "We are not two; we are one in spirit." And Miss Pastor echoes a like sentiment when she says: "Life is a riddle, of which love is the answer. Our souls met and we knew that we belonged to each other."

The gray-haired lover steps forward with the spring of youth and says: "See here, I'm not an old man. I've never had a day's illness in my life, and the insurance companies have accepted me for all the insurance that I can carry. I regard myself as the most fortunate of men—I wouldn't change places with anybody in the world. I expect to be supremely happy for the rest of my days." And the blushing maiden demurely adds: "Our wedding will be a very quiet one, and after that we are going to Europe." And a whole fairyland of a new and big world opens up before the vision of the girl whose horizon has been limited to one land, and to the noisy whirl and bustle of a big city.

GLIMPSES OF SPRING

WHAT I SEE FROM MY WINDOW AND ON A STROLL.

Each Year the Bluebirds Seem More Blue—How to Act When Mr. Skunk Is Near—The Deer at This Season.

Looking through my study window yesterday, I saw, scarce a hundred yards away, a small reddish-yellow object, moving swiftly through the brown dry grass. It was a fox—a vixen, probably, from its size, and it was carrying something in its mouth.

My window being open, I whistled once, and the fox stopped short in its tracks. Just for a moment, it stood looking all about, but, seeing nothing, it started off again, moving more swiftly than before. Presently it came to a stone wall, upon which it leaped, and ran lightly along the top. Then it jumped down on the other side, and was lost to view. But, running to an upper window, I saw it again, moving quickly down a steep bank towards a plunging, roaring mountain brook at the bottom. With the lightness of a cat, the fox leaped, and, clearing the turbid water, moved on up the opposite bank. There was no hesitation in its movements; it appeared to be traveling a well-known route, and doubtless it was, for a moment later the earth seemed to swallow it, and I knew it had entered the mouth of its den. This is the time at which young foxes in this part of the country begin to take solid food, and during the next few weeks it will require almost incessant work on the part of their parents to keep them supplied with wild mice, poultry, grouse and other creatures which the cubs like to snarl, wrestle and fight for.

The glimpse of that fox settled the question of the day's work. "The Call of the Wild" was stronger than the call of the editor, and in two minutes I was in the open. Oh, how fresh the air was, and how bright the sun! There had been a sharp frost in the night, but now it was warm, and the last few patches of snow were melting fast. Splendid weather to make the sap flow, and where I stood on a hill-top I could see the smoke and steam arising from a score of sugar-houses. And these farmer-folk know how to make maple sugar, and maple syrup, too—the real thing. And if you're good, and if your tame foxes don't kill too many of their hens; and if you pay up for the turkeys and sheep which your tame wolves destroy, they will invite you down to help "sugar off."

The gurgling song of the bluebirds was everywhere; it floated over the brown fields, and rolled down from the hillside orchards, mingling with the music of the trout brooks. Never did the backs of bluebirds look so blue to me; mere fancy it is, of course, but each succeeding spring the backs of the bluebirds look more blue and lovely.

And as I listened to the bluebirds, I became aware that something was moving quite near me in the grass. I turned and saw it was a skunk; a very black one, with white only at the tip of the tail. It is a good rule never to make sudden movements in the presence of a skunk, and I always adhere to it. Many skunks fail to use good judgment in sizing up a man's intentions, and, if they once misunderstand him, explanations come too late. So I kept quite still, and this fellow merely looked at me, sniffed and stamped defiantly with his fore feet, and went along with his business. I think he was hunting for mice, though he didn't find any while I was watching him. But he was the most active skunk I ever saw, perhaps because he was thin and after his long winter fast; and he ran quickly about from one tuft of grass to another, examining each in its turn. Then he passed through a gap in a fence, and I looked about for other things.

Presently three deer stepped quietly from a clump of spruce trees at some distance, and began to nibble the brown grass. One was a buck, but as he shed his horns early in the winter, he could be distinguished only by his light-colored face. They all looked more or less ragged, for they are fast losing their thick brown winter coats, which make way for the thinner red ones worn in summer. Next month the spotted fawns will be born, and now and then we shall find them lying still as little graven images in quiet places in the woods. But the wind changed, and the deer before me caught my scent and all heads were in the air in a moment. Six ears were turned in my direction to catch the faintest sound and six large eyes were looking straight at me. One of the does stamped and switched her tail, then came a loud, explosive snort, and the three turned and leaped away toward the woodland, with their white flags high in the air.

If a man is real honest he will admit that the proudest moment of his life was when he could see faint signs of a little bunch of beard in front of his ear.

Suits have been filed in Louisville against all the national banks in that city for back taxes, basing the suits on the difference between the listed and the market value of these banks' capital stock.

Prices of beef all over the country are going up, owing, it is claimed by the packers, to the fact that breeders of stock and handlers of range cattle have been holding back on supply until the grass of the range becomes nourishing.

In Barren county, where local option prevails, the County Attorney was arrested a few days ago, charged with protecting colored blind tigers for a share of the profits. The City Attorney of Glascow has the same ugly charge registered against him.

It is announced that only American money is lacking to realize the century old drama of diplomats for a capitol at The Hague where the nations of the world might meet on common ground for the discussion of international arbitration. It is said that when this money from Americais provided the institution will be assured.

After deliberating part of two days the jury at Lawrenceburg, Ind., in the breach of promise suit of Miss Luella Bell against Louis Ruhlman for $5,000 heart balm, disagreed. Miss Bell alleges in her petition that during an engagement lasting ten years the defendant gave her only a palm-leaf fan and a photograph. Then he married a Cincinnati girl.

L. W. Cobb, editor and publisher of the Aurora Independent, rounded out thirty-second year in that capacity with last week's issue of his paper. Mr. Cobb has made a good local paper all these years, and it seems he has not grown weary in well doing. May he live at least another thirty-two years to direct the course of the Independent.

Senator Blackburn says, "when my party has acted in the matter of selecting a State ticket I will be found standing by her standard, no matter if it may be doomed to ignominious defeat." That sounds a great deal better than what the Senator was reported to have said several days ago. When a man's party speaks through its authorized agents that is the end of the matter if you are a party man.

Hon. F. W. Brown, the Democratic candidate, was elected mayor of Lincoln last week by more than six hundred majority. He is the first person to be elected on a straight Democratic ticket in many years. Two of his associates on the ticket came within three hundred of election, and the largest majority cast for anyone on the republican ticket this year was about 12 hundred. This is a very considerable democratic gain. During the past eight years the republican papers have been in the habit of adding "This is Mr. Bryan's home" to the announcement of republican success in the city; it is hoped that the election of a democratic mayor will not cause the republican editors to forget that Mr. Bryan still receives his mail at Lincoln.—Commoner.

Two plants, one of tobacco, the other of corn, may be the solution for raising the finest grade of Burley, says the Breckinridge Democrat. At B. F. Beard's tobacco warehouse is a lot of Burley of a fine bright color, said to be equal to the canvass grown article. It is the product of a Breckinridge farm where each hill contained a plant of tobacco and a stalk of corn. The corn shaded the tobacco until it has a superior color and texture that will place it among the finest cigarette tobaccos. We are unable to learn the effect the tobacco had upon the corn, but can see no reason why, with plenty of fertilizer, the corn yield would be materially decreased. Farmers may well make inquiry into the matter and experiment in this double-crop growing. To grow two large crops where hitherto but one could be produced is a question of profound importance in farm economics.

Attention, Confederates of Boone.

To the Boone County Recorder:

Please say to the old Confederates of Boone, you must endeavor to get a suit of gray and get ready to go to Louisville in June. I have a letter from Postmaster T. H. Baker, of Louisville, inviting me and my Confederate friends to his house. You know Tom is a Boone county boy and he will be glad to have us. If some one will suggest a time and place we will meet somewhere in the county and make our arrangements to go together. We must each have a suit of gray. If I can't do any better I am going to try and borrow a suit of gray that my old friend Billy Stott, of Petersburg, has. We will not take any excuse from any rebel soldier, of Boone, for not going to that reunion of the Confederates of the States, as they will never, in our time, meet again in Kentucky. If the editor of the Recorder wants to go and will get a nice suit of gray we will let him go.

In Memory of Albert H. Snyder,

One of our brightest and most promising young men, who died at his home near Burlington, Ky., April 6th, 1905, aged 25 years, 11 months 5 days. Death, under any circumstance, is sad, but especially is it sad when it comes to a young person apparently entering upon a life of usefulness and is the pride of the family. The many excellent traits of character which he was endowed endeared him [illegible] knew him. He united with the Bellevue Baptist church when he was 15 years of age, and made an exemplary member. He bore his affliction with fortitude, and expressed a readiness to go at his Master's command, and talked with his friends about the beyond as one starting on a pleasant journey. So we can all join in singing:—

Servant of God, well done!
Rest from thy love employ,
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy.

The voice at morning came,
He started up to hear,
A mortal arrow pierced his heart,
He fell, but felt no fear.

The pains of death are past;
Labor and sorrow cease,
And life's long warfare closed at last,
His soul is found in peace.

Soldier of Christ, well done,
Praise be thy new employ;
And while eternal ages run,
Rest in thy Savior's joy.

Several of the local snake-charmers gave an exhibition on the street here last Thursday evening of how they could manipulate a large black snake which Elmer Fowler had captured that day. The performance was not of a character calculated to excite the admiration of the spectators.

A few days ago Roy Clutterbuck's little dog followed him to the country when he went after a load of wood. While in the rural district the dog concluded it would have some fresh mution and attacked a flock of sheep in a pasture near by. This action on the part of the dog enraged Mr. Clutterbuck, who, after a considerable effort, captured the dog, and holding it up by its tail, struck it several blows on the head with a heavy, solid stick of wood, and then threw a heavy stone on it several times. Having mashed the dog's head to a pulp as he supposed, he threw it into a hollow for dead. The next day he passed by the hollow and viewed the remains of his favorite, apparently as dead as the traditional door-nail. About noon of the third day Mr. Clutterbuck and the entire family were surprised by the "dead dog" putting in an appearance, badly used up about the head, but still in the ring. An effort was at once begun to restore the dog to its normal condition, as it was supposed that its very recent experience was enough to teach it not to disturb sheep hereafter. This is another instance that proves a dog's fidelity to its master, no matter what its treatment by him is.

The dawn of prosperity has awakened the citizens of Petersburg, and they realize the possibilities and future eminence of their beautiful but sleepy little city. No where upon the face of the globe is there a little town or city that can boast of more natural beauties and possibilities than Petersburg. Resting upon a beautiful plat of table land, that extends from the bank of the Ohio river to the foot of the hills which form its southern boundary, at least 20 feet above the highest water-mark, the grand old stream that forms its frontage has ever attained, with its banks filled with the finest sand that nature has produced, making it possible to build its houses and pave its streets with the best of material. The ground plat of the town is composed of a rich, productive soil of an average depth of at least three feet, beneath which is sand or gravel of untold depth, forming a natural drainage in every part of the town, and makes permanent water accessable within 100 feet of the surface. This natural drainage is a barrier to stagnent pools and a preventive to all infectious diseases that the miasma from such pools produce. With these natural advantages is it not possible that Petersburg, in the near future, may become a popular summer resort for the families of the busy men of Cincinnati?

Last year a number of our citizens manifested a willingness to make a private sacrifice in order to promote the public weifare of our town by the building of a beautiful little park upon the river front. This little park stands as a living witness to the private and public spirit of the citizens of Petersburg, and its testimony has been borne from Pittsburg to Memphis by the thousands who have passed here on the steamers that ply between these points. I predict that it will be the means of bringing hundreds of dollars to our town.

A dramatic troupe composed of five gentlemen and four ladies arrived in our town on the 10th inst., and conducted a series of entertainments that lasted through the week. The first night the attendance was small, but after that the hall was taxed to its utmost capacity. The citizens of Petersburg and vicinity, realizing that these ladies and gentlemen were their guests, gave them a hearty reception and patronized their entertainment liberally. This company is known as the National Stock Company. Mr. I. A. Dawson and wife own all the stock and select their own company. Mr. Dawson is a high-toned gentleman and a master of any character he assumes on the stage. His wife is a refined, beautiful and intelligent lady, the daughter of a minister, twenty-two years old, and has an experience of five years on the stage. When upon the stage she draws attention, and finds just applause when she leaves. Miss Anna Dawson is an orphan that Mr. and Mrs. Dawson took into their family as their child. She is beautiful in feature and complexion, with a faultless symmetry of form, and her deportment on or off the stage expresses purity, refinement and intelligence. She is 18 years of age, and for her limited experience on the stage her success in her various parts is wonderful. Mrs. May Grace is a young widow from Louisville. She has been in the family of actors for only three weeks. She is a talented actress and a fine vocalist, and is especially adapted to comicry. Her power to excite mirth is wonderful. She manifests a high state of culture in facial expression and a thorough command of voice. Mrs. Lyall is a highly cultured musician and she rendered some lovely music on the piano. I will not undertake to compliment each one of the young gentlemen for the masterly manner in which they rendered their several parts. I will content myself with a general compliment by saying that each of them acquitted himself with credit.

BACK TO BETHEL

Scripture Authority:—"And Abram went up out of Egypt, he and his wife and all that he had, and Lot with him, into the south. And Abram was very rich in cattle, in silver and in gold. And he went on his journeys from the south even to Bethel, unto the place where his tent had been at the beginning, between Bethel and Ai, unto the place of the altar, which he had made there at the first; and there Abram called on the name of the Lord."—Gen. 13:1-4.

CHRISTIAN in his pilgrimage to the Celestial city found that there was no short cut to the right road when once he had gone into the by-roads that led away from truth and right. He was repeatedly obliged to retrace his steps to the point where he had made his first misstep, in order to get started right again.

Famine drove Abraham down into Egypt. Unbelief perhaps was the guide which led him into that place of temptation and trial. Surely it was unbelief which made him fear in the presence of the strange and unknown king and people. It was unbelief which led him to seek escape from imagined or real danger by refuge in a lie, and it was unbelief which made him content to dwell in a land to which God had not directed him.

It is night. The stillness of the midnight hour is only broken by the lowing of cattle and the bleating of sheep as they feed in the adjacent fields, and the occasional voice of a herdsman as he recalls a wandering sheep, or rounds up his cattle. The little group of tents stands out clear against the blue background of the distant horizon, while the round-pointed apex of each points silently and faithfully upward towards the myriad stars that are flashing forth their light. The flaps to the tent are drawn, with one exception, and the inmates, wrapped in their rugs, are fast asleep.

Before the largest of the tents a man is seen to be pacing back and forth. The size of the tent, its location, for it stands somewhat apart from the others, and the signs of its richness and luxury, which may be detected even upon the outside, indicate that its occupant and owner is the chief, and head of the tribe.

A closer look at the figure moving to and fro before the open tent reveals the rich texture of his robes, and it is not hard to guess that it is the chief himself.

With bowed head and uneasy, nervous step he moves down to the end of the grassy slope and then back again. He stops as he approaches the door, readjusts his blanket, drawing it more closely about him, for the night air is cold, and then throws himself upon the rug in the tent entrance, and with a half moan, half despairing cry, he calls:

"Sarah! Sarah!"

He knows she is not within; he knows there will come no answering word to the cry of his heart, but he cannot refrain from speaking the name. And then, as though unable to stand the silence, he springs again to his feet and begins anew his wearisome tramp.

It is Abraham. A few months before he had come into Egypt, seeking pasturage for his large flocks and herds. The rains had failed that year in Canaan and fearing that in Egypt in the well-watered district at the mouth of the Nile there was plentiful pasturage he had hurried thither. His coming had been heralded to the king and he had been received kindly.

All had gone well. The country was pleasant, the flocks and herds thrived, and Abraham and those with him were settling down contentedly as though they had come to stay. Canaan for the time was forgotten, and the call and promises which had come from God to Abraham at Haran had well-nigh passed from memory.

But now all was changed. A great sorrow had come to Abraham. His beautiful wife Sarah had been taken into Pharaoh's harem, and it had come about in this way. The princes of the country had visited him often in their desire to be friendly, and had seen the fair woman whom Abraham introduced as his sister, in accordance with the agreement between them as they left Canaan to go into Egypt, for Abraham feared if he said she was his wife the princes of the land would covet her and kill him for her sake.

But instead of the princes seeking her hand in marriage, an offer which she and Abraham might safely have refused, they told the king of the grace and beauty of the woman, and Pharaoh had sought her for his harem, a request which could not be denied.

And so Sarah, in anguish of spirit, but fearing to protest and reveal the truth, had meekly submitted, as they had attired her gorgeously and, with a splendid retinue sent by the king, had carried her with much rejoicing in triumph to the palace. And there she was now, while Abraham, crushed in spirit, and in great agony of mind and heart, was left desolate and alone.

Oh, the horror and distress of those days which followed. No sleep at night to shut out the sorrow, no relief by day to assuage the grief. The darkness was made darker and the anguish cut deeper, because he realized that by his own wrongdoing, his own deliberately planned falsehood, he had brought the trouble about himself.

The king showered gifts and attentions upon him, all of which he loathed, but dared not refuse. Oh, what cowards sin makes of us all. Day after day he had sent to inquire after the health of Sarah, and the messengers had brought back strange tales of troubles in the palace.

The days of preparation for the great state wedding between Pharaoh and Sarah were filled with singular mishaps and annoying delays. The royal apparel which had been prepared for the nuptials was found moth eaten and ruined, and the court drapers were taken suddenly ill and unable to make new garments. A strange malady seized many of the princes and attendants of the court so that they were unable to appear before the king to receive his orders and carry out the elaborate plans. The bakers in the king's kitchens had for days been busy with meats, and pastries and confections and dishes of every description for the great banquet, and when everything was nearly ready and all that remained to be done was to bestow the finishing touches, they had found the great store of viands infested with little worms and the entire feast spoiled.

And Pharaoh himself did not escape. A strange feverishness filled his veins. He could not rest at night, for troubled dreams disturbed his slumbers, and he would awake in terror.

On the night before the day set for the royal wedding the king had an unusually restless night, and towards morning a most horrible dream had aroused him. He thought a great eye was looking out of Heaven at him and searching him through and through so that his every thought was laid bare, and every secret uncovered. He tried to get away from it, he tried to hide, but that eye was ever upon him. Then came a voice like a roll of deep thunder. It seemed to shake the palace walls so that he expected to see it tumble in ruins about his head, and then he heard the words:

Awaking with a start he summoned his attendants and quickly dispatched a messenger for Abraham with the command that he should come at once to the palace.

And in the early dawn the king's servant had found him pacing to and fro before his tent door. If it had been a trying night for the king it had been doubly so for Abraham, knowing as he did that the next day Sarah was to become the wife of Pharaoh. How he had wrestled with himself and with God. How he had repented of the misstep which had brought him down into Egypt and the falsehood which he had told.

Meanwhile the king had sent attendants to bring Sarah into the royal presence, and fearful and trembling at the unusual proceeding and the unseemly hour, she had obeyed. The days of anxiety and worry had left their telltale marks upon her fair face, the dark lines under the eyes and the sad droop about the mouth told the king at a glance that she was not happy.

"Tell me," he asked, sharply and abruptly, "are you Abraham's wife? Speak not falsely to me!" And the king leaned forward to hear her answer.

The silence in the throneroom was tense and painful, as they waited for her to speak. With downcast eyes and trembling voice, which was scarcely audible, she whispered:

"I am," and then with a deep sigh, as though of relief, she sank to the pavement in a faint. The women attendants bent over the prostrate form, restoratives were applied and soon she was brought back to consciousness again.

At that instant the doorkeeper announced the arrival of Abraham, and as he entered his wife rose to her feet and with marvelous composure awaited developments.

"What is this that thou hast done unto me?" exclaimed the king, in a voice which audibly expressed the anger which he felt and which was reflected in his swarthy face. "Why didst thou not tell me that she was thy wife? Why saidst thou she is my sister, so that I took her to be my wife?"

"Behold thy wife!"

At the words Abraham raised his eyes quickly, and looking in the direction the king was so dramatically pointing, he beheld Sarah, his wife. It was the first sight he had had of his loved one since she had been taken to the king's palace, and almost before the king could say: "Take her, and go thy way," he had sprung to her side and clasped her within his strong arms, unmindful of court etiquette or the presence of the king.

As the princes and courtiers of the realm came to understand how their king had been deceived and embarrassed, and his dignity violated, there was great resentment against Abraham and Sarah, his wife, but Pharaoh gave charge concerning them and ordered that they be brought on their way with all their substance.

And so Abraham went up out of Egypt, he and his wife and all that he had, and Lot with him, and he came unto Bethel.

Ah, how good it is to get back after wanderings in sin! How blessed to feel that we have been restored to God's fellowship and favor. At Bethel there was the altar of sacrifice, there was talking to God and revelation from God, and there was the fresh start on the road of obedience and faith. Back to Bethel then, oh, Christian! Back to the house of God, there to find the Christ, God's perfect sacrifice for sin, there to call upon His name, there to receive new revelation of Him, and there to make the fresh start in the earthly pilgrimage through the Canaan of this life towards that better land above.

Roosevelt and Bryan Constantly at Work with Their Respective Followers.

It is a noticeable fact that Theodore Roosevelt and William J. Bryan have something in common in their notions of methods of political action. The chief difference between them, remarks the St. Paul Globe, is that one of them is at the head of a powerful and highly organized party and in power, while the other is skirmishing around the ramparts. They both, however, start from the purpose that the most successful way to organize a party that will cohere and do things is to make the appeal direct to the individual. Mr. Roosevelt is doing that because he has sense enough to see that, unless it is leavened by some participation on the part of the people, his party is doomed speedily to disastrous downfall. Mr. Bryan is doing it because he sees that this is the way to conduct the most successful attack upon an enemy entrenched behind place and patronage.

We are glad to see these movements going forward, no matter who conducts them or in whose interest they are planned. The future of this country—perhaps it is not going too far to say the future of our institutions—depends upon a lively and continued interest by the individual voter. The tendency of late has been all the other way. A party has gravitated toward a vast machine, abundantly financed, well officered and warranted to run forever. Just as soon as the people settle down complacently and acquiese in this arrangement, it matters little whether a government call itself democracy, aristocracy or monarchy. It will have a governing class, and the people will take what they can get and be content with it.

The highest fortunes of the nation and those of the individual are tied up with the constant bringing home to each man of a realization of his duty to the state. It is his business to get out and work. He belongs at the primary, in the caucus and in the convention as well as at the polls. This restoration of the old enthusiasm and the old patriotic feeling is the only salvation from the wave of corrupt manipulation that rolls so high in the political sea. Not at the top, not with the machine, not even in the regular party organization on either side will great reforms be instituted and carried out; but we must appeal to the character, the devotion and the steadfastness of the people themselves.

Any movement, no matter what it calls itself, which looks toward this rejuvenation should have sympathy. It may be crude in form and it may work temporarily some misfortune by excess of radical ideas, but it will save the country from that concession to the rule of the machine, well lubricated with oceans of cash, for which we have but to look to Washington to-day to find a striking example.

——Considering the affiliations of certain republican politicians, it is easy to understand why they object to the proposal to take the tariff out of politics. If the tariff were once taken out of politics a large proportion of these gentlemen would also be taken out of politics, since the maintenance of the existing tariff schedules constitutes the only claim they have upon political existence.—Chicago Chronicle (Rep.).

AND WHY "LIBERATED."

Failure of Americans to Enter In and Possess the Philippine Islands.

The recent census of the Philippines shows that out of a population of more than 7,000,000 there are less than 50,000 foreigners and that of the latter only 8,000 are Americans.

It is almost seven years since Admiral Dewey destroyed the Spanish fleet in Manila bay, and took possession of the archipelago in the name of the United States. Since the 1st of May, 1898, many a town on this continent has grown from a mere camp to a city of more than 8,000 people.

If there ever was any reason for the annexation of the Philippines, says the Republican Chicago Chronicle, it was to be found in the fact that there was a prospect that Americans would enter in and possess the land. If there is any curiosity to know why this has not been done it can be explained by the statement that the way has not been prepared for them.

So far as American citizenship is concerned there is no more reason why citizens of the United States should risk their lives, their liberties and their fortunes there to-day than there was ten or 20 years ago. For all practical purposes the islands are as foreign and as hostile now as they were when they were under the rule of the Spanish monarchy.

American expansion can be justified on one ground only, and that is the advantage that may accrue to the American people themselves. If new countries opened up by the expenditure of our blood and treasure are not prepared for the occupancy of Americans they are taken and "liberated" in vain.

There will be no emigration to the Philippines until they are given a republican form of government. No freeman will risk his life and fortune in a land which is subject to a despotism. If that despotism chances to be sustained under the flag of the republic it will be regarded with all the more suspicion.

If the Philippines are to be for the Americans there should be a government there which Americans will understand. If they are not to be Americans it is time to put an end to the fine talk of which we hear so much at Washington about once a year.

For Growing Girls.

West Pembroke, Me., March 21.—Mrs. A. L. Smith, of this place, says that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best remedy for growing girls. Mrs. Smith emphasizes her recommendation by the following experience:

"My daughter was thirteen years old last November, and it is now two years since she was first taken with Crazy Spells that would last a week and would then pass off. In a month she would have the spells again. At these times she would eat very little, and was very yellow, even the whites of her eyes would be yellow.

"The doctors gave us no encouragement, they all said they could not help her. After taking one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills, she has not had one bad spell. Of course, we continued the treatment until she had used in all about a dozen boxes, and we still give them to her occasionally, when she is not feeling well. Dodd's Kidney Pills are certainly the best medicine for growing girls."

Mothers should heed the advice of Mrs. Smith, for by so doing they may save their daughters much pain and sickness and ensure a healthy, happy future for them.

Cannot Reduce a Rate.

It is stated in Washington, that under the Townsend rate bill, if a rate is fixed by the Commission it cannot be lowered by a railroad. Should an emergency arise calling for a decreased rate, the railroads or shippers would have to appeal again to the Commission, there being no latitude allowed, whatever the circumstances. Hitherto a maximum rate has been the rule, but no such concession is made under the proposed legislation.

JUDGE HARGIS' TRIAL.

Witness Says Defendant Asked Him To Enter Into a Plot.

Lexington, April 20.—During the trial of James Hargis Daniel Bush stated that Hargis had asked him about ten days before the shooting of Cockrill to enter into a plot to kill him, and offered as an inducement the marshalship of Jackson.

Attorney W. W. Vaughn, one of the men claimed by Anse White, in his testimony, to be marked for assassination by Hargis, came here from his home in Oklahoma Territory to tell what he knew of the alleged plots on the life of Cockrill.

During his examination it was brought out that an effort was made to start trouble in the courtroom during the application of bail for Tom Cockrill, and that Hiram Hays had attempted to start the difficulty with Attorney Vaughn, who was acting for Cockrill.

Lexington, April 21.—Mose Feltner resumed his testimony in the Hargis case. After a long wrangle among the attorneys the court ruled that Feltner could testify to nothing connected with the Marcum killing and the alleged conspiracy leading to it. Feltner stated in his deposition several months ago that he was present at a conference with the Hargises and Callahan at which the method of killing both Marcum and Cockrill were discussed. The court now rules that nothing affecting the Marcum case can be testified to in this case. The most sensational disclosure Feltner made was that two years after Cockrill was killed and it began to appear that the Hargises would be indicted, James Hargis, through Feltner's brother, Felix, proposed to go on Mose's bond.

Fifteen hundred dollars was to be used as a guarantee that the Hargises would have Feltner acquitted of the murder of Fields.

Lexington, April 22.—When J. B. Little was put on the stand in the Hargis trial a new phase developed. He related the circumstance of a personal encounter between himself and the defendant, and the defense immediately urged the theory that this was the cause of an animus he had forcibly demonstrated by his manner of testifying. Although the progress made was not as rapid as had been expected, Col. Allen stated that he would certainly close the case for the commonwealth, soon, so that the defense will begin the introduction of its testimony.

THOROUGHBRED HORSES.

Frankfort, April 22.—Fourteen thoroughbred horses, among them Viseln, entered in the Lexington Futurity, perished in the flames which destroyed the barns of the Frankfort Driving association here. The loss is fixed at $10,000. Col. A. D. Martin, of Connecticut, is president of the association.

Can Not Be Aggregated.

Frankfort, April 22.—In reversing the judgment of the Jefferson circuit court in the case of Henry Weaver, a negro coachman, sentenced to serve five years for grand larceny, the court of appeals held that separate offenses of larceny can not be aggregated to make the total $20. COURT OF APPEALS.

Important Decision For Covington Newport and Other Cities.

Frankfort, April 20.—The court of appeals, in an opinion by Judge Nunn in the case of Stone against the city of Paducah, decides that Section 3, 145 Kentucky statutes, giving to second class cities the extraordinary power of giving final trials to persons charged with petit larceny and vagrancy and requesting that they labor in the workhouse, is void. The opinion says:

"In our opinion, when the Thirteenth amendment, and our own constitution to the same effect, were adopted, it was understood that the word 'crime' was to include misdemeanors and all offenses in violation of the penal laws."

The decision applies to Covington Newport and Lexington, all of them being second-class cities.

SAVED FROM DEATH.

Rescued By the Woman For Whom He Risked His Life.

Louisville, April 21.—After probably saving the life of Mrs. Mary McGuire of 1408 24th street, George Zanone, a bank clerk, was himself pinioned under a falling tree and crushed. Mrs. McGuire rescued Zanone and assisted in carrying him to a drug store.

Zanone saw Mrs. McGuire standing under a shade tree which the wind was swaying violently. He heard the trunk crack, and hurrying forward pushed Mrs. McGuire aside as the tree was descending. Zanone was unable to escape himself. His right leg was fractured and he was otherwise injured.

Troubles of the Faculty To Be Aired Before the Legislature.

The movement in this direction was crystallized into definite action by the resignation of Prof. R. N. Roark, which was announced two days ago, and it will be led by him before the legislature.

Paducah, April 21.—The motion for a new trial of Mrs. Mary Brockwell, under life sentence for the murder of her three little daughters, was continued by Judge Reed in the circuit court until the next term of court on the grounds of probable insanity.

Duel Between Kentuckians.

Ashland, Ky., April 20.—At Allen City, near the mouth of Bear river, Kit Stone while drunk quarreled with Bill Combs, a son of Black Shade Combs, and shot him in the leg. Maggard took a hand, and a pistol duel followed. Doctors say both will die.

A Fierce Hail Storm.

Newport, April 22.—William Gugle reached here from that part of Campbell county in the neighborhood of Alexandria, and claims that the storm which swept the country did much damage to budding fruit and shade trees, owing to a fierce hail storm.

The Pope's Relatives.

Pope Pius X does not believe in nepotism. A brother of his is a postal clerk at Hantua, one of his sisters keeps a tavern at Riese, another does tailoring at Talzano, a third keeps a store. The two sisters who used to do his housekeeping followed him to Rome. They do not live in the vatican, however, but have a few rooms in a quiet part of the city, where they do their own work. They cannot call on the pope without previously notifying Bisleti, the maestro di casa.

What All Can Do.

No man is so rich that he is not under obligations to his fellows. Money may procure pleasure, rest and a position in the social world, but it has never made a man a gentleman nor covered up his defects in character. We can all do something for those with whom we come in contact and even though our walk in life may be a humble one, yet we can, in some sphere, help some one who is in need. —Detroit Free Press.

The Magnetic Woman.

Any woman who is perfectly healthy, persistently cheerful, sanely self-confident and enduringly feminine will possess plenty of magnetism. Add to these a little beauty, a dash of cleverness and a knowledge of how to dress and she will be irresistible. At any rate, the cultivation of magnetism is a great deal more worth while than the cultivation of a complexion.—Cleveland World.

Costly African War.

According to a statement made in the German reichstag by Dr. Stuebel, director of the colonial department, nearly 12,000 troops have been employed in suppressing the native uprising in German southwest Africa, and up to the end of December the cost was over $4,000,000. The war has cost about $2,500 for every white settler, or $5,000 a head of the purely German population.

Statue to Quay.

By a vote of 141 to 17 the Pennsylvania house of representatives has passed a bill providing $20,000 for the purpose of erecting a statue of the late Senator Matthew Stanley Quay in front of the new Pennsylvania state capitol. Nine republican representatives voted against the bill and one democrat for it.

House of Lords Decision.

The British house of lords, as a court of ultimate appeal, has decided that vagueness in the expression of a testator's desire that bequests should pass to unspecified charities, or to charities to be selected by his trustees, makes a will invalid. The charities of the city of Dundee, Scotland, lose $500,000 by the decision.

Warrior Writer.

Gen. Lew Wallace was the most noted of the surviving veterans of the Mexican war, whose number is now reduced to 5,000. He distinguished himself in two wars, in the diplomatic service, and in literature, and was one of the most versatile and capable Americans of his generation.

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twentytwo per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirtyseven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse, but you must see that it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Castoria causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

EXACT COPY OF WRAPPER.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. A. F. Peeler, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in many cases and have always found it an efficient and speedy remedy."

Dr. R. Down, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in my practice for many years with great satisfaction to myself and benefit to my patients."

Dr. J. E. Waggoner, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I can most heartily recommend your Castoria to the public as a remedy for children's complaints. I have tried it and found it of great value."

Dr. Edward Parrish, of Brookiyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild laxative effect and freedom from harm."

Dr. J. B. Elliott, of New York City, says: "Having during the past six years prescribed your Castoria for infantile stomach disorders, I most heartily commend its use. The formula contains nothing deleterious to the most delicate of children."

Dr. C. G. Sprague, of Omaha, Neb., says: "Your Castoria is an ideal medicine for children, and I frequently prescribe it. While I do not advocate the indiscriminate use of proprietary medicines, yet Castoria is an exception for conditions which arise in the care of children."

Dr. J. A. Parker, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria holds the esteem of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact, it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments."

Dr. H. F. Merrill, of Augusta, Me., says: "Castoria is one of the very finest and most remarkable remedies for infants and children. In my opinion your Castoria has saved thousands from an early grave. I can furnish hundreds of testimonials from this locality as to its efficiency and merits."

Dr. Norman M. Geer, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "During the last twelve years I have frequently recommended your Castoria as one of the best preparations of the kind, being safe in the hands of parents and very effective in relieving children's disorders, while the ease with which such a pleasant preparation can be administered is a great advantage."

Dr. F. H. Kyle, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "It affords me pleasure to add my name to the long list of those who have used and now endorse your Castoria. The fact of the ingredients being known through the printing of the formula on the wrapper is one good and sufficient reason for the recommendation of any physician. I know of its good qualities and recommend it cheerfully."

For Instant Relief and Speedy Cure of Raw and Scaly Humour, Itching Day and Night for Many Months.

"I do wish you would publish this letter so that others suffering as I have may see it and be helped. For many months awful sores covered my face and neck; scabs forming, which would swell and itch terribly day and night, and then break open, running blood and matter. I had tried many remedies, but was growing worse, when I started with Cuticura. The first application gave me instant relief, and when I had used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and three boxes of Cuticura Ointment, I was completely cured. IMPORTANT FACTS FOR COW OWNERS

The mechanical Cream Separator has become a vital feature of every home dairy just as of every butter factory.

Its use means much more and much better cream and butter, as well as saving of water, ice, time and room.

The difference in results is not small but big. Few cows now pay without a separator. Dairying is the most profitable kind of farming with one.

98% of the creamery butter of the world is now made with De Laval machines, and there are over 500,000 farm users besides.

Recently the Cincinnati Enquirer had an illustrated feature article stating that General Zebulon M. Pike, the discoverer of Pike's peak, was buried in Greendale cemetery. The statement is incorrect. The discovery of Pike's peak is not buried in Greendale cemetery. The body that lies there is that of his father, Colonel Zebulon Pike, who was born in New Jersey in 1751, and died in the Great Miami bottoms. General Zebulon Montgomery Pike, who discovered Pike's peak in 1806, was born in New Jersey, Jan. 5, 1779, and died from wounds at the battle of York (now Toronto, Canada), April 27, 1813, and was probably buried there. Certain it is that his body is not resting in Greendale cemetery. —Lawrenceburg Press.

Last year a couple of "Yellow Hammers," raised their young in a hole in a limb of the large maple tree standing near the door to the post-office. This spring when these old birds returned and had use for a nest they returned to their old quarters to find that a couple of English Sparrows had gone into business there. The Yellow Hammers demanded possession of their old home, but the intruders refused to vacate, and war was begun without further ceremony, and the conflict was long and exciting, but finally the small birds were overpowered by their large adversaries and were thrown out bodily. The Yellow Hammers then began cleaning house and soon had the pavement strewn with the eggs of the sparrows and fragments of the nest to the construction of which they had devoted days. The sparrows remained near and witnessed the destruction of the home from which they expected to send a brood of young in the next few weeks, but were entirely helpless. They finally left the scene, but the other birds keep up a close watch near the nest lest the sparrows return and take possession again if not given battle.

The Boones and the Grays met last Saturday for the first time this season, and a warm contest, the result of which, for several innings was very uncertain, as blank after blank at the bat was drawn by each side until the sixth inning when the Grays let a cog slip, when the trouble began and could not be stopped until the Boones had put two runs home. This relieved the Boones from the fear of a shut out, and they continued to gooseegg the Grays until the seventh inning, when they got into trouble and the Grays put two men across the plate. This was the only inning in which the Grays scored. The Boones scored in only two innings, the sixth and elgth. The features of the game were the pitching of Houston and Gray, and the work of Capt. Jackson at first, & Ira Walton at third. Hogan caught for the Grays and Ernst for the Boones and each worked hard and made a number of nice stops. Heuston used a spit ball, but the Grays controvert the idea that it was the real thing, but, be that as it may, it was effective. Gray never pitched a better game, and both pitchers fielded well. T. B. Mathews has resigned as superintendent of The Boone County Distillery Company to take charge of the immense business of Freiberg & Worknm, of Cincinnati and will make his future home in Covington. Gaines Wingate has been appointed superintendent of the distillery in his stead, and while the citizens of Petersburg regret very much to lose Mr. Mathews and his good wife, they congratulate themselves that a model young man, born and raised among them, has been given this responsible place. No better person could have been secured, as he is acquainted with every detail of the whisky business, and knows the workings of the distillery to perfection. At 6:30 o'clock last Friday evening the employes to the number of about 50 gathered in Mr. Mathews' private office, and presented to him a loving cup made of silver and gold, costing $50, to show their appreciation of him as a friend and, superintendent. After the presentation speech, made by F. W. Schmitz of the revenue force, friends to the number of nearly 50, sat down at a banquet given in honor of Superintendent Mathews before he departed for his future work. F. W. Schmitz, the German Baron, was toast master, and splendidly he did. Many of the toasts brought tears to the eyes of Mr. Mathews, and at times he could scarcely talk. Men who had been in his employ for 18 long years, spoke of his worth as a superintendent. The toast, "Women," was responded to by Capt. Bielan, of the revenue service, and was simply a gem. George Linneman's first experience as a Revenue man was interesting, as was also Billie Newhall's talk. The occasion was one that will never be forgotten by those who were present. The new superintendent, Gaines Wingate, came in for no few eulogies, all of which he richly deserved.

FROM ALL OVER THE STATE

HARGIS ON THE STAND.

He Makes a Sweeping Denial of All the Charges Against Him.

Lexington.—James Hargis, the county judge of Breathitt county, took the stand in his own behalf in the murder trial here and made a flat denial of every statement made by the witnesses for the commonwealth which in any way connected him with the assassination of James Cockrill.

Lexington.—Judge James Hargis, of Jackson, was again placed on the witness stand in his own behalf. He was cross-examined by C. J. Bronston for the commonwealth. Hargis failed to explain why he had given Felix Feltner a check for $1,500, to be deposited in the Winchester bank, or why he had written the rate of interest at 8 in the note given him by Felix Feltner and then changed it to 6. Judge Hargis was carried over the testimony given by his friend, Felix Feltner, and in many places he contradicted Feltner, one of these instances being the date of his first acquaintance with the former circuit court clerk of Henry county. Feltner said he was called to Jackson by Judge Hargis for the purpose of arranging matters so that Mose Feltner could not testify against him and here was introduced by B. F. French, but Hargis says he knew Feltner long before this. He denied that the note for $1,500 was secured from Felix Feltner in Cincinnati by B. F. French, as sworn to by Sam Fields, Mose Feltner, Ruck Cottingame and others.

Lexington.—At the close of Judge Hargis' testimony he asked the court to allow him to make a statement to the jury. His counsel objected, but the court allowed the statement. Raising himself to full length Hargis faced the jury and dramatically exclaimed, as he pointed to his wife and daughter sitting near. "I just want to say to these 12 men that I am not guilty of this charge, and if I were I would never again ask that woman to call me husband or that child to call me father." Attorneys for the state instantly objected, and the court excluded the statement from the jury, except that part in which he said he was not guilty.

Louisville.—John Stoll, arranged in ghostly garb, stood in the basement of a store where Lewis Ford, a diminutive colored messenger, is employed, and when the negro appeared in the dimly lighted room the "ghost" made an unearthly noise. Ford was too frightened to flee, but picked up a bowlder and hurled it at the white spectre. The "ghost" fell, with blood streaming over the white sheet covering the body. Stoll lost several teeth and was unconscious some time.

Frankfort.—A heavy auto car driven by Emerson Cochran, of Lexington, at speed exceeding 40 miles an hour, crashed into a telephone pole on the Frankfort and Lexington turnpike. The car had five occupants. Lewis Combs, who occupied a seat with Cochran, sustained a fracture of the skull and received internal injuries which will prove fatal. James Doyle, state register of lands, was knocked unconscious and severely cut about the face and head. Ed Kearney was rendered unconscious and severely bruised. Cochran, John Combs and Frank Jaubert were uninjured, except for a severe shaking up, being thrown some distance into a field. The accident was the result of a race with another car driven by Will F. Kuhr, also of Lexington, and a well-known racing automobilist.

Louisville.—Several days ago Louis Edelstein, a secondhand dealer at 133 East Market street, bought an old safe at a sale of the contents of a residence in the southern part of the city for $36. After the sale the owner, whose name Edelstein refuses to give, remembered that he had forgotten to take from the safe $10,000 in gilt edge securities, some jewelry and a valuable collection of coins. He didn't know the man who bought the safe, but after scouring the city with detectives he found Edelstein, who promptly returned the property.

WHAT ROOSEVELT DECLARED

It May Be Necessary for the President to Make It Still More Emphatic

For President Roosevelt left Washington for his southern trip amid a buzz of speculation. The prediction that he will be the republican candidate for president in 1908 is not limited to a sensational newspaper which was, ostensibly at least, his non-supporter in 1904; it is echoed by republicans and Washington correspondents who have in other matters written as if inspired have contributed their mite to the third term propaganda. It becomes interesting, therefore, observes the Albany Argus, to recall the exact pledge uttered by Mr. Roosevelt to the newspapers and through them to the people, on the night of November 8, in an hour when his great triumph at the polls was already apparent.

"On the 4th of March I shall have served three and one-half years, and this three and one half years constitutes my first term. The wise custom which limits the president to two terms regards the substance and not the form. Under no circumstances will I be a candidate for or accept another term."

The two words "or accept" greatly strengthens and solidify this solemn pledge. "Plainer words were never spoken," says the New York Sun. Perhaps that is an overstatement. Gen. Sherman, when he said substantially that he would not accept if nominated, nor serve if elected, set the pace and made the model for all time, in declinations intended to decline. But, nevertheless, President Roosevelt's declaration and pledge is sufficiently explicit so that to call it in question implies a doubt of his sincerity, truthfulness and good faith, and we would not presume to suggest that he reiterate it, with even greater emphasis had not men who claim to be his friends cast doubts which might more naturally have proceeded from sources of accepted hostility.

"Repetition is the mother of education." There are times when to say the same thing over and to say it more emphatically, is the attribute of strength, not the sign of weakness. Furthermore, things have been done and countenanced by the president, since November last, which need to be explained and divested of all hint of Caesarism.

It was a mistake, for instance, to let the retirement of Cortelyou—that is, to say, of Roosevelt—from the republican national committee pro forma, rather than real. It was a mistake to have Roosevelt—that is to say, Cortelyou—appoint a dummy acting chairman; the national commitee should have a real chairman, avoid of suspicion of white house dictation. It is so natural for President Roosevelt to like power, and to exercise it for the sake of activity, that it is thinkable that he permitted these things to be done in the honest belief that the hand of New would be seen, and the voice of Cortelyou heard no longer; that no man would perceive the convenience of such an arrangement to a receptive third term attitude or to a situation whereby the white house should say who shall be its next occupant.

He who would avoid all hint of Caesarism must be, like Caesar's wife, above suspicion. We sincerely hope that the president will be dissuaded by no false pride from making yet another declaration, which shall forever put to sleep the thought that he is capable of aspiring or consenting to the third term which the Father of His Country relinquished—which precedent and the spirit of our institutions alike forbid—which no American, however great, will attain.

ROOSEVELT'S BEST WAY OUT

"The Venezuela imbroglio affords a fine opportunity for President Roosevelt to declare to the world that the Monroe doctrine does not mean the United States is the policeman of the Caribbean sea and the receiver of bankrupt South American states. There is no doubt, says the Kansas City Journal (rep.), that one of the chief causes of the recklessness of the Latin republics in contracting debts and of their refusal to pay them in the confidence those states have that Uncle Sam will protect them from armed interference from all European powers. As soon as this mistaken notion is exploded the better it will be for all concerned. When these irresponsible little republics are finally made to realize that they must be honest tubs and stand on their own bottoms the business of the state department at Washington will be greatly simplified and the possibility of foreign complication will be materially lessened.

The way governments are run in South America is a disgrace to the Caucasian race. But an amendment cannot be expected until some delinquent state is given deserved punishment and made a wholesome example of for the benefit of all. The Venezuela trouble would be a good case to start with. President Castro has authorized his fiscal agent to sign a contract by which about $20,000,000 of Venezuela bonds now held in Germany, Great Britain, France, Holland and Belgium are to be refunded at four per cent., with payment guaranteed by the appropriation of one-half the duties collected at seven Venezuelan custom houses. The exact terms of the contract have not yet been made public, but it is understood that the seven custom houses affected will be placed in charge of collectors appointed for the syndicate representing the European bondholders.

This arrangement, of course, is simply another method of doing the same thing which was attempted several years ago when the United States interposed to relieve Venezuelan seaports from a blockade which certain creditor nations had established. But this time it perhaps would be best for us to keep our hands off. The European nations involved have solemnly declared that they have no designs against Venezuela except to get the money due them. The declaration to this effect should be accepted as true and honest and the creditors of Venezuela should be allowed a liberal range of action to secure and collect their claims.

FAIRBANKS' TRIBULATIONS.

The Vice President Sees His Chances for Advancement Growing Very Slim.

Hon. Charles Warren Fairbanks, of Indiana, vice president of the United States, is a much-abused man. He was (or thought he was) the heir apparent and logical successor of President McKinley; fate stepped in, and the opportunity went to Mr. Roosevelt, says the Albany Argus.

Mr. Fairbanks bided his time, and choked down his disappointment. He took the vice presidential nomination, after full consideration, and in the belief and persuasion that there was no better way to advance his chances for 1908. He would be in the lime light. He would be more prominent as vice president than as senator. He would be the natural heir of the Roosevelt administration, and hence put to the front on seasonable occasions. So Mr. Fairbanks reasoned.

It is hardly to be wondered that (as the correspondents tell us) he hears with profound disgust and ill-concealed wrath all this talk about Taft and "the lid," which makes the war secretary a sort of temporary president in Mr. Roosevelt's absence, gives him any amount of free advertising and advances materially the quiet talk of Taft as the real Roosevelt choice for 1908.

Aside from all that, Mr. Fairbanks is harassed by enemies in his own state of Indiana. He and Senator Beveridge never did get on well together, now Beveridge is openly taking the state machine from him, and, worse yet, the vice president finds himself practically without a newspaper supporter in Indianapolis. It is announced that his friends, to remedy this, are about to start an out-and-out Fairbanks organ at the capital of the Hoosier state.

There is a world of truth and common sense, however, in what Senator Scott is reported to have told the vice president, the other day, in cautioning him against the premature "boom" danger: "Have you noticed, Fairbanks, that a summer frost nips the full blown rose and lets the buds escape? There's a chance for quite a few such frosts between this painful hour and 1908."

—"This is the first time in American history, we believe," remarks the Hartford Times, "that any president of the United States has succeeded in securing the sincere support of the Mormon church and all that it represents." When Mr. Roosevelt reflects what such support really costs, and what it implies, he may find time and occasion to emulate it, in disgust.—Albany Argus.

A TRAINED NURSE

After Years of Experience, Advises Women in Regard to Their Health.

Mrs. Martha Pohlman of 55 Chester Avenue, Newark, N. J., who is a graduate Nurse from the Blockley Training School, at Philadelphia, and for six years Chief Clinic Nurse at the Philadelphia Hospital, writes the letter printed below. She has the advantage of personal experience, besides her professional education, and what she has to say may be absolutely relied upon.

Many other women are afflicted as she was. They can regain health in the same way. It is prudent to heed such advice from such a source.

Mrs. Pohlman writes:

"I am firmly persuaded, after eight years of experience with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, that it is the safest and best medicine for any suffering woman to use.

"Immediately after my marriage I found that my health began to fail me. I became weak and pale, with severe bearing-down pains, fearful backaches and frequent dizzy spells. The doctors prescribed for me, yet I did not improve. I would bloat after eating and frequently become nauseated. I had an acrid discharge and pains down through my limbs so I could hardly walk. It was as bad a case of female trouble as I have ever known. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, however, cured me within four months. Since that time I have had occasion to recommend it to a number of patients suffering from all forms of female difficulties, and I find that while it is considered unprofessional to recommend a patent medicine, I can honestly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for I have found that it cures female ills, when all other medicine fails. It is a grand medicine for sick women."

Money cannot buy such testimony as this—merit alone can produce such results, and the ablest specialists now agree that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most universally successful remedy for all female diseases known to medicine.

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, bloating (or flatulence), general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all-gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, blues and hopelessness, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles.

No other female medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles.

The needless suffering of women from diseases peculiar to their sex is terrible to see. The money which they pay to doctors who do not help them is an enormous waste. The pain is cured and the money is saved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Experience has proved this.

It is well for women who are ill to write Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. In her great experience, which covers many years, she has probably had to deal with dozens of cases just like yours. Her advice is free and confidential.

THE END OF THE GRIP

REACHED AFTER EIGHT YEARS OF COMPLICATED TROUBLES.

Deafness, Hissing Sounds in Head, Stomach Disorder, Palpitation of Heart and Debility Overcome at Last.

Mr. Newman certainly had a very tough time with the grip, and it is no wonder that he thinks that the remedy that cured him can't be beat. His case shows how profoundly grip poisons the system and how obstinately it resists all ordinary efforts to eradicate it.

Few cases can be worse than Mr. Newman's for he had head, heart and stomach troubles combined with great weakness. He recently said:

"The attack of grip which I had eight years ago left me in a very bad fix. I became nearly deaf and my head ached continually and was filled with hissing and roaring sounds. My heart fluttered and had regular running-away spells. My stomach was so sore that I could hardly bear a touch on that part of my body. I had a great deal of pain in the region of my liver and the doctor said that organ was enlarged. My kidneys ached so at times that I could hardly stand."

"Didn't you give up and go to bed?" he was asked.

"No, I simply wouldn't. My head and my back ached dreadfully, but I obstinately dragged myself about, kept growing worse and finally ran down to almost nothing."

"What did you do to get relief?"

"First I tried a doctor, but he did me no good. Then I took all kinds of advertised preparations but nothing proved helpful until I began to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. As soon as I got them I knew that I had at last hit the right remedy for my case. The very first box did more for me than anything else I had ever taken. They gave me relief right away and in three months they positively cured me. I think I was scarcely ever in better health in my life than I am at present."

Mr. William A. Newman is a well-known Camden county farmer, living at Sagrada, Missouri. His case was a severe test for any remedy, but Dr. Williams' Pink Pills met every requirement. Other remedies merely drive the poison of the grip into hiding, but Dr. Williams' Pink Pills drive it out of the system. They are sold by every druggist.

The Rescue of Lot

Scripture Authority:—"And they (the king of Elam, and his three confederates) took Lot, Abram's brother's son, who dwelt in Sodom, and his goods and departed. And there came one that had escaped and told Abram the Hebrew; now he dwelt by the oaks of Mamre, the Amorite, brother of Eschol, and brother of Aner: and these were confederated with Abram. And when Abram heard that his brother was taken captive, he led forth his trained men, born in his house, three hundred and eighteen, and pursued as far as Dan. And he divided himself against them by night, he and his servants, and smote them and pursued them unto Hobah, which is on the left hand of Damascus. And he brought back all the goods, and also brought back his brother, Lot, and his goods, and the women also, and the people."—Gen. 14:12-16.

Never nature succeeds in striking the happy medium, that midway point between the heat and oppression of the noonday sun and the chill of the midnight hour, in the charming valley of Hebron in Palestine, it is when the departing sun is saying its last good night before dipping behind the western crags of the rugged hills, and the first fresh whiffs of the cool mountain air are descending and whispering their welcome greetings. It is a time when heat and cold mingle in delightful fellowship, and all nature is astir in glad appreciation.

Beyond a clump of giant oak trees, through whose spreading branches the ample outlines of a commodious tent are discernible, a man and a woman are seen leisurely walking. The loose, flowing robes of each, brilliant in their rich colorings, lend picturesqueness to the scene, and emphasize, rather than conceal, the splendid physique and manly bearing of one, and the grace and beauty of the other. It can be seen that neither one is what would be called young, and yet it would be hard to guess their ages, for the years have dealt kindly with them, and there are a freshness and buoyancy in face and figure which speak of the vigor and fire and hope of youth.

As the woman pushed a stone out of her pathway with her sandaled foot, she said, petulantly:

"The rich plain of the Jordan valley should have been yours, Abraham. If you had hatened to me, Lot never would have taken such unfair advantage of you, and you, instead of he, would be enjoying the luxury and ease of that beautiful and fruitful country!"

Abraham was silent, while a look of pained sadness passed over his face. A few days before tidings had come from Sodom of the prosperity of Lot, who, since his choice of the garden spot in the valley of the Jordan, had grown very rich in flocks and herds and silver and gold, and had gone to live in the luxurious and gay city of Sodom, where honors and powers had come to him. So sharp was the contrast between the circumstances and position of Abraham and Lot, that Sarah could not help but feel keenly that an injustice had been done.

"But hath not God told me that northward and southward, eastward and westward, was to be my possession, and that of my children, forever," at last responded Abraham, the confident note of faith ringing in his voice. "Thou knowest how God spoke to me after Lot's departure, and gave me this promise."

"Yea, but when?" impatiently broke in the other. "Lot is possessed of all that his heart could wish, while you even now are dwelling in a place that is not your own; our tent is spread under the oaks of Mamre, the Amorite, and Eshcol and Aner, his brothers, possess with him the land."

"God has promised. We must wait," was the simple response of Abraham, and they walked on in silence.

The air was growing cool, and the shadows lengthening as Abraham and his wife returned to their tent and prepared for the evening meal. It was eaten in silence, for each was occupied with the thought and conflict within, and while thus engaged hurried footsteps were heard without, and the next instant a breathless runner burst into their presence, and threw himself half in exhaustion and half in ceremonious bow at the feet of Abraham.

The incoherent jumble of words which poured from the parched lips of the excited and trembling stranger told Abraham that some startling and dreadful thing had happened, and he caught the words: "Battle!—Sodom!—Lot!—defeat—capture!" Finally, with much questioning Abraham learned the whole story of the battle of the kings in the vale of Siddim, of the defeat of the southern kings, of the plundering of Sodom and Gomorrah, and the carrying away captive of the inhabitants, among them Lot, with all his family and substance.

If any feelings of resentment over the selfishness of Lot in his treatment of them arose in the hearts of Abraham and Sarah; if any feelings of exultation or satisfaction over the misfortune which had befallen him; if any promptings to say: "It serves him right, let him alone to his just deserts," there were no outward evidences of such, for Abraham was quickly giving orders to his servants, and Sarah and her women were soon busy doing what they could to prepare the men for the journey. All was stir and excitement in the camp, and soon the trained men gathered, and, mounted and armed, they rode forth.

All night long they pushed their way northward, and the next morning struck the trail of the victorious kings, who, all unconscious of danger, were proceeding leisurely with their captives and rich plunder. Towards evening the enemy was spied in the distance, and instant council was held as to the method of attack.

Abraham divided his forces, posting them at various points from which they would be able most effectually to descend to the attack, and then waited for the darkness.

The revelry in the camp of the kings could be heard, and it was no difficult task to locate the place where the captives and the plunder had been placed. The kings and their warriors, flushed with victory, were feasting and making merry. The captives, hopeless and crushed by defeat, were bowed in sullen grief, and among them was Lot.

As the night deepens and the revelry in the camp gives place to heavy slumber, Abraham's followers creep in and prepare at a given signal to fall upon the enemy.

Lot, all unconscious that deliverance was at hand, and unable to sleep, turned with a groan and said to his wife who sat near him:

"Oh, how I wish I had never gone down into the Jordan valley and to Sodom! Had I remained with Abraham this trouble would not have come upon us. The poorer pasturage of Canaan is better than all the riches and luxury of Sodom, now."

"Well, what good is it going to do to mourn over it now?" sharply returned the woman, in an unsympathetic voice.

"If God delivers me from this strait, I will not return to that place again," continued Lot, apparently not noticing his wife's remark.

"What has God got to do with it anyway? I don't feel or believe as you do at all."

Lot was silent, for he knew that remonstrance was useless. His wife had never had any sympathy with his views, and she it was who was largely responsible for their moving into Sodom. Down deep in his heart he had faith in Abraham's God, but not so his wife.

Both sat in silence now, Lot in bitter remorse reaching out towards God; his wife in hardness of heart and unrepentant rebellion turning from God.

Suddenly all started! What was that cry? On every side there were answering calls, and then the tramp of many feet, followed by the crash of tents on every hand and the clash of arms. The whole camp was in wild turmoil in the darkness Lot could see men fleeing, with others in hot pursuit. Had deliverance come? or were they only falling into the hands of a fiercer and stronger enemy?

Moved by an impulse to escape in the confusion, Lot arose and seizing his wife and calling to his children, he was on the point of rushing off into the sheltering darkness, when he heard his name called. Again, and yet again, he heard the call, and, despite the fear that filled his heart and the confusion of his brain, he recognized the familiar voice of Abraham. With a glad cry he sprang forward and in a trice was standing at his side. It was the first time they had met since they had been separated after Abraham had so generously given him the choice of the land and he had so selfishly taken the best.

"And you came to my deliverance," exclaimed Lot, when he heard Abraham's story, "after the way in which I treated you?"

"Nay, my brother, speak not of that matter. Had I done less God would not have been pleased."

"Ah, how many times in the last two days I have regretted my choice. I wish I had been content to dwell with you in the land."

"You yet may do so if you wish," was the generous response.

The preparations for the return journey interrupted further conversation. The next day the men who had pursued the fleeing hands returned and the march to the southward was begun. As they drew near to the rich fruitful fields of the Jordan valley the resolution of Lot to abandon Sodom and the surrounding country and cast his lot in again with the godly Abraham began to weaken and it was plain to see that his wife had quite set her mind upon returning to her beloved Sodom.

When the king of Sodom came out to meet them and greeted them so warmly, he felt loath to give up such friendship. While thus halting between two opinions, between duty and desire, between the things of God and the things of the world, the wonderful meeting between Abraham and Melchizedek had taken place, as though to stimulate to right choice. He saw the courageous Abraham put aside the temptation to take of the rich goods of Sodom, to which he was entitled by right of conquest and capture, he heard his brave words:

"I have lifted up my hand unto the Lord God Most High, possessor of heaven and earth, that I will not take a thread nor a shoe-latchet nor aught that is thine, lest thou shouldst say: 'I have made Abraham rich.'"

The departure of Abraham was at hand. Half hopefully, half expectantly, he waited in the midst of his men.

"Come thou with me, Lot, away from this place," he urged.

Poor Lot! How often the choice of two ways comes to those of us to-day, even as it came to Lot that day, and how often, like Lot, we choose the present gain and honor and power, rather than the friendship and fellowship of God and His children. Did it pay Lot to choose the world rather than God? Does it ever pay to so choose? Abraham sought the pathway of righteousness and found blessing. Lot chose the pathway of luxury and ease and pleasure and later lost all but his life. Which would you rather be?

SALADS FOR THE SPRING.

A Few Recipes and Some Directions for Latest Ways of Serving This Important Course.

Since novelty is ever the desideratum of successful entertaining, it is interesting to note some of the new salads which have recently become popular. Foremost among these, perhaps, is the old Waldorf salad, composed of apples and celery, and which is now served in a scooped out pineapple, the latter conceit, of course, forming its claim to newness. Hardly a more attractive dish could be conceived than the pineapple apple husk for holding this salad, while its pungent flavor besides permeates the whole with something of crisp fragrance. The mode also dictates that a large tuft of celery leaves shall be left in the top of the salad in imitation of the pineapple's leaves. Sometimes through this salad, as well, are strewn a few slices of preserved red pepper, and then, for some indefinable reason, it becomes known as "The Turquoise" instead of the Waldorf salad. If for no other reason than that of making the dish most pleasing to look upon, the innovation can be commended. Of course, as is well known by those who have experimented with this salad, it is necessary to keep the cut pieces of apple in water to prevent discoloration until within a few minutes of serving. The salad is one which invariably must appear snow white, the red pepper forming simply a dash of color.

Fruit salads are more than ever smiled upon by the fashionable—that is the salads made of various sorts of fruits cut up in small pieces. The note of newness in their connection is that when maraschino or rum is used as their dressing it is no longer put on before leaving the sideboard, but passed separately to each guest, who then from the bottle pours it out himself in just such quantity as suits his palate. This is also now followed with grapefruit salads, even when these fruits are served as appetizers before dinners or luncheons. So much recently, however, has been said about the harm grapefruit is capable of inflicting on the teeth that it seems to have lost its place in up-to-date entertaining.

A salad made from pickled pineapple ranks also among the fads of the season, and one which is extremely palatable. Primarily, of course, the fruit has been pickled in its season of abundance and put aside. It then becomes a simple matter to take from jars the thin, almost transparent slices and use them for a novel salad. They are served on lettuce and with a French dressing.

The lighter and more refreshing in quality the salad is the better it pleases the present taste.

THE WINDOWS IN WINTER.

Excellent Advice About Cleaning Panes of Glass with Water and a Polish.

In cold weather it is often difficult to wash windows as often as they require it, as the work cannot be done in freezing weather and should not be done when the sun is shining on the glass, to insure the best results. At such times dust them well with a dust-cloth, and leave them until a warm day and an hour when the sun is not shining on them. Or, use a large painter's brush to brush the dust off, brush the ledges of the windows and wipe it off the glass with a dry cloth. Do not use soap in washing windows, but rub them over the inside with a little whiting moistened with alcohol and water about equal parts. Polish off the whiting, using a chamois skin or an old newspaper which must be softened by crumpling with the hands. Care should be taken not to allow the powder to scatter around the room, as it will if not gathered up in the paper or chamois skin while it is being rubbed off. Regular glaziers always polish glass with whiting. Do not use strong ammonia in washing windows, or it will leave a film on the glass which will be difficult to remove.—The Commoner.

FAULTS OF HOUSEKEEPERS.

Work should be estimated by what is done, not by the number of hours it takes to complete it.

On the other hand, there are many young farmers, especially, who are so anxious to finish their household tasks in as short a time as possible that these are often very imperfectly done.

Some housekeepers work by fits and starts, and consequently are compelled by their want of system to attempt too much in one day.

There is one type of housekeeper on whom all reason and explanation is useless, so convinced is she that no method could be better than her own.

Then there is another housekeeper who is always cleaning. She is "nastily neat," and has a mania for dusters and scrubbing brushes that drive the members of her family nearly distracted.

Pies for Garden.

Why should there not be more attention paid to flowers in the garden? They belong here. A garden should contribute to the aesthetic taste, as well as to the material needs. There are some flowers that are easily grown and certainly help to make the garden attractive. Among these are some varieties of chrysanthemums, not the pampered, hot-house kinds, but those that are hardy enough to remain in the ground all winter. There is quite a range of colors, white, terra cotta, bronze, yellow, with combinations and shades of pinks, violets, reds and scarlets. They make a brave showing of blossoms in the fall, and a nook planted with them will be a place of beauty long after the frosts have played havoc with nearly everything perishable.—Prairie Farmer.

Egg Service.

The members of a place of worship at Overton, near Wrexham, have hit upon a novel idea for raising money to carry out certain structural improvements. It was decided to have an egg service, and the congregation was invited to bring as many as possible. Over 1,000, which were placed in and around the pulpit, were brought and readily sold, realizing a substantial sum.

Literary Life.

"Molly, has the groceryman gone?"

"No, dear, he's waiting."

"And the baker?"

"On the front steps."

"Well, I'll just climb to the roof and finish my work there."

"That'll never do. There's a bailiff up there, levying on the shingles!"—Chicago Journal.

Singular Message.

Lord Curzon is sending a message to all the tribes in India in a novel way. He learned a speech in all the dialects and then spoke it into phonographs. These talking machines will be sent broadcast over India and all the people will so be enabled to hear the voice of the viceroy in their native tongue.

Death Is Honor.

A missionary at Hamada, Japan, writes that he attempted to condole with the mother of a soldier whose funeral he was attending. But she said to him: "You should congratulate me. Is it not the greatest honor my son could have had—to die for his country?"

May Mittens.

The 372 pairs of mitters that Mrs. Eliza Parker has knitted during the past several years, were distributed among many relatives, who gathered around the festal board to celebrate her eighty-sixth birthday.—Upper Sandusky cor. Cincinnati Enquirer.

Danger in Crossing the Legs.

Continually crossing the legs, and thus making the joints brittle, was stated at an inquest on Saturday to have caused the death of a Bristol asylum inmate. While pulling on her stockings her thigh bone cracked.—London Telegraph.

Jewish Soldiers.

It is noticed in England as a curious fact that most of the Jewish soldiers who died in the Boer war, and in whose memory a tablet was erected recently in a London synagogue, belonged to Scottish regiments.

New Mormon Colony.

President Smith of the Mormon church has just paid $400,000 for a 66,000-acre cattle ranch in British Columbia. The land will be colonized by Mormons and more will be sent to that section as land can be bought.

Toys of Savages.

Among the most backward and savage tribes great attention is often paid to the children. The toys and playthings used by savages in all parts of the world are often surprisingly well made.

Copper-Covered Steeples.

Progressive Empress.

The empress dowager of China is credited with having given $8,000 toward the building of the medical school to be opened at the English Congregational mission in north China.

AS THE PARSON TOLD IT.

Squib Sounded All Right When He Heard It, But He Got It Twisted.

R. R. Robinson, of Elmira, N. Y., told the Kansas City Star the following story on a minister who is a friend of his: "Now, while this clergyman is not an Englishman, I believe he inclines that way, or at least his sense of humor does," said Mr. Robinson. "A few days ago a man at a little dinner propounded the following: 'Why is a tin can tied to a dog's tail like death?'

"The answer was: 'Because it is bound to occur.'

"This made quite a hit with the rector, and a few days later when he was invited out to dinner one evening a series of conundrums were passed around.

"The divine saw his chance, and he asked the same question: 'Why is a tin can tied to a dog's tail like death?'

"No one knew the answer, and the propounder immediately spoke up: 'Because it is sure to happen.'

"And he looked disappointed when the squib didn't break a laugh."

A Great Discovery.

Clayton, Tex., May 1st.—(Special)—That a genuine cure for Diabetes has been discovered is the opinion of Mr. J. H. Bailey, of this place. Speaking of the matter Mr. Bailey says:

"I believe Dodd's Kidney Pills is the best remedy for Diabetes and the only one that has ever been discovered that will cure Diabetes."

"I have a genuine case of Diabetes. I have taken seven boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and am still taking them. They have helped me so much that I am now up and able to work some. I believe that if I had conformed strictly to a Diabetes diet I would now have been completely cured."

Dodd's Kidney Pills have cured hundreds of cases of Diabetes and never once failed. It is an old saying that what will cure Diabetes will cure any form of Kidney Disease and that's just exactly what Dodd's Kidney Pills do. They cure all kidney diseases from Backache to Bright's Disease.

A Remarkable Fact

about "Pusheck's Kuro" is that it does what no other medicine can do. It affects the grand trio—the Stomach, the Blood and the Nerves—that controls and regulates the whole body, every organ and every function. It corrects the digestion and assimilation of food that keeps up the body, it purifies and enriches the Blood, and corrects, regulates and strengthens the nerves. This explains why one medicine permanently cures so many apparently different diseases. Other remedies work on one of the organs only and cannot cure completely; Pusheck's Kuro regenerates the entire system. Good health will assist to happiness and wealth more than anything else. Pusheck's Kuro will help you enjoy health, happiness and long life. This remedy is $1 at Druggists or sent from Dr. Pusheck, Chicago.

CHICAGO is not normal unless there is a strike or a riot in full blast.

THE Standard Oil Trust is being investigated in Kansas by Commissioner Garfield, whose work on the Beef Trust was a great disappointment to the public.

THE Burley Tobacco Growers will meet at the Grand Hotel, Cincinnati, on the 10th inst., to adopt a plan for handling the 1905 crop. The Carroll county growers are proposing a plan for county organization that is meeting with much favor.

FROM all prospects the biggest crop of tobacco in years will be put out this year, especially in Central Kentucky. Farmers are plowing up every acre of ground available and the carpenters in this community, says the Midway Clipper, have all the work they can possibly attend to building barns.

A man started in the livery business a few days ago, and the first thing he did was to have a sign painted representing himself holding a Missouri mule by the bridle. He was particularly proud of this stroke of business enterprise and asked his wife: "Is that a good likeness of me?" "Yes," she replied, "a perfect picture of you, but who is the fellow holding you by the bridle?"

British cattle markets are in condition to justify continuance of the present excellent export demand. The "Live Stock Worlds," Liverpool cable quotes good American cattle 3 4c higher and supply moderate good cargoes making 12c. At Liverpool, United States sheep were 1c higher at 16c. At London, owing to light offerings and improved demand American cattle were 1-2c higher, good cargoes averaging 12.

IT seems that real trouble is a head for postmasters who have been taking active part in partisan politics, and Postmaster General Cortelyou is calling on them to resign their offices or quit politics. The assistant postmaster at Louisville and a subordinate in the Covington office have each heard the unwelcome news from Washington. When the officeholders in the Republican party are refused the privilege of taking part in politics down will go McGinty.

AT a meeting of the directors of the Kentucky Livestock Breeders' Association held in Louisville, last week, it was decided to hold the Kentucky State Fair at Lexington this year, Lexington guaranteeing $12,500 for current expenses, and the trotting track grounds with light and water free, the only expense connected with the grounds being a necessary expenditure of about $1,000 for improvements. Louisville offered $10,000 and the use of the grounds. This fair the State gives $15,000 annually. The fair will be held from September 18 to 23 inclusive.

Owing to the prevalence of pneumonia and the great mortality which attend this dreaded disease, Boards of Health in different communities in the older States of the union are advocating the following remedy for the ailments: Take six to ten onions according to size and chop fine. Put in a large frying pan over a hot fire then add to same quantity of rye meal and vinegar enough to make a thick paste. In the meanwhile stir it thoroughly letting it simmer five or ten minutes. Then put in a cotton bag large enough to cover the lungs and apply to the chest as hot as the patient can bear. In about 10 minutes change the poultices, and in a few hours the patient will be out of danger. This remedy is said to have been formulated many years ago by a New England physician who never lost a patient by the disease. It seems that the remedy is worth trying in an emergency or until a physician arrives, and is given for what it is worth.

For Poultry Raisers.

Exercise is cheaper than medicine.

The dust heap is absolutely necessary for fowls.

In feeding ground bone to your fowls, be sure to have it fresh.

Feather pulling is a vice that comes from confinement and idleness

Allow no filth of any kind to accumulate within reach of the fowls.

Thoroughness in detail in poultry raising is the great secret of success.

Young chickens may be fed almost anything that is clean and wholesome.

Common fowls do not possess the characteristic qualities of thoroughbreds.

When fowls are permitted to roost in foul, damp houses it causes droopishness.

Caponizing should be performed when the cockerels are three or four months old.

After the fowls begin to moult they should be given a little ground bone once every day.

By giving young fowls a free range it will aid materially to develop a strong, healthy constitution.

The Burlington Grays and the Erlanger team played a close and interesting game here last Saturday. Platt and Victor and Gray and Hogan were the batteries. Platt could not find the plate in the first inning and lost his game by giving men base on balls. After the first inning he did excellent work and at the conclusion of the game only two hits were registered against him. The Grays could connect with the ball but all they could knock were easy grounders or little pop-up flies. Four hits were made off of Gray and he struck out eight men. Hogan caught a fine game and made several nice throws to second. Some of the difficult plays were Cliff Victor's catch of a hot liner that looked good for two bases, Bentler's splendid left hand stop of a wild throw to first, and Platt's covering first base in the fourth. Elbert Clore made a nice hit in the first, and for a long time it looked as if it would be the only one made by the Grays. In the fifth inning Gray made a sensational catch of a foul fly. On two or three occasions a two base hit by Erlanger would have won the game, but just at these times Gray appeared at his best and would close the inning by the strike-out route. James Houston was the umpire, and it was a nice, quiet game, there being no contention at any time. Below is the score by innings:

The Boones and the Bellevue ball teams played an exciting game here, last Monday, in the presence of a large crowd. Conner was in the box for the visitors and gave five bases on balls and hit three of the batsmen, which contributed largely to the defeat of his team. Houston used his spit ball with good effect. He was caught by Walter Gordon, who was in his old time form except when at the bat, where he is terribly out of practice. Following is the score by innings:

Hits—Boones 6, Bellevue 3. Struck out—by Conner 14, by Houston 8.

The same teams will play at Bellevue next Saturday afternoon.

The Grays will play the McMicken Athletics of Cincinnati, at the Burlington park Saturday. This is one of the best Amateur teams in Cincinnati. Come out and see the game.

A horse that was hitched to a fence here in town last Monday, broke loose, and came dashing down the street with a piece of a fencing plank hanging to the rein. It ran on to the pavement in front of the bank and fell. As soon as it was up several men had hold of it. Fortunately no damage resulted, although at one time it looked like it could not be kept from dashing in a crowd on the street before it could scatter.

J. K. Beard, of Bellevue, ... small-pox. He was for William Rogers, who has just recovered from the disease. It is supposed that they contracted it while digging post holes, recently, at a point where infected articles were buried a few years ago when smallpox appeared in Bellevue. The citizens of Bellevue and vicinity are not alarmed, and people are going and coming as though nothing unusual was the matter. Mr. Beard is quarantined at his home half a mile from the town.

Tobacco is used by a greater number of people and among more nations than any other product of the earth, with the possible exception of tea. It is the most heavily taxed product of the world. The revenue derived from it by the American government is over $44,500,000 a year; it has been as much as $62,250,000 (1901). Leo V. Feaster, a wheelwright at Camp Stotsenberg, accompanied by two natives, while out hunting between the post and Bambang river, Philippines, approached within 10 yards of a monster python 27 feet long. Feaster emptied the contents of his carbine into it and killed it. After cutting it open there was found inside a deer about 2 years old, with horns about four inches long, and only dead a few hours. The natives later carried the deer home for food.

Cleveland and Harrison have been the only retired presidents to be conspicuously successful in private business. It is not generally known that Mr. Cleveland still serves as consulting counsel in law cases in which his experience in the office of president may be supposed to have given him special qualifications as an adviser. His fees in such cases are large, as were those of Mr. Harrison as a legal adviser and a lecturer on constitutional law.

Domestic cats running wild with their descendants born in the timber threaten to overrun the forests of the nothern part of Minnesota. Several years ago a lumber company distributed about fifty cats among his camps and at the headquarters for supplies to kill off the rats. When the camps broke up most of the cats were left to shift for themselves, and the result has been that they are now running wild with their thousands of descendants, and the feline population of the county has already reached astonishing proportions.

How to aid build up American trade in Germany is the subject of an interesting and valuable communication to our state department by Consul-General Guenther, of Frankfort, Germany. It is stated as a general truth that any article of manufacture which finds a ready sale in the United States will sell in Germany, provided it is placed before the public in a proper way and at a reasonable price. American goods are usually looked upon with favor by the general public there, although rival German manufacturers often try to disparage them.

From the report of the metropolitan police it appears that 1,925 persons were arrested last year for begging on the streets of London, and of these 1,539 were convicted and sentenced to prison from one week to three months. Many of the persons arrested were found in possession of sums of money, and even small banks, the total deposits aggregating a good deal of pounds.

STRIKE IN CHICAGO.

All Peace Negotiations For the Present at Least Have Been Declared Off—Both Sides Seem Determined.

Chicago, May 1.—Anticipating that the peace conferences in Mayor Dunne's office would be futile, the Chicago Federation of Labor, without waiting for announcement of the result of the negotiations, appealed to President Roosevelt and Gov. Deneen for assistance in the teamsters' strike. Fearing that troops may be sent to Chicago to preserve order during the strike, the labor organization has asked both the president and the governor to investigate the situation in Chicago before taking any such action.

A determined effort on the part of Mayor Dunne and his peace commission, composed of five citizens, one of whom was a woman, to bring about an amicable settlement of the strike, was an absolute failure, and all peace negotiations for the present at least have been declared off.

The indications are that the strike is bound to spread to other firms. Both sides seem determined in the stand they have taken.

A UNIQUE SERVICE.

The little district school building was not a tenth part large enough to accommodate the congregation and as the result the organ was moved to the platform in front. On this platform seats were provided for the president and his party. Rev. Horace Mann, of Rifle, Col., who preached the sermon, the choir and the trustees of the church.

After he had concluded the president spoke for about ten minutes. He expressed his well-known views on good citizenship, the morality of man, patriotism and duty to the home and country. He was cheered heartily throughout his remarks.

DISASTER IN A MINE.

Thirteen Men Entombed and Probably Killed by an Explosion.

Wilburton, Okla., May 1.—Thirteen miners were entombed and probably killed by an explosion in the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Coal Co.'s mine No. 19, four miles west of here. There is little prospect of their bodies being recovered for several days.

The men went into the shaft at midnight. Foreman William Ray of the shift that left the mine at that hour, states that the mine was in good condition and a gas explosion was hardly probable. His shift left a shot hanging which the new shift may have fired. It is suggested, from the force of the explosion, which could be heard for miles around and which tore heavy timbers aside and piled tons of dirt into the shaft, that a bad shot had set off some dynamite which had been stored conveniently for work in pushing the entries.

Immigration Branch, Department of the Interior, Ottawa, Canada:

Am sending you the return of two fields of wheat grown on my home farm last year. These returns are perfectly accurate, and not over estimated.

I summer-fallow about one-third of my farm every year, and afterward take off two crops and summer-fallow again. The summer-fallow is ploughed twice during the summer, first shallow afterwards deep and no weed allowed to grow. The stubble is left as long as possible when cutting the first crop, and is burned the following spring, drilled directly afterwards, and harrowed after drilling. This gives much better result than fall ploughing.

Father—You must never see him again. I will buy you a new set of diamonds.

Against Rate Reduction.

Atlanta, Ga.—The recent proposition of J. Pope Brown, chairman of the Georgia railroad commission, to reduce the passenger rate in Georgia from three to two cents per mile was protested against by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Order of Railway Conductors, and unions of the blacksmiths, machinists and telegrapher, boilermakers, railway trainmen, carpenters and joiners, clerks and car men. These organizations employed an attorney especially to represent them, who urged that such a reduction would work against the prosperity of the state and lead to a reduction in the number of railroad employes as well as of their wages. The Travelers' Protective association also protested that a reduction as proposed would result in few trains and poor service.

Dissensions Rend the Mormon Church

LATTER WOULD BE A MONARCH

Charged That Leader Speculated with Church Funds to His Personal Benefit—Accusers Are Excommunicated.

Two Prominent Men Leading Fight to Dethrone Alleged Autocratic Ruler—His Crimes Against the Church, His Followers and the Nation.

Salt Lake City.—A monarchy within a republic with Joseph F. Smith, president of the Mormon church, as the arch ruler. Such is the condition at present in Utah, according to those who are waging war on the Mormon leader and who are attempting to displace him from his high seat.

Charges have been made that Smith has diverted the flow of tithes from the coffers of the church to his own pockets; that he has commanded his followers to invest their money in enterprises under his control so that he may enrich his private purse, and that he has committed other transgressions too numerous to mention.

And the authors of these accusations are from within the sacred councils of the temple, and until their excommunication for their disloyalty to their leader, ranked high in church affairs.

But firmly entrenched behind the walls of the tabernacle the alleged king is bidding defiance to his enemies both within and without the state.

Origin of the Trouble.

The election of Reed Smoot to the United States senate may be said to be the beginning of the trouble. Before the time arrived for the apostle of the Mormon church to take his seat among the country's law-makers, a popular wail arose throughout the country that he should be barred from that body. There were those of the apostles that opposed the mixing of church with politics and forecasted the opposition that would arise from his election, but Smith was favorable to Smoot's candidacy and, as is well known, he was easily elected. When the committee was appointed by the senate to investigate [illegible] Mormonism preferred against the newly-elected senator, many churchmen in high standing were called to Washington to testify, and among others was President Smith. The general trend of the testimony presented showed that although polygamous cohabitation had been abolished as a rule, those of the mormon faith were still ruled by the law of the church, rather than by the law of the land, or in other words, that the law of the church is supreme.

Smith a Confessed Perjurer.

It was only after the passage of the Edmund's law that Utah was admitted into the union as a state. Under this law, which was subscribed to by President Smiht and the apostles of the Mormon church, plural marriages and polygamous cohabitation were forbidden. But on the stand before the senate committee on privileges and elections in the Smoot investigation, President Smith frankly confessed that the pact with the nation had been broken; that his oath was a travesty; that his obligation as an apostle and as hierarch of the church was a subterfuge.

The opposition to the seating of Smoot was ably conducted by Robert W. Tayler, a former representative from Ohio, who, while in congress, had more than once strenuously opposed the seating of Mormons in congress. He has since been appointed to the federal bench. At this time the Mormon church was practically united. And although, as has been stated, there had been some opposition manifested to the mixing of church and politics, there had been no dissensions of which the public were aware.

It was not until recently that the trouble which had been brewing for some time became public property, and that the issue between the two factions in the church were squarely defined.

Serious Accusations.

As the case now stands, two men previously in good standing in the church have made serious accusations against Mr. Smith.

He has been charged with taking the money paid as an "offering to the Lord" and using it for speculations to build up his own private wealth.

He has been charged with "taking the bodies of the daughters of his subjects and bestowing them upon his favorites;" of "taking property which belonged to the widow and orphan and having absorbed it into the possessions of the crown;" with oppressing the poor members of the church for his own enrichment; of violating the laws of the church; of committing crimes against the government; of treasonable teaching, and of forsaking a true spiritual life for the "worship of mammon."

Accusers Excommunicated.

Goaded into anger by these attacks, President Smith has sought to retaliate by excommunicating persons who might question his acts.

[illegible] former Senator Frank J. Cannon, son of President George Q. Cannon, one of the most celebrated leaders of the Mormon church, has been cut off for daring to express opinions in criticism of the Mormon head.

Charles A. Smurthwaite, one of the leading business men of Utah, a high priest in the church and a man whose character has been above reproach, has been disfellowshipped for charging President Smith with bad faith and demanding an accounting of the church funds.

He is fighting the proceedings against him, maintaining that, if given an opportunity, he will prove every statement he has made against the president of the church.

Furthermore, he has put to a test the various asseverations of the church to the effect that polygamy and polygamous cohabitation are no longer countenanced by filing charges against one of the elders of the church, Hyrum H. Goddard, on the ground that this elder is violating the revelation against polygamy by living with two wives.

The hierarchy is seeking to evade the issue by raising technical points, but it is being continually put into the position of showing bad faith all around, and is being forced into this attitude by its own members.

Discontent Grows.

According to impartial observers the discontent within the church is growing rapidly, and it is said this same discontent is manifesting itself in a way to hurt the president in the most sensitive place—the pocketbook. Already it is stated that the tithing is falling off heavily.

Thinking men among the Mormons are backing up Elder Smurthwaite's demand that an accounting be made for the tithing. They object to giving up a tenth of their incomes as an "offering to the Lord" when it is being demonstrated that Joseph F. Smith, as the alleged representative of the [illegible] using funds to speculate in sugar stocks, for example; to build up electric lighting, power and street railway monopolies; to force the faithful to take out life insurance in his personally indorsed company and to insure their homes in his company; to buy their salt from him; to patronize his railroad, to deposit their money in the banks which he backs with the "offerings to the Lord;" to buy their clothing, groceries, hardware, furniture, shoes, headwear, and, in fact, everything else which they may desire, from institutions in which are invested, in his name, these "offerings to the Lord."

Rumors of fortunes made in stock speculations and in other ways by President Smith and others "on the inside" have made large numbers of the faithful more desirous than ever for an accounting of the moneys they have turned over in all confidence to the self-designated servants of the Almighty. Having made sacrifices in the divine interest, they are inclined to insist on figures which will show whether the dividends from these various enterprises are being used in the interest of the Lord.

Another Phase Discussed.

Another phase is being widely discussed, so much so that for the first time in the history of the church the president of that organzaton has felt constrained, on March 19 last, to explain to the members of his flock that he had testified to an untruth in Washington, the reason for it being that the senators, whom he designated as his "inquisitors," were "trying to lead him into a trap." Instead of quieting the incipient rebellion against him, this admitted untruth has only increased the dissatisfaction.

On top of his admission his chief mouthpiece, Apostle C. W. Penrose, has been shown by parallel statements made under oath also to have been guilty of telling an untruth. Penrose, who is a polygamist, has made various conflicting statements under oath as to his marital relations.

All these things are going on within the church, while from without come other attacks which are worrying the leaders. The war is going on in politics and finance, and in these fields of practical effort on the part of the Mormon hierarchy lie their most vulnerable points.

In the field of finance, it is alleged, an effort was made to execute a "grab" of a franchise for nearly a century for light and street railway privileges in Salt Lake City. The action aroused such opposition that the prime movers did not dare to carry out their original intentions. At the same time, although no election is imminent at present, the growth of feeling among both Mormons and Gentiles in Utah against the political activity of the church has been so great that the hierarchy is fearful of the next issue. The anti-church sentiment has been crystallized in the American party of Utah.

Entrenched behind the wall of statehood, which was obtained by false pretenses on the part of the Mormon church, the hierarchy is bidding defiance to the nation at large and to its opponents within the state. It has taken the position that all the world outside Utah should "mind its own business," and that the inhabitants of Utah must be forced to do the hierarchy's bidding or be crushed.

This position has aroused resentment on the part of the Gentiles, and especially those who have large invested capital and who feel that the development of the enormous material resources of the state is being handicapped. They are determined to fight the matter out now, aided by the people of the United States, with the intention of settling the issue once and for ever.

Active Leaders in Fight.

The active leaders in the fight typify the two elements which have joined hands. One is Thomas Kearns, a Gentile who retired from the United States senate March 4 last. The other is Frank J. Cannon, also a former member of the United States senate, a man who as a Mormon has always stood for independence of thought and of political and commercial action on the part of the members of the church.

Opposed to these elements are the Mormons and Gentiles who are sharing with President Smith the profits of the church's present commercialism and activity in politics. The two present members of the United States senate from Utah are types. Reed Smoot, apostle and one of the financial advisers of Joseph F. Smith, was elected some time ago as the latter's political representative.

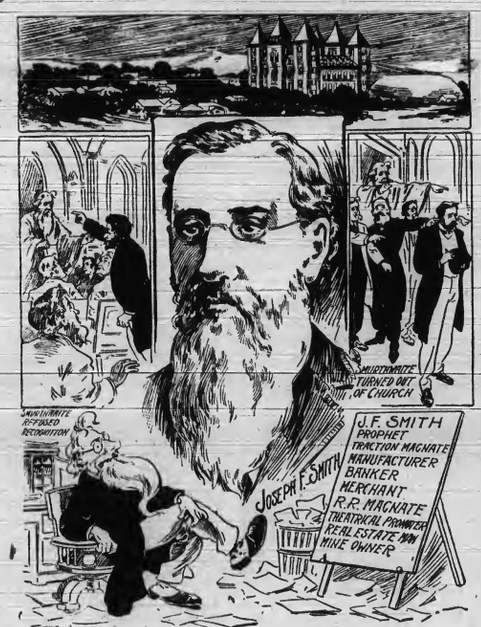
George Sutherland, a Gentile, owes his present advancement and the achievement of his ambition to his desertion of the cause of the Gentiles, to which he had made many protestations of adherence, and to his promise of political obedience to Smoot and all the interests that Smoot represents. Thus is the issue defined in Utah.

The fighting for the last few months has been made principally by Kearns and Cannon. Kearns, who is possessed of millions, has furnished the sinews of war. Cannon has been the man on the firing line.

By speech and writing this brilliant son of one of the ablest of Mormon leaders has "carried the war into Africa." He has kept the church leaders dodging and explaining, retreating and blundering, until he has stirred up within the church a commotion never before equaled. For this purpose he has an exceptional equipment. Ever since childhood he has been on the inside of the workings of the church.

Cannon's Large Following.

Canno has built up a large following among the younger and progressive Mormons, as well as among men and women outside his church. He opposed the [illegible] Smoot, on the ground that it was wrong for the church to interfere in politics—that it would bring sorrow to the Mormon people and woe to Utah. Last fall he announced that he believed the issues within the state of supreme importance to the residents of Utah, and he joined the newly-formed American party, which was organized to fight the Mormon church in politics.



Not long after the presidential election he began the fight on Smith. For some time an effort was made to ignore the attacks, but finally the president of the church took cognizance of them by ordering the officials in Mr. Cannon's ecclesiastical ward to bring proceedings to cut him off from the church, which were successful.

While the Mormon church has always welcomed any attack made on its religion as a religion from the outside, this is the first time in its history that the attack has been from within, and the hierarchy is frightened. Persecutions from outsiders have only served to make martyrs of the followers of the creed of Brigham Young and helped to solidify the people in a defensive attitude.

But now comes a war within the church, in which the members of the organization make accusations against those in authority, while the accusers maintain their adherence to the faith.

Every move made by Smith and his followers thus far has only involved them further, and those who are fighting them welcome with glee the increasing feeling against them among the Mormons.

"COPPERED" THE PROPHET.

Weather Man So Often Wrong It Was a Sure Thing to Bet Against Him.

This is a story of a weather almanac prophet, who may be called Thompson, tells on himself, says the New York Press. While recently visiting a Jersey town he went into a store to buy a cigar. He made his purchase and was about to leave the store when the proprietor remarked:

"It's a pity you have no umbrella, for it's going to rain soon."

"I think you are wrong in your prediction," replied Thompson. "It looks like fine weather to me."

"Well," said the cigar store man, "I'll bet a dollar it will rain before noon."

"Very good, I'll call in again to-day and collect," said Thompson. After leaving the store he had gone only a few blocks when he was well drenched by a sudden shower. Thompson was struck by the man's prediction, and being always intent on the interest of his almanac he went back to the store and was received by the proprietor with a broad brin.

"You see I was right after all."

"Yes," admitted Thompson. "Here's your dollar, and I'll give you another if you tell me how you knew of this rain."

"Why, the truth is I have an almanac called Thompson's Almanac, and the fellow is such a notorious liar that whenever he predicts a fine day I always know it will be the exact opposite. I looked at the almanac early this morning and prepared for rain."

KITCHEN EARTHENWARE.

American Housewives Should Follow This Neat and Sensible Custom of the French.

Housewives, take counsel from your English and French sisters! Do your cooking with earthenware mixers and in earthenware dishes, and keep your staple cooking materials in earthenware jars. They can be kept spotlessly clean, and ingredients are much more palatably blended when cooked in their thick walls, the cooking process continuing after a dish is removed from the fire. Crockery, not being able to withstand the direct blaze, can never be of unlimited service in the kitchen, but it is decreed by foreign housewives, who have used it for years, to be by far the most satisfactory kind of utensil in every other way.

The casserole is the piece of crockery which American women need most to learn the value of. No one dish offers so many possibilities for combining and serving vegetables in an unrecognizable form and for cooking meats in new and savory guises. In the French ware casseroles have a pretty light exterior, while in German ware they have a dark brown glaze. They are lined with the whitest of porcelain, and may be bought in individual receptacles or in large dishes. In either size they are sent to the table just as they have been taken from the stove, thus keeping the contents piping hot until it is served. Covers of the large dishes often have a miniature rabbit or brace of partridge molded on the top, instead of a handle, the casserole being a favorite way in which to cook game and poultry of all sorts.

Small shallow dishes with long handles in this same earthenware furnish a most satisfactory means of serving shirred eggs, as they retain their heat so long when cooked in these individual receptacles. Individual pots for cooking and serving beans are made of royal blue crockery.

A kitchen never looks so tidy as when its shelves are covered with oilcloth topped by white earthenware jars for holding rice, raisins, and all the small staple goods needed in cooking, and which are so often strewn around in mussy looking bags. Both the large sized jars and smaller ones for spices are attractive in simple patterned delft ware on which the name of the contents is printed in blue.

An entire outfit for preparing ingredients for cooking is made of blue and white delft ware, and, with the exception of the rolling board, each article may be suspended on the knobs of a wall plaque which has a porcelain delft center. The outfit contains a muddler or ball-shaped crockery mixer, a crockery strainer, a rolling-pin, with wooden handles and porcelain cylinder, a cabbage cutter with porcelain body and steel knife edge, a pancake lifter, a meat beater, a soup ladle and a potato masher. The pastry board has a square porcelain center, with wooden borders. Each article shows some quaint Dutch scene in delft blue, and the whole outfit costs just $7.87.

Another receptacle which no kitchen should be without is a stone water cooler. This is in the form of a keg, and is equipped with a small faucet for drawing off the water, and a separate compartment for ice.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

THAT BOY OF YOURS.

Endeavor to Show Him Sympathy in His Work and Pursuits and Beware of Neglecting This Duty.

We chaperone our girls and carefully guard them against unworthy boys, but we leave the boy to choose for himself his associates and his achievements.

Girls are naturally winsome, gentle, companionable. They win their way in homes and hearts. But the boy, noisy, awkward, mischievous, is invited into few homes, and feels none too much at home in his own.

He is hungry for companionship, and he will have it. You can't chain him away from it. He wants the companionship of boys, and nothing will take its place.

If the rime of selfishness has so incased your heart that the joys and hopes of your boy cannot enter into it, the boy is to be pitied, but so are you.

Care of the Linen.

A firm of linen manufacturers gives some useful hints for washing table and other linens. They advise the best of washing soaps, to begin with. Soaps full of alkali discolor linen. It is better to wring linen by hand, or at least have the rollers of the wringer fairly loose. Be sure that the rinsing process is thorough. [illegible] improvement in doing up linen is this stock: Dissolve one ounce of gum arabic in half a pint of warm water. Add one tablespoonful of the solution to a quart of water, and wring out the linens in the mixture. A point in the care of towels: Admonish the masculine members of the family never to wipe a razor on a towel. The damage done often does not show at the time, but is apparent after the towel is washed.

Escalloped Potatoes.

Pare and cut into thin slices. Cover the bottom of the pudding dish with cracker crumbs, some scraps of butter, a dust of salt and pepper, and a slice of onion. Add a layer of raw potato and fill the dish with alternate layers, having crumbs at the top. Pour in as much milk as it will hold, and bake from one to two hours. Some people have this for supper on a cold night, adding cold meat, cut in squares, to the potato layers.—Ohio Farmer.

Madras Waists.

For those who like madras waists there is a sufficient variety to choose from. The patterns seem to be smaller than they were last season, and somewhat more suggestive of table [illegible]

Cleared for Action.

When the body is cleared for action, by Dr. King's New Life Pills, you can tell it by the bloom of health on the cheeks; the bright ness of the eyes; the firmness of the flesh and muscles; the buoyancy of the mind. Try them. At all drug stores, 25 cents.

The Nebraska Indians have notified Dr. L. H. Crisler, manager of the Boones, that they will be in Burlington on the 31st inst., to take the scalps of the local aggregation. The Indians are great ball tossers and will draw a big crowd. The Boones will present the best line-up obtainable in the county. Remember the date.

The old rebel soldiers of this county, of which there is a goodly number, ought to have a meeting some time this month and make arrangements to attend the reunion at Louisville some time next month. The ranks of these old soldiers are thinning and they should use every endeavor to meet about the campfire once more.

Preparing to Attend the Confederate Reunion.

While in Burlington, one day last week, Elijah Parker, of Gasburg, was telling about the depredations of a very numerous colony of groundhogs that is located on his farm. Among the attentive listeners was the old Confederate, O. J. Ryle, who does not allow himself out-classed when it comes to narrating things sensational or humorous. On the occasion above mentioned it was noticed that Oscar was becoming restless, Mr. Parker's statements evidently having called to his mind something he was anxiously awaiting an opportunity to tell. Mr. Parker having concluded his story, Oscar began. "In a certain neighborhood in this county, several years ago, there was a very large colony of groundhogs that became so annoying that the citizens did not know what to do with them. At one time their rations ran short, and they actually began robbing the graves in the neighborhood cemetery. They dug into many graves and dragged forth every bone therein, giving particular attention to the grave of one eccentric old fellow, who, in life, had declared that his bones would not lie long in a grave." Nothing more was said about ground hogs, it being clear to everyone that Oscar is preparing to attend the Confederate reunion in Louisville next June.

OBITUARY.

Emma Alvernon, daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth Flick, was born July the 10th, 1888. Her spirit took its flight from its mortal home to enter as a flower of Eden on Easter morn, April 23d, 1905, as the birds were sweetly carrolling the resurrection of her Savior, whom she hastened to meet without a murmur of fear or pain. Her age was 16 years, 10 months and 13 days. Her stay on earth was truly brief; alas! too brief for those that knew and loved her. Yet in her brief earthly visit she was only preparing for a higher calling which her Heavenly Father saw fit to summon her. Her life was truly a living poem, which needs only a brief demonstration. Of a sweet and kind disposition, she easily won devoted friends, whose presence ever brightened her days of illness. Her schoolmates knew her as an ideal companion. She was identified with the Sunday school as a scholar and tried to follow the dictations of her Heavenly Father. In her last illness, her dreams, which had hitherto known no sorrow, were now gloomy, disturbed, and frequently broken, but through the long watches of that restless illness, it was the consciousness of His pleasure, not hers, that sent the sunshine through her heart. Let us so live that when our summons comes to join that innumerable caravan which moves through the pale realms of shade, where each shall take his chamber in the silent halls of death. Let us go not like the quarry slave at night, scourged to his dungeon; but sustained and soothed by that unfaltering hope. Let us approach our graves like He, Who wraps the draperies of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams. She leaves to mourn her loss a devoted father and mother, two sisters and three brothers and a multitude of devoted friends. The funeral services were held at the family residence in Grant, Monday, April 24th, at 2 p. m. Rev. Robert Brumblay, pastor of Rising Sun M. E. church, conducted an impressive service after which the remains were laid to rest in the local cemetery.

Mrs. Hattie Churchill Cornelius.

It is with much sadness that we chronicle the death of Mrs. Hattie Churchill Cornelius, who died at the Good Samaritan Hospital, Cincinnati, Thursday, April 20th, after undergoing a surgical operation. The funeral services were held at her late beautiful home in Kenton county on Sunday, April 23d. A large concourse of friends from Boone and Kenton counties attended the funeral, paying the last tribute of love and respect to this excellent and worthy lady. The services were conducted by P. H. Duncan. The interment was at the Highland Cemetery. Mrs. Hattie Churchill Cornelius was born in Boone county, Kentucky, September 1, 1860. Most of her life was spent in Boone and Kenton counties. She became a member of the Christian church in early life, being baptized by Rev. W. S. Keene, and holding her membership for many years at the Florence Christian church. Later she and her husband moved their membership to the Ludlow Christian church, and she was a member of that congregation at the time of her death. She was ever a faithful, consistent Christian, and died in the triumphs of a Christian hope. She met death bravely and resignedly, and was as calm in view of the trying ordeal as a summer morning. Nearly 28 years ago, Nov. 13, 1887, she became the wife of John Cornelius. She was ever to him a devoted and loving wife and he a faithful and devoted husband. Their congenial lives flowed on together peacefully and sweetly like a beautiful river till the summons of death came. The death of Mrs. Cornelius was a great shock to her husband and the many friends, who were solicituous, though hopeful as to good results from the seemingly necessary surgical operation. All was done that could be done in the hope of a restoration to health, but human skill and the tenderest care of loved ones were powerless to save the life so much cherished. She will be greatly missed by the entire community, but most of all by her husband, who so fondly cherished and loved his wife. She leaves behind to mourn her loss her husband, a sister, a niece and nephew, all of whom were so tenderly devoted to the departed loved one. She had much to live for and it will be difficult for her closest friends to adjust their lives to her absence. She will be greatly missed at her home of which she was the light and life. We will understand it all after a while. Reason stands abashed and silent beside an open grave. Love can only scatter her flowers and turn away, while sympathy drops her tears upon the coffin lid. But while Earth's oracles are all dumb and her tongues are silent, omnipotence has spoken from out the darkness, and made plain in Jesus' resurrection the mystery of the grave. We shall meet our sister again. P. H. DUNCAN.

A Creeping Death.

Blood poison creeps up towards the heart, causing death. J. E. Stearns, Belle Plaine, Minn., writes that a friend dreadfully injured his hand, which swelled up like blood poisoning. Bucklen's Arnica Salve drew out the poison, healed the wound, and saved his life. Best in the world for burns and sores. 25c at all drug stores.

BRADFORD BROS., Florence, Ky.

Hoosier Disk Drill-Drop Corn Planter.

THIS HOOSIER PLANTER is termed a Drill Drop Planter (or, by some styled cumulative drop) from the fact that when in operation the feed plates run continuously, drop one grain at a time to a valve and collecting the grains on the valve until a sufficient number is collected for a hill, when the valve is opened either by a wire check rower or hand lever, and the grains dropped into the furrow. When desiring to drill corn, the valve is simply held open, and the grains drop to the ground. It has 1¾-inch cold rolled steel axle and extra strong wheels with large heavy hubs and spokes; these wheels being supplied with concave or open tires, as desired. The double disks are made from special steel which insures perfect scouring. Both hand and foot levers can be used to raise or lower the disks. Spring device used for connecting front frame to rear frame; admits of heavy pressure on furrows and allows them to raise up in passing over obstructions, and also relieves weight on tongue. Feed thrown out of gear when disks are raised. Foot drop attachment enables operator to finish end rows without help. Pivoted marker with malleable head. Tip-over corn hoppers. Compressed Oil cups located over chilled cone disk bearings. Easily reached and turned with the fingers.

Supplied with one set of plates with holes for large corn and one for small corn. Change of distance and change of number of grains required for a hill, made by changing speed of feed rod. With the three sizes of sprocket wheels on axle and feed rod, grains can be dropped nine different distances, or the number of grains in a hill can be varied to suit. Corn may be drilled either 10, 13, 14, 15, 17, 18, 20, 24 or 26 inches apart, or the number of grains may be varied from 1 to 5.

The party was at the Cliffs 30 minutes after 10 o'clock, and a gay time was had until 4 o'clock, the hour set for starting home. They were noisy, but well behaved, except a few of the larger boys. An excellent dinner was served at the noon hour. Much has been said in praise of the beauty and good qualities of Burlington girls. The only thing Burlington ladies have any show of success in competition with Commissary and Middle Creek ladies is in cooking. The Burlington ladies certainly know how to tickle the appetite.

So much pressure has been brought to bear upon him and Mayor Dunne by business men who believe their interests to be seriously imperiled by the constant rioting in the streets that the sheriff has been compelled to swear in a large force of deputies and take active steps to do away with the present disorder.

At Kansas City, Mo., an employment agency is offering men $5 a day to take the places of the striking teamsters and 35 cents an hour for street car men.

More rioting occurred in Chicago. Several persons were seriously injured. Bottles, stones, tumblers and other missiles were hurled from windows at passing teams driven by non-union drivers. Several women were seen throwing missiles.

Conspiracy is Charged by Both Sides—The Teamsters' Strike Enters Upon Its Third Week—No Sign of Settlement.

Chicago, May 8.—This week will either bring an end to the teamsters' strike in Chicago or else one of the worst industrial upheavals in the history of the city. The present trouble which has lasted for two weeks has reached a point where the business men involved in the difficulty appear to have gained a decided advantage and the teamsters appear now to be in a position where they must either yield or decide to extend the strike by calling out thousands of other workmen engaged in affiliated unions.

Arrangements have ceen made by every business house involved in the trouble to at least double its force of non-union men during the day. It is said that all preparations have been made to start out 1,000 wagons manned by non-union men.

The Employers' association, through their chief counsel, Levy Mayer, announced that they would do everything in their power to assist the committee appointed by Mayor Dunne to investigate the causes of the strike. Charges of conspiracy by both sides was the reason given by Mayor Dunne for the appointment of the investigating committee. President Shea, of the teamsters' union, also said that the unions would be found ready to assist the mayor's committee in every manner possible to bring to light all the facts concerning the difficulty.

IN FRENCH WATERS.

Japs Highly Inflamed at France's Alleged Breach of Neutrality.

London, May 8.—A telegram from Hong-Kong to a news agency gives a long dispatch which it is alleged the French authorities at Saigon refused to transmit on April 20 detailing how for ten days the Russian Pacific squadron was allowed to convert Kamranh bay practically into a Russian base, freely coaling and provisioning openly under the direction of Prince Lieven, captain of the Interned Russian cruiser Diana, the French admiral, De Jonquieres, being present the whole time and until April 23 making no attempt to check the breach of neutrality.

Special dispatches from Tokio to the London morning newspapers represent that the Japanese feeling is becoming highly inflamed at France's alleged failure to prevent ostentatious disregard for the principals of neutrality by the Russian Pacific squadron. The Tokio Asahi bluntly describes the French assurances that they would preserve neutrality as falsehoods and declares that Japan would be justified in bombarding French territory and calls on the government to take vigorous action.

HUNTING TRIP ENDS.

The President Entertained at Dinner His Late Companions.

Glenwood Springs, Col., May 8.—President Roosevelt entertained at dinner his companions on his three weeks' hunt in the Rocky mountains. After the dinner he bade them an affectionate farewell and promised that all would live forever in his fondest memory. At the dinner were P. B. Stewart, of Colorado Springs; Dr. Alexander Lambert, Guides Jake Borah, John Goff, Brick Wells, Jack Fry and G. M. Sprague, Courier Elmer Chapmen and Secretary Loeb.

The dinner was seryed in a private dining room of the Hotel Colorado. The guests were dressed much as they were in the mountain; flannel shirts were the rule, although the guides did discard their caps and laid away their guns. The president and Mr. Loeb wore their frocks, and Dr. Lambert and Dr. Stewart were in plain business suits as they have not yet received their dress clothing.

Mr. Alexander also takes occasion in the letter to deny the rumors that he will resign.

Investigation of the Packers.

Very general interest has been manifested in the government investigation now in progress into the mode of conducting business by the large packers located in Chicago and elsewhere. Much has been written upon the alleged illegal and improper modes of business procedure connected with the packing industry; but it seems that so far no definite charge of any kind has been sustained and no proof of illegal or inequitable methods has been disclosed to the public. While a wave of severe criticism of this great industrial interest is now passing over the country, it might be well to remember that the packers have had as yet no opportunity to make specific denial, the many indefinite charges of wrong-doing having never been formulated so that a categorical answer could be made.

The recent report of Commissioner Garfield, which embodied the results of an official investigation undertaken by the department of commerce and labor of the United States, was a vindication of the western packers, but this result having been unexpected, attempts in many quarters to discredit it were made.

In view of the situation as it now stands, however, attention may properly be called to a few facts that owing to popular clamor are now being apparently overlooked. Fair treatment in this country has heretofore been accorded to all citizens whose affairs assume prominence in the public eye and some of the facts that bear upon the relation of the packers to the commerce of the country may at this time be briefly alluded to. It would be difficult to estimate the benefits gained by the farmers of the country resulting from the energetic enterprise of the packers, for whatever is of benefit to the farmer is a gain to the entire commerce of the country. And connected with their continuous aggressive work no feature perhaps has been more important than their efforts in seeking outlets all over the world for the surplus products of the farmer. Our total exports of agricultural products have gained but little in the past twenty years, and leaving out corn, the total of all other farm products was far less in 1903 than in 1891. But in packing house products there was considerable gain during this period, because an organized and powerful force has been behind them seeking new and broader markets.

Besides the benefits reaped by farmers on account of the enterprise and energy exercised by the packers in attaining commercial results by foreign trade, the great development in the manufacture of packing house by-products has added enormously to the value of all live stock raised in the United States. The waste material of twenty years ago, then an expense to the packer, is now converted into articles of great value, and, as an economic fact, this must correspondingly increase the value to the farmer of every head of cattle marketed at the numerous stock yards of the country. Let these facts be remembered while now it is so popular to regard the great packing industry as deserving of condemnation. At least it must be admitted that, so far, there is no adequate reason for the almost unanimous howl that may be heard everywhere in the face of the Garfield report above alluded to, which practically exonerates the packers from the obscure and indefinite charges that have been for some time past made the subject of popular comment.

A speed of 61 miles was maintained on a level stretch and 27 miles on the climb over the hill from Middletown, where the grade runs from 68 to 61 feet to the mile. The locomotive and tender weighed 389,750 pounds, carring 8,500 gallons of water and 16 tons of coal, and is the largest passenger engine ever built. The run was the best ever made over the Erie tracks and foretells what may be expected in the transportation over "the picturesque Erie" when its new equipment is placed in service.

Private Car Lines.

The railroads seem very willing to have the private car lines brought under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission. A railroad president is authority for the statement that lines are paid mileage, without discrimination, and the question of excessive charges is a matter for the shipper to settle with the car lines, so long as there is no law to govern their rates. Car mileage paying has been decided to be as legal as the payment of rental for property.

SPECULATION AND RECKLESS SON BRING RUIN

Man in Whose Hands Had Been Placed Vast Trusts Proves Faithless and Is Self-Confessed Defaulter to the Amount of Millions--May Wheat Deal Figures in the Crash.

Milwaukee, Wis.—It has been declared that all the world's a stage and every man as an actor in the human drama of life plays his part. At the present moment Milwaukee, the metropolis of Wisconsin, the great city on the shores of Lake Michigan, second only to Chicago in its financial and commercial importance, has shifted its busy scenes to the center of the stage, has trotted out in unexpected and startling manner the star performer in the person of the president of the First national bank of the city, and has held the public of the entire country spellbound by his amazing manipulation of the millions of other people's money. Now you see it and now you don't.

By Way of Contrast.

Yesterday Frank G. Bigelow, head of Milwaukee's largest financial institution; to-day a self-confessed defaulter to the amount of millions, no one seems to know exactly how much, for each day brings to light some new trust betrayed, some fresh amount of loss to add to the startlingly large total.

Yesterday he was the influential director in a dozen or more different financial and business concerns; to-day they are dropping his name one by one, and assuring their clientele and the public that he no longer has any connection with the business.

Yesterday Banker Bigelow was pointed out with pride by the people of Milwaukee as one of their most handsome and successful financiers; to-day as he walks the streets by virtue of a bail bond, he is pointed out as the man before whom the black walls of the grim prison are slowly rearing.

Others Involved.

And as we ask the questions we are reminded that Banker Bigelow is not the only one who is playing a part in this startling drama. On the stage with him there appears at least one of the bank clerks, Henry G. Goll, assistant cashier, who helped to falsify the accounts to cover the defalcation. We say he appears on the stage! We must qualify that statement and say that figuratively speaking for the purposes of this story he appears. But the fact of the matter is that he has disappeared, and the police in every city in the United States and Canada are looking for him, and it is not known how much money disappeared with him.

Disastrous May Wheat Deal.

The May wheat deal, in which it is said that John W. Gates, the manipulator of the attempted corner, did and did not lose a fortune, figures a good many million bushels, it is thought, in the story of the bank losses, either by the direct plunging of Banker Bigelow in his frenzied effort to make good the millions lost in Wall street, or the plunging of his son, Gordon Bigelow, whose financial backer he has apparently always been. The latest story is that Gates got out of the deal with a whole skin and a handsome profit to boot, and that the heavy losses caused by the breaking of the corner and the dropping of the price of May wheat from $1.21⅛ to 98⅛ cents, fell on the tailers whose holdings in some cases were enormous, as is evident from the fact that one line of 700,000 bushels for an outsider was bought at $1.19, nearly the maximum price reached. And it is more than likely that Bigelow was caught for a big sum, and it was this loss which precipitated the exposure. If John W. Gates made by the deal, there are those who are firm in the belief that Bigelow's losses helped to cover the Gates losses and leave the latter a handsome margin. And so the sensational May wheat corner, which is a story of fascinating interest by itself, figures in this drama from Milwaukee. It is one of the side lights that throws in fresh coloring and gives increased dash to the scene.

The Lessons.

And then the clerk that uncovered the steal, the directors that brought the transgressor face to face with his crime, the frenzied public which stormed the doors of the bank to recover its money, the flight of Chicago bankers with millions to the rescue of the imperiled bank, these all play their thrilling part in this remarkable drama. Such it is as it has been played on the stage of life. Perhaps some playwright will here catch the inspiration which will enable him to present a strong drama, whose lessons shall be the necessity of honesty and integrity, the danger of speculation, especially with other people's money, the certainty of a harvest from the sowing of wild, reckless and dishonest seeds, and the absolute truth of the Divine declaration: "Be sure your sin will find you out."

Nearly $4,000,000 Losses.

The revised schedules show a total liability on the part of Mr. Bigelow of $3,277,000, of which $1,975,000 is wholly or in part secured. Of the remainder $1,110,000 is a secondary liability on notes and bills discounted, in which Bigelow figures as indorser. These items are notes of the National Electric company, the Grand Rapids Edison company and S. W. Watkins, and are evidently connected with the financing of the National Electric company. The balance, $192,000, represents unsecured loans, the largest one being an indebtedness of $100,000 to the Broadhead estate, of which Bigelow was executor.

Included in the schedule is Mr. Bigelow's home at Astor and Knapp streets, on which he places a valuation of $40,000, while, less the exemption allowed by law on a homestead is valued at $35,000. The schedule of assets is as follows:

Furniture	$5,000
Horses	2,000
Carriages	2,000
Books	10,000
House	40,000
Total	$99,000

Methods of the Looters.

Little by little the details of the manner in which Bigelow and his accomplices worked are coming out, and to-day for the first time it was revealed how the steals were discovered. The first dip into the bank's funds, it is said, was made only three months ago, since which time Frank G. Bigelow has undone the enviable career he had been 30 years in building. The first false entry was late in January, on the same day that $200,000 was sent to a New York depository. The amount covered by the false entry was $100,000.

Assistant Cashier Goll and two bookkeepers, whose names are withheld by the bank officers, handled the books in which the reserves were recorded. This ring was established by Bigelow with a promise, it is said, of reward to all connected. All the funds for reserve were directed by Bigelow. In the three months, it is estimated, from casual examination, just about one-half the amount shown by the entries was remitted to the depositories in other cities.

After the first shortage in the reserve funds, the system became more complicated. The mails which brought the regular statements and the accounts from the depositories were carefully watched and held out from the regular course of business, and it is said that Goll now has the package of correct statements on his person.

His Business Connections.

And this man whom reckless speculation has led to criminal acts, has sacrificed wide business connection and influence, for not only was he president of the First national bank of this city, but he was identified with the:

Bankers' National association.
Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company.
National Electric company.
Milwaukee Trust company.
North American company.
Wisconsin Telephone company.
Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce.
Merchants' and Manufacturers' association.

Socially he was a member of the:
Milwaukee club.
Town club.
Country club.
Deutscher Athletic club.

Positions He Has Held.

He has been a:
Receiver for the Northern Pacific railway.
Commissioner of public debt.
President of the Bankers' association.
Candidate for United States treasurer.

He has:
Three daughters—Mrs. Bernard Becker, Mrs. Arthur N. McGooch and Miss Elizabeth Bigelow.
Four sons—Gordon, Tom, Garth and Lester.

His wife is one of the sweetest, most lovable women of the city. His home life was ideal, his charities were most extensive, his personal habits most exemplary, his love for the highest and best so marked that he has always been spoken of as a "good man."

How then in five months could honor high perched on his name, could he do what he has done?

The Dramatic Exposure.

When Charles F. Pfister, the "Duke of Milwaukee," called his 11 fellow-directors into the secrecy of a room in his hotel and told them, the financiers were struck almost speechless and refused to believe it. Pfister was the first director to learn of the defalcation.

A minor clerk, whose identity has thus far been concealed, went to Mr. Pfister's residence late Friday night. Pfister had retired and the servants refused to awaken him, but the clerk created such a disturbance that he finally was awakened.

"Something is wrong at the bank," said the clerk to the millionaire. "I have worried about it night and day for a week. I cannot be silent any longer."

"Why haven't you told Mr. Bigelow?" inquired the disturbed millionaire, referring to the trusted president.

"Because I believed somebody above Mr. Bigelow should know," replied the clerk, significantly.

Questioned by the surprised director, who thought the matter trivial, the clerk said:

"I was told to enter the amounts of our cash accounts in the Chicago banks. It was part of my duty. Assistant Cashier Henry Goll stopped me and said he would attend to it. Mr. Goll has taken charge of other work of mine and changed entries. Mr. Bigelow has turned certain other men on my work."

On Saturday Pfister personally directed a hasty examination of the books identified by the suspicious clerk.

The false entries were quickly apparent. Other clerks each declared President Bigelow responsible.

Staggered by his discovery, Pfister ran back to the president's office, burst through the door unannounced, and stood excitedly confronting Bigelow at his desk.

"Bigelow, You Are a Defaulter."

"Bigelow, you are a defaulter!" Pfister shouted, excitedly.

"Oh, my God," he cried. "I am ruined, ruined, ruined!"

Bigelow seemed about to faint. Neither man spoke for several moments.

"I have fallen with the grain market," said Bigelow, finally.

"How much?" asked Pfister. "Tell me all."

"One million two hundred thousand, as well as I know," said Bigelow.

Pfister rushed from the bank to his hotel and issued hasty messages summoning every one of the bank directors to a meeting in his hotel that night at eight o'clock.

His face twitching with emotion, Pfister faced the men and announced:

"Gentlemen, a defalcation of over $1,000,000 has been discovered at our bank."

"Who is guilty?" was finally asked.

"Frank G. Bigelow," responded Pfister, impressively.

The directors were literally struck speechless for a moment. Then several expressed disbelief, and asked what proof existed.

"Mr. Bigelow has confessed to me himself," declared Pfister. "He says his shortage is $1,200,000."

A meeting of the directors, with President Bigelow present, was hastily arranged. The defaulter seemed relieved by the discovery, and appeared before the directors and calmly spoke his confession.

Another story has it that William Bigelow, vice president of the looted bank, and brother of the defaulter, exposed the shortage, although at the time he suspected other officials of the bank instead of his brother.

Bankers Save the Day.

When the extent of the defalcation became known, naturally a run was [illegible] bank and to meet the emergency and restore confidence, more than $10,000,000 in actual money was raised within two days to stop the run of frightened depositors and save the greatest bank of Milwaukee from being swept from existence. The panic was stopped by the formidable array of money, but to accomplish this there was the most remarkable rapid assembling of cash in decades.

Chicago bankers contributed $1,000,000 of the total, the metropolitan financiers being first to go to the rescue of their imperiled brothers of Milwaukee. Another million was furnished by the Milwaukee clearing house. In addition the other banks of Milwaukee called in $2,000,000 of their reserve funds for emergency purposes.

The 11 directors of the robbed bank contributed a total of $1,635,000 by personal pledges from their private fortunes, which aggregated more than $20,000,000.

Only last September in addressing the American Bankers' association in the Waldorf-Astoria, New York city, Banker Bigelow, who at that time was looked upon as one of the lights and authorities of the banking world, said:

"However much prejudice there may appear to be at times against bankers, our business is of the utmost usefulness and importance and the right pursuit of it, in its broader and better aspects, requires all the courage and all the conservatism we can demand."

Then he recited Robert Louis Stevenson's prayer:

To be honest, to be kind—to earn a little and to spend a little less; to renounce when that shall be necessary, and not to be embittered; to keep a few friends, but these without capitulation; above all, on the same grim condition to keep friends with himself—here is a task for all that a man has of fortitude and delicacy.

To-day he stands self-confessed to having done all that his utterances of last year forbade.

Then he quoted the old lines:

Our little systems have their day;
They have their day and cease to be.

Now for the Reckoning.

His "system" has had its day and come to the full light of the law—he before the bar of justice; at home, a wet-eyed wife; on the streets, dishonored friends; in the distance the gates ajar of a prison.

A Friend's Testimony.

Yet in his darkest hour a friend writes of him:

"He was a humanitarian of the broadest type. He has made more young business men than any man in the middle west. He loved young men. He loved children. Never yet have I heard of a worthy young man in business trouble being turned away by him.

"His glorious smile would give a gleam of welcome and hope to the humblest of those seeking his aid and with the smile would go the help needed. It is said here that he has started a thousand young men in business and that not one of them has failed."

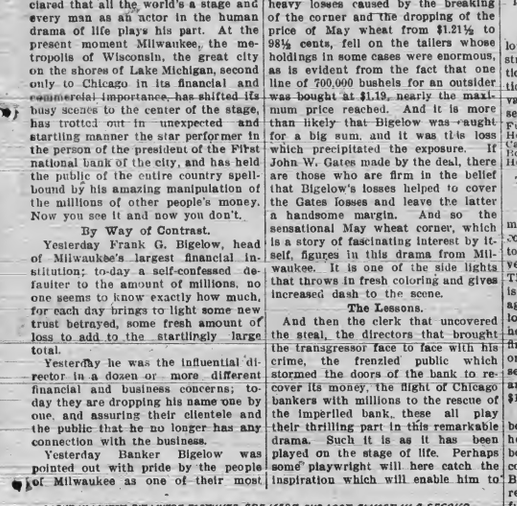
Has Sympathy of Many.

Then this friend adds:

"The law can have no pity, can make no exceptions; but you who judge this man, remember the other side; remember that there are thousands of us whose hearts are bleeding for the man we love, for this man who has stood by us in our hours of trouble; remember this and be charitable."

In the face of such a tribute can the psychologist answer why from December last to April 21 of this year Frank Bibelow, day after day, connived at the falsification of the books of his bank, made an assistant cashier and possibly two bookkeepers criminals, and one of these a fugitive from justice, plundered his institution for nearly $1,500,000 and then when self-confessed says:

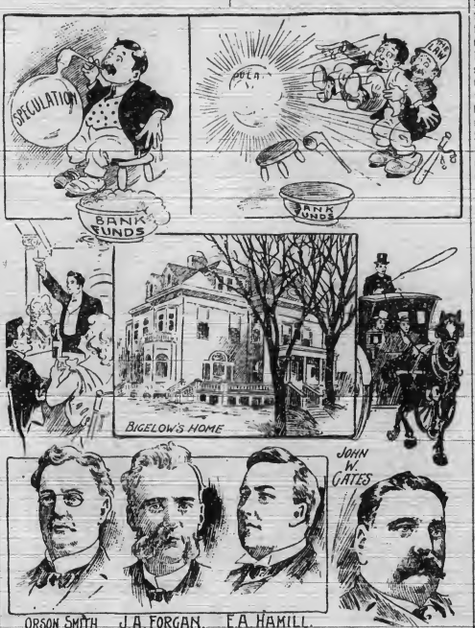
"I have no excuse to offer for what I have done; my family knew nothing of the condition of affairs."



Character Study of the Son.

The friend quoted above says of Gordon Bigelow, the son:

"As a young man he sowed his wild oats and he sowed them thick and plentiful, but though the oats were wild they were clean, there was no rust on them. The father's heart bled, but it never hardened against his boy. Mayhap, as is the way with hearts, it softened a bit with the bleeding. As often as the boy would fall the father would start him with a clean slate. He had done it for other boys. Could he do less for his own? And the boy became a man and put his boyish ways behind him, but he was still masterful, still the leader of the gang. He took dips into the stock market and won.



"He invested in manufacturing enterprises, and won. He bought wheat, and won. The week before the crash in Milwaukee they talked of Gordon Bigelow as a broker who had arrived.

"Through it all the father had helped him, but he had not guided. The boy was not that sort. He worked on his own initiative. The father saw his successes, his level judgment, his foresight, his almost intuitive knowledge of the game. He loved the boy—this boy who had made his heart bleed, and he was growing proud of him."

ARMY OFFICER AND HIS SCOUT MEET A DOUBLE FOE.

For more than a year after the Mescalero Apaches of southern New Mexico had taken the warpath they succeeded in eluding the troops sent against them. Secreting their families in almost inaccessible mountain gorges, they divided into small parties and made war upon settlers and detachments of soldiers.

Among the many attempts to discover the locations of these hiding places, the most notable one, perhaps, was made by an officer and a half-breed scout. Starting soon after dark, these men made their way on foot towards the supposed location of a village. Their progress for several hours was necessarily slow, as the country through which they passed was covered at the time with moving bands of Indians. Working their way slowly forward, crawling often upon their hands and knees, moving always cautiously, treading lightly, listening scarcely breathing, and often swerving aside at the noise of the moving scouts of the enemy, they worked their way through the main chain of Indian sentinels and, just before dawn, halted and lay down by the side of a great cypress log. They had scarcely chosen this place for temporary concealment when the crying of a child in a little valley not far away, gave sure indication of the location of the village. As they lay listening a couple of warriors on horseback suddenly made their appearance. As they came near, the officer hastily moved around the end of the log to escape being discovered, and finding the log hollow instantly crawled into it. He was quickly followed by the scout, and the Indians quite unconscious of the presence of their enemies rode past talking and laughing. They were closely followed by a dog, and when the creature came near the log it suddenly began to sniff the air. Running eventually to the end of the log it began to bark furiously. The Indians halted at once.

In the meanwhile the officer had encountered a great, hairy mass of something that quite filled the opening before him. He tried to recoil from it, but the scout, anxious to escape from the dog, pushed vigorously towards him. Suddenly the hairy mass began to struggle forward, scratching and clawing as it went, and directly succeeded in forcing its way out through an opening at the farther end of the log.

LAY DOWN BY THE SIDE OF A GREAT CYPRESS LOG

When the animal appeared the Indians instantly gave chase and for awhile could be heard pursuing the creature through the forest. In the meanwhile the dog had abandoned its efforts to seize the scout by the foot and, forcing its way forward tried to reach his face. The scout permitted it to come, and when its body could be reached stabbed it to death with his knife. The Indians returned presently from chasing the bear and began to call the dog. Getting no response from the creature, and fearing that the bear had killed or injured it, one of the warriors crawled into the log to search for it. When the animal was finally dragged to the light the wounds discovered on its body instantly aroused the suspicions of the Indians and they quickly began anew to examine the openings in the log. One of the warriors at length arrpoached the opening from which the bear had escaped and, failing upon his knees, endeavored to look within. In the meantime the [illegible] had dragged himself quite near the opening and now seeing discovery inevitable seized the Indian and pulled himself out of the log. A desperate struggle immediately began between the officer and the warrior. Fortunately the officer proved to be much stronger physically and, neither being able to reach his weapons, pounded the Indian into insensibility with his naked fists. In the meanwhile the other Indian, with rifle in hand, sought for a chance to shoot at the officer without endangering his companion. Intent upon this purpose, he failed to observe the scout who, having emerged from the log, hastened to cut him down with his knife.

As soon as the Indian whom the officer had seized returned to consciousness he was compelled to crawl within the log, after which the officer and his companion proceeded to fill the opening with sticks and brush, making a barrier difficult but not impossible to remove. When this had been accomplished they hurried away and, making a wide detour, succeeded in avoiding the Indian scouts and eventually rejoined their command.

THE Nan Patterson jury was eleven to one in favor of convicting her of manslaughter. She was confident of acquittal.

THE jury before whom Judge Hargis was tried at Lexington, failed to agree standing 10 to 2 for acquittal. Hargis gave bail in the sum of $25,000.

Judge Cecil Pence, of Covington, committed suicide yesterday, about one o'clock, by shooting himself. He had been judge of the Police Court for many years.

THE trial of Caleb Powers has been set for June 15th at Georgetown. Two new attorneys will appear for Powers at his next trial, ex-Governor Black, of New York, and ex-Governor Yates, of Illinois.

The County School Superintendent of Leslie county has given notice that no male person who smokes cigarettes, or female who chews gum, will be permitted to take the teachers' examination.

IT is said that the recent primary election held in Trimble county was the most decent election ever held in that neck o' woods. Several weeks before the election the candidates were lined up and each took an oath that he would not use money, whisky or other property to influence voters, nor permit his friends to do the same in his interest.

OF the recent Democratic primary election held in Trimble county, the Milton News, says:

"Though the field was full of candidates—all with an earnest desire in their hearts to serve the people in a public office, and a burning ambition to satisfy—with friends equally as desirous that the man of their choice should be one of the chosen few—yet, the race was made on its merit alone; the man without means having the same chance as his opponent with plenty to spare. Not a report, near or remote, has reached the ear of any to the effect that a cent of money, a drink of whisky, or bribe of any nature was used to influence a vote or secure the election of any of the winners."

The attorneys for Caleb Powers tendered to the Circuit Court at Georgetown a petition asking that the case be removed to the Federal Court for the Eastern district of Kentucky. The ground on which the petition is based is the alleged impossibility of securing respect for the accused's constitutional rights in the Stout court. Judge Stout called a special term of the Scott Circuit Court to try the case, beginning July 10. He announced that he would pass on the petition for removal at that time. The attorneys for Powers contend that by the mere fact of the petition being tendered to the State court the case is removed into the Federal Court, at least so far as to give the latter tribunal the right to pass on the question of jurisdiction. A copy of the record was filed in the federal court at London, Monday, and the hearing of the motion to transfer was set for June 19th.

IT is said that the well-regulated system of horseflesh preparation and supply in Berlin is a real boon to a large class of people, in a country where all meat is so costly as it is now in Germany. The consumption of horseflesh is steadily increasing, among a large class of people of moderate means, many of whom eat fresh meat of any kind only on Sundays and other festival days. In 1895 the number of horses killed in Berlin for meat was 7267. In 1900 it was 10,815, and in 1904 about 13,000. The average sized horse will yield 230 pounds of edible flesh, so that there was derived from this source last year about 3,990,000 pounds of meat, which was sold in 64 shops especially licensed for that purpose. The choicest cuts of horse meat sell in Berlin for from 8 to 10 cents a pound. Meat from any part of poor, old, or inferior horses sell as low as 3 and 4 cents. The liver is considered a delicate morsel and brings 10 cents per pound. The inferior pieces go into strongly spiced and garlicky sausages, which are the favorite food of many servants and working people in that country. In Berlin these sausages must be labeled "Pferdefleisch (horseflesh)."

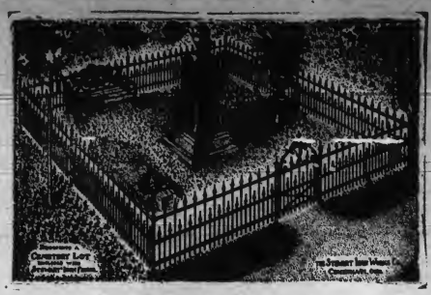
Terrific Race With Death.

"Death was fast approaching," writes Ralph F. Fernandez, of Tampa, Fla., describing his fearful race with death, "as a result of liver trouble and heart disease, which had robbed me of sleep and of all interest in life. I had tried many different doctors and several medicines, but got no benefit, until I began to use Electric Bitters. So wonderful was their effect, that in three days I felt like a new man, and today I am cured of all my troubles." Guaranteed at all drug stores, price 50c.



After four days of unconsciousness Theodore Hallam, one of Kentucky's brightest and most widely known lawyers passed away last Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at St. Elizabeth Hospital, Covington. Brain fever, superinduced by the sudden development of a tumor on the neck, was the cause of his death. Mr. Hallam came from a distinguished family. His father was the late Judge James B. Hallam. He was a brother of Henry Hallam, for years Circuit Clerk of Kenton County, and of Orrin B. Hallam, of Washington, D. C. Another brother is an Episcopal minister. Several years ago he was prominent in political circles, and was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress two or three times. He was a native of Owen county, this State, where he was born sixty-three years ago. He served gallantly in the Confederate army, and was a member of the famous Orphan Brigade. His wife was a daughter of the late Dr. John Stevenson, of Erlanger.

THE casualties in the Chicago strike last week exceeded those in the Russian and Japanese war.

THE 1904 crop of tobacco was estimated at 140,000,000 pounds, but it is now conceded that it will not reach that amount by 20,000,000 pounds. The 1903 crop fell short of the estimate by 30,000,000 pounds, and a tremendous boom in the price followed, and some people are looking for a repetition of the excitement that followed the discovery of the 1903 shortage.

BLACK-DRAUGHT STOCK & POULTRY MEDICINE
This great stock medicine is a money saver for stock raisers. It is a medicine, not a cheap food or condition powder. Though put up in coarser form than Thedford's Black-Draught, renowned for the cure of the digestion troubles of persons, it has the same qualities of invigorating digestion, stirring up the torpid liver and loosening the constipated bowels for all stock and poultry. It is carefully prepared and its action is so healthful that stock grow and thrive with an occasional dose in their food. It cures hog cholera and makes hogs grow fat. It cures chicken cholera and roup and makes hens lay. It cures constipation, distemper and colds in horses, murrain in cattle, and makes a draught animal do more work for the food consumed. It gives animals and fowls of all kinds new life. Every farmer and raiser should certainly give it a trial.
It costs 25c. a can and saves ten times its price in profit.

PUBLIC WEDDING.

The first respectable couple to apply will be given a public wedding on Wednesday, May 17th, and as an inducement a handsome donation will be made to them to start them in married life.

For full particulars address F. H. Ruscher, Committeeman, Aurora, Indiana.

Prof. and Mrs. Hughes and their pupils to the number of about 50 spent last Thursday in the Middle Creek cliffs, where they inhaled pure mountain air, slaked their thirst at the ideal mountain spring, and scrambled over mountain crags until they were footsore and weary, and by the time old Sol reached his meridian height that day, the members of the party, both large and small, were the possessors of appetites that made the contents of the lunch baskets appreciated and enjoyed as never before. Seldom has that picturesque part of Boone county been visited by as lively a set of youngsters as that of last Thursday. Every crack and crevice in the large rocks that have stood for ages like sentinels in the Middle Creek hills, was explored, while childish laughter and gleeful shouts were echoed from cliff to cliff, and these grim old sentries seemed to vie with the youngsters in the pleasures their outing among them was affording. It was a great day for the children, in connection with which their kind teachers will long be remembered. The trip to and from the cliffs was in the nature of a hay-ride, Bruce Clore being the driver of the large wagon on which 45 of most all ages and sizes took passage. The trip was a lively one made so by the waving of flags and the merry shouts of the juvenile band of pleasure seekers each one of whom was doing his or her part towards fun making.

The Boones went to Bellevue, last Saturday afternoon, and were given an unmerciful drubbing by the team at that place, escaping a shut out by the narrowest possible margin. Conner was in the box for Bellevue, and although he was hit for eight bases but one run only could be landed, and that was let in by a timely hit of Harve Smith, of Bellevue. Brady at short put up a wonderful game, while the other members of the team did nice work. Following is the score by innings:

Struck out—Conner 9, Houston 6.

The Grays and Erlanger teams hooked up here again last Saturday, and put up an exciting game which was lost by the home team simply by poor work on bases. Laile and Geiger did the twirling for the visitors, and their delivery was entirely too much for the Grays, they getting two hits off of Laile in six, and one off of Geiger in three innings. The visitors outplayed the boys at every point. The same teams play at Erlanger next Saturday afternoon.

A CARD.

It has been reported that when my house was burnt John M. Lassing would not permit me to draw the insurance money. This report is utterly false and does Mr. Lassing and me both a great injustice, as he did nothing except what I requested.

W. H. MOORE.

From reports throughout the county there will be an abundance of plants with which to set the 1905 crop of tobacco, and they are coming on so fast that many of the growers will have to get a move on to have their land ready by the time the plants are.

MYSTERIOUS MURDER.

Man Was Shot To Death After Being Tortured.

Georgetown, Ky., May 6.—Tortured with fire, shot to death, robbed of all money and valuables and then thrown from a train is believed to have been the fate of a man whose body, unidentified, is in the undertaking establishment of McMeekin & Co., in this city.

Through an examination of the body, which was found near the tracks of the Q. & C. road at 54-1 mile post, half a mile from the Sadieville depot, in this county, a most atrocious murder has been discovered and a mystery developed which the municipal and railroad police, as well as the county officials, are working hard to solve.

The injuries on the body are cuts on the left side of the face, head, neck and shoulder; a bullet wound in the right breast and severe burns on the thighs and lower joints of the legs and upon the tops and bottoms of the feet.

HIS ROLL GONE.

His Sweetheart Embraced Him Warmly at the Depot.

Lexington, Ky., May 8.—Jas. Durham has sworn out a warrant here charging Lizzie Shephard with grand larceny. Durham says he had been calling on the girl, and she had gone to the depot to bid him good-by on his way to Stonega, Va., to be gone for some months. At the depot, he says, his sweetheart embraced him. He thought it only a mark of real affection, until a few minutes later he missed his roll. He says he had $90 in bills in his vest pocket, with which to pay for transportation of a number of men to the Virginia town, where they were going to work in the mines. He had no money left to pay for the transportation of the men and the trip was postponed.

POOLROOM RAIDED.

Seven Operators Captured By Five County Policemen.

Louisville, Ky., May 5.—A poolroom just outside the city limits, said to be controlled by Henry W. Ehmhoff, was raided by five county policemen and seven operators were arrested. None of the spectators were molested. Another poolroom, 20 yards distant, said to be controlled by Ed Alvey, was not entered. After the officers departed the poolroom resumed operations. No gambling on the ponies is now going on within the city limits.

Frankfort, Ky., May 5.—Gov. Beckham has appointed the following commissioners for the confederate home at Pewee Valley:

For terms of six years each, Lelan Hathaway, of Westchester; L. H. Blanton, of Danville; Ben D. Terry, of Cadiz; W. N. Bumpus, of Owensboro, and A. L. Harned, of Boston. All of these have served one term as commissioner except Bumpus, who succeeds J. H. Bozarth, of Owensboro.

FOUGHT OVER A WOMAN.

In a Difficulty Paul Campbell Killed William Coffman.

Madisonville, Ky., May 8.—In a difficulty between Paul Campbell and Wm. Coffman, of the northern part of the county, Coffman was shot and instantly killed. The trouble is said to have been brought about by a woman. They were neighbor boys and were highly respected in the community in which they lived. Campbell made his escape.

STAY GRANTED.

Two Negroes Sentenced To Death Had Their Cases Appealed.

Lexington, Ky., May 6.—James Piersall and John Taylor, both colored, were to have been hanged here, but their cases having been taken to the court of appeals each was granted a stay of execution. Piersall on the night of January 19 entered three residences here, pilfered the premises, attempted to assault women found unprotected and shot Charles Wagoner almost to death. He was arrested the following day and but for the vigilance of the officers in getting him out of the city might have been lynched.

John Taylor, accompanied by his brother, Ed Taylor, and James Garfield Smith, entered Luigard's saloon one Sunday afternoon with the remark: "Let's clean out them white ——;" and opened fire at the white men inside, killing William Moore. All of them were tried and convicted.

NOTED BREEDER DEAD.

Joseph Warren Scott Dey Passes Away at Lexington.

Lexington, Ky., May 5.—Joseph Warren Scott Dey, noted trotting horse breeder of this county, died at St. Joseph hospital from an attack of diabetes. He came to this city from New York in 1869 and took charge of the breeding establishment of his brother, Anthony Dey, the former Wall street broker, and during his career as a breeder he bred such horses as Phil Sheridan, 2:11¼; Belle Girl, 2:22, and Call Cammie L, 2:21, the last named two making their records to the high wheel sulky. He was also a brother to Richard Dey, for many years confidential agent in California to the late John W. Mackay and who fills the same position now with Clarence Mackay. He was 73 years old.

The Jury Failed To Reach An Agreement and Were Discharged.

Lexington, Ky., May 8.—James Hargis, the county judge of Breathitt county, who has been on trial for four weeks for complicity in the murder of James Cockrill, is still a prisoner in the Fayette county jail, although the jury in the case failed to reach a verdict after deliberating for 15 hours. The jury announced to Judge Parker that they had failed to reach an agreement, and asked to be excused from further deliberations. Judge Parker questioned each juror separately, and after each had said that it would be impossible to reach a verdict Judge Parker discharged them.

ENVELOPED BY GAS.

Two Heroes Attempted to Prevent a Forest Fire.

Owingsville, Ky., May 8.—While attempting to prevent a forest fire from escaping gas in Wolfe county oil fields Newton Williams and Wm. McKenzie were fatally burned. The two men were looking over the field near Compton, when they discovered the gas had ignited. They began raking dry leaves away to prevent them from catching fire and attempted to remove the gas plant, which became disjointed throwing burning gas all over them. Their clothing was burned from their bodies, and the flesh was fearfully burned.

Iron Furnace Bought.

Paducah, Ky., May 6.—George W. Dixon, of Grand Rivers, Ky., and W. C. White, of Cadiz, Ky., have bought the old Center furnace in Lyon county and will put it into operation at once to manufacture charcoal iron. The furnace has not been operated since the civil war.

THE PHILIPPINE CASE.

Trouble of the Whole Matter Lies at the Door of Protected Interests.

The Washington Star is disposed to resent criticism of Secretary Taft's junket to the Philippines with senators and representatives this summer. The money cost to the government, it says, will be small, and if it were ten times as large it would be money well invested, it thinks. If all the members of congress could go and look around, the Star thinks it would be to the interest of everybody. The Star further says:

"Now when it is sought to gather and spread first-hand information a howl goes up about squandering money on expensive junkets. Judge Taft, as usual, is on the right track, and the end will amply justify the means."

Does the Star really think, asks the Indianapolis News (ind.), that what our congress lacks is information? If so, is not that rather a severe indictment of our system of government? If, with all our machinery, civil and military; with governors and commanders and boards all these years our national legislature is still lacking in intelligent information, then, surely, to use a slang phrase, we are not "on to our job." Fancy the British parliament pleading the necessity of a personal acquaintance with India in order to legislate for it intelligently.

We find in this statement by the Star a characteristic of much that is said in the press about the Philippines, namely, an assumption that all that we have done is right, and that if things have not gone as they should something in the Philippines is at fault. Nowhere is there an admission that we may not have the right machinery or may not be managing it in the right way. And there is moreover a resentment of any suggestion of this kind as if it were traitorous. It must be assumed that we are doing things exactly as they should be done in the Philippines; the person that dares suggest the contrary is an enemy to his country at least.

And yet we do not have to go back to our own official reports to learn that we are not doing things right, but wrong. To this is to be added the testimony of every person that has written on the subject from an independent standpoint. An expert sent there by the Chicago university Englishmen who have visited there and who are familiar with colonial government; all put their hands on the same faults. Yet we persist and talk about the benefits to be derived by personal inspection on the part of our legislators! Congress knows very well what is the matter, and so does all the world. The protected interests that control congress will not permit that body to enact the commercial legislation that every governor and every national board has declared is necessary. That is one fault. The other is that congress persists in keeping the control of the islands in its hands instead of letting this be in hands of men on the spot. So what happens is that the natives know that the real government is at Washington, not in the islands, and that the board that governs them can do nothing but look dignified and forward requests to congress to have them turned down in almost every case.

There is the whole Philippine case as it exists to-day. It all lies at the doors of the protected interests of this country. They will not permit congress to legislate for the good of the islands or to adopt the system of government that will be for the highest interests of the governed. Just for example, as they will not permit railroad rate legislation for this country. That is all there is to the whole question of Philippine government—or for the matter of that, other questions of popular government in the United States.

THE PEOPLE HAVE TO PAY.

Meat Comes High, But There Is a Constant Demand for It at Any Price.

The New York Press (rep.) pays its respects to the meat combine and compliments it, in a way, on its latest strategic move to show how much it thinks of the people and of the people's money. The Press says: "To cover the heavy charges of trying to keep out of jail by special train trips to Canada and private yacht voyages to Europe, retaining high-priced lawyers, suborning witnesses, engaging mercenary 'influence' and other devices and operations employed by trust criminals to keep the gates of the state prisons securely locked against their entrance, the beef trust is putting up the price of meat." Well, it is not easy, says the Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader, to understand why a republican paper should find fault with a state of things for which its party is responsible, unless it takes sensible ground and criticizes its party. The people are not without blame in the matter, either. Of course, this sort of thing comes high, but they have evidently got to have it, for they have been voting for it for years.

——It is reported that the friends of Vice President Fairbanks are going to start a paper in Indianapolis to support him for the presidency. Where's the money coming from?—Boston Globe.

——Illinois democrats are "going some." The same kind of an impetus will reassert itself in Missouri at the first political test. With these two great states for its head and front, the democratic party will push the g. o. p. off the map in 1908.—St. Louis Republic.

——The beef trust has raised the wholesale price of beef another half cent and another beef trust witness has dropped from sight of the federal officers. It seems to be the policy of the beef trust to grant consumers the privilege of paying the expenses of its fugitives from justice.—N. Y. World.

OFFENDS PROTECTIONISTS.

An Illustrative Instance of the Workings of Measures for Preferred Interests.

The London Standard has had running in its columns for some time a discussion by British authors of the American copyright law, especially as to the impolicy and injustice of the requirement that books must be manufactured in this country in order to obtain copyright. Mr. George Haven Putnam, the secretary of the publishers' copyright league, wrote to the Standard a letter explaining that this requirement was inserted in the bill to secure the support of the typographers, without which the bill could not be passed. The Standard, says the New York Times, has become an organ of Chamberlain protectionism. It published most of Mr. Putnam's letter, but it omitted the following passage, which, nevertheless, throws a strong light on the inevitable workings of the protectionist scheme:

"It is unfortunately the case that, under what I myself believe to be the necessarily demoralizing influence of the protective system, our legislators are much more ready to listen to the views of the labor unions and of manufacturing interests generally than to contentions submitted on the part of authors and publishers. The former claim to represent or to control hundreds of thousands of votes. The latter stand for but few votes, and are not in a position to influence that class of public opinion which controls legislation.

"I has been my experience in presenting in a committe room in congress arguments in behalf of copyright amendments to be told by the chairman of the committee that he and his associates were 'entirely in accord with my views.' A representative of a typographical union takes the ground, however, that his union 'does not believe in Mr. Putnam's bill, and that he, the typographer, is speaking for 40,000 votes.' The conclusoon of the chairman is: 'Mr. Putnam, we are in accord with you in this matter, but there is no advantage in presenting to the house from this committee a bill to which the unions are opposed. You go outside and satisfy these representatives of the unions and come back to us and we will pass your bill.' This, I point out, is the kind of action that can be expected of legislators who have for years been maintaining at the expense of the community as a whole a system of so-called 'protection' for the benefit of certain classes of manufacturers and of laborers."

FILIPINOS BADLY USED.

"In most respects our treatment of the Filipinos since we made the momentous mistake of acquiring sovereignty over them, has been marked by a generosity akin to altruism. We took the islands without the least expectation of the tragic events that followed. Having taken them, we were compelled to suppress insurrection. But as soon and as fast as any Filipino community consented to be governed peaceably under our flag, a beneficent government was established. But we have not been kind or generous to the Filipinos or just to ourselves in refusing to abolish or reduce the tariff tax on their exports of sugar and tobacco to the United States. The failure of the ways and means committee of the last house of representatives to report a bill providing for such a reduction until close to the end of the session—too late for consideration—was a deliberate, a carefully planned outrage. Accompanying the bill when it was, at last, reported was a report fully demonstrating its justice and expediency and exposing the shallowness and contemptible meanness of the opposition to it. But was the opposition of the sugar and tobacco interests more condemnable or contemptible than the keeping back of the bill and report long enough to give victory to the sugar and tobacco lobbies? Candor compels the assertion that the treatment accorded to the Filipinos in this matter of great importance to them must stand in the story of the fifty-eighth congress as one of the worst of its many defaults on duty."

The Trusts' Ways.

The Washington Post thinks that the way of the trusts is leading to governmental interference all along the line. It builds ships to hold down private monopoly, makes ammunition, educates the people free, and delivers their mail free. The Post asks: "Shall the government go into the manufacture and sale of sugar at cost, and shall it also undertake to furnish every citizen with oil? These are two great necessaries of life in the hands of gigantic monopolies, which manipulate prices for their own selfish ends, and without regard for the public welfare. Why not rid the citizen of the incubus of the monopolies, which weigh so heavily upon him in the struggle for existence? The question is a perfectly logical one, and if present tendencies continue the answer will be federal acquiescence in the request."

——The fundamental nature of democracy is a guaranty of its endurance despite repeated reverses and of its final dominance of the nation's political character.—St. Louis Republic.

——When the president gets back it would be interesting to watch the process of transferring the lid from Taft to Roosevelt without letting any of the animals out.—Birmingham News.

——Gov. Cummins, of Iowa, declares that "Washington air stifles tariff revision." But why blame sins of congress and the trusts on the weather bureau?—Kansas City Star (Rep.).

NO MORE HEADACHE

GENERAL WEAKNESS AND FEVER DISAPPEAR TOO.

How a Woman Was Freed from Troubles That Had Made Life Wretched for Many Years.

The immediate causes of headaches vary, but most of them come from poor or poisoned blood. In anæmia the blood is scanty or thin; the nerves are imperfectly nourished and pain is the way in which they express their weakness. In colds the blood absorbs poison from the mucous surfaces, and the poison irritates the nerves and produces pain. In rheumatism, malaria and the grip, the poison in the blood produces like discomfort. In indigestion the gases from the impure matter kept in the system affect the blood in the same way.

The ordinary headache-cures at best give only temporary relief. They deaden the pain but do not drive the poison out of the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills on the contrary thoroughly renew the blood and the pain disappears permanently. Women in particular have found these pills an unfailing relief in headaches caused by anæmia.

Miss Stella Blocker recently said: "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills did me a great deal of good. I had headache nearly all the time. After I had taken three boxes of these pills I became entirely well."

"How long had you suffered?" she was asked.

"For several years. I can't tell the exact date when my illness began for it came on by slow degrees. I had been going down hill for many years."

"Did you have any other ailments?"

"I was very weak and sometimes I had fever. My liver and kidneys were affected as well as my head."

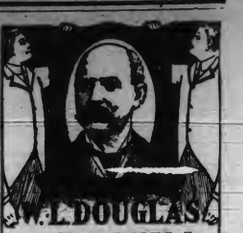
"How did you come to take the remedy that cured you?"

"I saw in a southern newspaper a statement of some person who was cured of a like trouble by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. My physician hadn't done me any good, so I bought a box of these pills. After I had taken one box I felt so much better that I kept on until I became entirely well."

Miss Blocker's home is at Leander, Lonisiana. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists. Besides headache they cure neuralgia, sciatica, nervous prostration, partial paralysis and rheumatism.

MOST PROFITABLE FARM INVESTMENT.

This is what the Cream Separator has proved to be. Twenty years of experience upon the part of hundreds of thousands of users in every country of the world bear witness to the fact. No one disputes it.



There never was a better time to make this all-important farm investment than the present. Butter is unprecedentedly high in price. It is most desirable that none be left go to waste, and that the quality be such as to command top prices.

If you have cream to separate you cannot afford to delay this investment a single day. If you haven't the ready cash the machine will earn its cost while you are paying for it.

The Secret of Good Coffee

Even the best housekeepers cannot make a good cup of coffee without good material. Dirty, adulterated and queerly blended coffee such as unscrupulous dealers shovel over their counters won't do. But take the pure, clean, natural flavored

HOW TO MAKE GOOD COFFEE.

Use LION COFFEE, because to get best results you must use the best coffee.

Grind your LION COFFEE rather fine. Use "a tablespoonful to each cup, and one extra for the pot." First mix it with a little cold water, enough to make a thick paste, and add white of an egg (if egg is to be used as a settler), then follow one of the following rules:

1st. WITH BOILING WATER. Add boiling water, and let it boil THREE MINUTES ONLY. Add a little cold water and set aside five minutes to settle. Serve promptly.

2d. WITH COLD WATER. Add your cold water to the paste and bring it to a boil. Then set aside, add a little cold water, and in five minutes it's ready to serve.

ELIEZER OF DAMASCUS

(Copyright, 1903, by J. M. Ritson.)

Scripture Authority:—"After these things the word of the Lord came unto Abram in a vision saying, Fear not, Abram; I am thy shield and thy exceeding great reward. And Abram said, O Lord, Jehovah, what wilt thou give me, seeing I go childless, and he that shall be possessor of my house is Eliezer of Damascus? And Abram said, Behold, to me Thou has given no seed; and, lo, one born in my house is mine heir. And behold, the word of the Lord came unto him saying, This man shall not be thine heir; but he that shall come forth out of thine own bowels shall be thine heir. And He brought him forth abroad, and said, Look now toward heaven; and number the stars, if thou be able to number them, and He said unto him, So shall thy seed be. And he believed in the Lord; and He reckoned it to him for righteousness."—Gen. 15:1-6.

ROMISES from God and God's own time and way in bringing those promises to pass. It is not so hard sometimes to believe in the ultimate blessing which is to come to us from God, as it is to wait patiently for the working out of the perfect will of God in our lives so that the blessing promised may be received.

When God said to Abraham, "All the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever. And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth," Abraham doubted not, but he wondered how it was to be brought to pass, and as the years sped by he sought by human wisdom and planning to obtain the promise. Mistakes were thus made, and trouble for himself and others caused. And the mercy, love and patience of God are no more strikingly manifest than in the way in which the mistakes were overruled and the promised blessings at last given in God's own good time and way.

"But didst thou not agree with my master for so much?" questioned Eliezer, sharply, as he turned from his weighing of the silver and gold and waited for the man standing at his side to speak.

Mamre, in whose country Abraham dwelt, had come that day to receive the annual tribute (or as we would call it to-day, the rent money) which had been agreed upon when Abraham had settled with his flocks and herds in the beautiful valley. In the true spirit of hospitality of the east Abraham had entertained his guest, and after they had broken bread together, thereby pledging to each other undying fealty and friendship, Abraham directed Eliezer, his confidential servant and steward of all his household and possessions, to make settlement with Mamre. Accordingly the two men had withdrawn, and were thus busily engaged when the dispute as to terms arose.

The wily Mamre sought to escape direct answer to Eliezer's question by recalling the unusual prosperity of Abraham since his coming thither. As he lifted his eyes and looked down the valley and towards the hillsides, he exclaimed:

"See his splendid flocks and herds fill the valley, and there (with a sweep of his hand in the direction of the little village of tents where Abraham's men and their families were sheltered) his numerous followers dwell in contentment, for there is plenty for all. Is it not little enough which I ask for all this? It is my land and my friendship that are making Abraham rich. Should I not be treated fairly?" And as he ceased speaking he let his eyes fall greedily upon the chests of treasure which Eliezer guarded in his tent, and from which he had just taken the silver and gold for payment to him.

Had Eliezer not been too modest to speak for himself, he might have told how it was his care and devotion to Abraham's interests more than the special favor of the country which had so enriched and prospered his master. He might have told how by his skill and management he had made flocks and soil yield abundant returns. He might have told how by precept and example he had inspired in Abraham's men the same spirit of devotion and faithfulness to duty which marked his administration. But he said not a word. Instead he pushed the bags of gold and silver, which by this time had been filled and tied up, towards the other with an air of decision, and Mamre, seeing that further effort to exact a larger tribute was vain, took the proffered treasure and departed.

In the meantime in the tent of Abraham master and wife were holding important conference. The coming of Mamre had stirred strange memories, for the year before, just previous to coming to Hebron and settling, God had appeared to him and promised him not only the land, but a seed to occupy it as numerous as the dust of the earth. But as yet no heir had come, and the realization of the promise seemed as far off as ever. Abraham was the first to speak:

"I am minded to make Eliezer my son and heir. May it not be that God's promise is to be realized in him?"

"Surely he hath been more than a son to you since first he met you at Damascus, when a mere stripling, and insisted in following you whither you went," replied Sarah, in evident sympathy with Abraham's plan, for she had long since ceased to hope that she herself would be the mother of Abraham's heir, and her bitterness and grief seemed to find relief in the thought that in Eliezer was to be realized God's promise.

Long they sat and talked over their plans, and then as the twilight deepened into the darkness of night, Abraham withdrew for his favorite walk and meditation alone in the starlight. Ere he realized whither his steps were bearing him he found himself beside the altar which he had builded when he first came to Hebron. Falling prone upon the ground, he lifted his heart to God in prayer, for he was singularly oppressed and troubled in spirit. The way had seemed all so clear while he had talked with Sarah, but now he seemed in greater doubt than ever. How long he remained bowed to the ground he knew not, but at last he realized that he was not alone, but that Jehovah stood by his side, and he heard Him say:

"Fear not, Abraham! I am thy shield and thy exceeding great reward."

"What wilt Thou give me, oh Lord, seeing I go childless? Shall not this Eliezer of Damascus become my son and heir? I beseech Thee that Thou wilt look with favor upon him," pleaded Abraham earnestly, as he unfolded the plan of his own heart and that of Sarah.

A deep and long silence followed, one of those pauses which come at times when the heart is waiting before God and He would have it search for and long to know the Divine will. Then came the message:

"This man shall not be thine heir; but he that shall come forth out of thine own bowels shall be thine heir. Come! I have somewhat to show thee," and leading him forth God brought him to the mountain top and said: "Look now toward heaven, and number the stars, if thou be able to number them."

In obedience to God's word, Abraham lifted his eyes to the vast stretch of heavens, and as his gaze swept from horizon to zenith and from zenith to the horizon in every direction, each one of the countless hosts of heaven seemed to be flashing forth a challenge for him to number them. Bewildered and abashed at the impossible task, he bowed his head, and God said, in measured tones:

"So—shall—thy—seed—be."

And Abraham believed God. It was with lithe step and buoyant heart that he descended the mountain and retraced his steps to his abode. Eagerly he sought his wife's side, and, arousing her from her slumbers, related all the wonderful experiences of the night.

Descendants as the stars of heaven! Abraham's seed and not Eliezer! How could it be? Sarah doubted not God's promise, but she could not understand how it could be brought to pass. All night long she pondered the thought, and then fell into a fitful slumber, during which she thought she had fallen into sore trouble, and saw Hagar, her Egyptian maid, coming to her help, but just before she reached her, she awoke, all during the day her mind was filled with the story of Abraham, and strangely enough her dream kept ever recurring to her in connection therewith. Abraham was not near to confide in, for he had left early in the day for the mountain with the heifer and the goat and the ram, the turtle-dove and the young pigeon, as the Lord commanded him in response to his request for a sign. And while Abraham was thus occupied in that wonderful symbolic service and vision, Sarah planned how God's promise was to be realized. In accordance with the common custom of her country and people, she would give her bond slave, her maiden, to Abraham as wife, that by her the son and heir might be obtained.

Thus it came to pass on Abraham's return late that night that Sarah told him all that was in her heart.

Ishmael was born, but how little joy and comfort it brought to Sarah's heart. He was the child of Sarah's planning, but not the child of God's promise, and how can there be real joy or comfort apart from the will and purpose of God? And the years which followed how barren of spiritual blessing. Thirteen years and no vision from God, no word from Him.

One day the faithful Eliezer came to Abraham and said:

"My master, remembereest thou not that Ishmael is already 12 years of age and naught has been done towards preparing him as thine heir to take his place as the head of the house when thou art gone?"

Sarah overheard the speech. The bitterness which had come with the birth of Ishmael had not yet left her heart, and without knowing why she spoke up sharply:

"Ishmael shall not be thine heir!"

All effort to induce his wife to explain her strange speech were unavailing, and indicating to Eliezer that he would talk with him later, Abraham withdrew to his favorite retreat by God's altar, there to meditate. And the Lord appeared to him there, and said:

"I am God Almighty; walk before Me, and be thou perfect. And I will make My covenant between thee and Me, and multiply thee exceedingly."

And Abraham fell on his face before the Lord. All the pent-up feelings of the years gushed forth, the darkness and doubt were fled away, and, lifting his voice of pleading, he said:

"Oh that Ishmael might live before Thee!"

"Nay, but Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son; and thou shalt call his name Isaac; and I will establish My covenant with him for an everlasting covenant for his seed after him. And as for Ishmael. I have heard thee; behold I have blessed him, and will make him fruitful and will multiply him exceedingly; 12 princes shall he begot, and I will make him a great nation. But my covenant will I establish with Isaac, whom Sarah shall bear unto thee."

The voice ceased, and Abraham was alone, but as he returned home he felt that Eliezer had his answer and that his own heart echoed the words of Sarah:

"Ishmael shall not be thine heir!"

SURGICAL FEAT IN A WAGON

Philadelphia, Pa.—To save the life of a four-year-old girl who was strangling from diphtheria, Dr. Anthony, of the children's hospital, performed an operation upon the child as she lay in the bottom of a wagon. The operation was successful and the child was taken to the municipal hospital, where her recovery is expected.

The situation was brought about as a result of the demolition of the hospital ambulance in a collision with a trolley car at Seventh and Pine streets. A wagon was pressed into service by the hospital to be used as an ambulance until a new one is procured.

The hospital received a call from 1118 South Alder street, where it was said that four-year-old Mary De Orlo was suffering from pneumonia. When Dr. Anthony reached there in the wagon, he found the child dying from diphtheria. He instructed the driver to go at top speed to the hospital. The nature of the disease made it impossible for the physician to take the child into the building.

Realizing the necessity of an immediate operation, Dr. Anthony procured his instruments and performed an operation on the child's windpipe as she lay in the bottom of the wagon. The little girl was then taken to the municipal hospital.

CLOTHES LOST THE BRIDE.

Groom Comes from West Too Shabbily Dressed to Be Acceptable and Is Jilted.

Louisville, Ky.—Clothes may not make the man, but they prevented a wedding in Louisville, and the personal appearance of the would-be bridegroom caused him to return to his home in the far west without the bride he had expected to take with him.

Miss Nan Pollard, of No. 2335 West Walnut street, was to be the bride, but when she saw the man who proposed to be her husband she wanted none of him, and the carefully prepared trousseau will not be used at present. It all resulted through a matrimonial advertisement.

"Is this the man who wanted to marry me? Are you the man who told me he was handsome and had money and clothes?" asked Miss Pollard. "I am he," was the reply. "I have met with sad misfortune. In St. Louis I fell among thieves and they used me sadly. I will refresh myself, and will be on my feet again if you will just cast an eye this."

"Alas, I cannot. Go and let me not see you again." The door closed and the young Lochinvar who came out of the west returned thither.

Tight Lacing Kills Woman.

Tight lacing and hearty eating caused the sudden death of Mrs. Violet O'Connor, wife of John H. O'Connor, a traveling salesman of St. Louis. While hastening from her hotel to the residence of a friend, Mrs. O'Connor fell unconscious on the street and died soon afterwards. The compression of her waist and rapid walking forced a large quantity of blood to her brain, causing cerebral hemorrhage, said the physician who attended her.

Two Miles of Dead Fish.

Dead fish line the shores of Minnesota lake and appeals to the state health department to have the nuisance removed have been made. The fish weigh from one to eight pounds, and are banked up for more than two miles. They were smothered. This residents here estimate the money value of the fish at $5,000 had they found a market last fall. These fish are mostly carp and suckers.

THE WORST CUT OF ALL.

Opals That Had Brought Misfortune Were Not the Genuine Stones.

"I think Sir Walter Scott is largely responsible for the superstition as to opals," said the traveling salesman of Kentucky to the Philadelphia Inquirer. "Be that as it may, it is still widespread. There is a large jewelry house in one of the big cities which will not handle opals. This means a loss of thousands of dollars annually. The founder of the house put the bar on opals, and the third generation is keeping it up.

"I was behind the counter of a house in the east. A lady came in, and handing me a breastpin set with opals, said:

"'Mr. Jones, what will you give me for these stones? They were an heirloom in my husband's family, but since they have come into my possession my husband and I have had nothing but misfortune. We have lost our residence by fire; there has been sickness in the family all the time. And now, finally, business reverses. I must get rid of the opals; so make an offer for them.'

"'Madam,' I said, 'are you sure that your troubles are due to them?'

"'Oh, perfectly sure!'

"'You cannot think of any other cause?'

"'No; make me an offer, please.'

"'Madam,' I replied, deferentially, 'I regret to inform you that those stones are imitations.'"

In the "Hole."

It was at the first tee of a fashionable golfing resort in the season, and Gadsby thought he saw an old friend in front of him, and slapping his supposed friend on the back remarked:

"Hallo, old fellow! How are you—who'd have thought to see you here?"

Stranger—"Sah, sah!" How dare you slap me in that familiar manner? I don't know you. You ought to be more careful, sir!

Gadsby—Really, sir, I must apologize, but I took you for the earl of W——.

Stranger (greatly mollified)—Say no more, sir! I quite see how the mistake occurred. Lovely weather isn't it? Will we have a round?—Washington Star.

Daubted Its Newness.

In a certain home where the stork recently visited there is a six-year-old son of inquiring mind. When he was first taken in to see the new arrival he exclaimed:

"O, mamma, it hasn't any teeth! O, mamma, it hasn't any hair!"

Then, clasping his hands in despair, he cried: Somebody has done us! It's an old baby."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

A Tale of Suffering.

Oakley, Mich., May 8th.—(Special)—"I could not sleep or rest in any place," says Florence Capen, of this place, in a recent interview. "I had a pain in my back and hips. If I sat down I could not get up out of my chair. I was in pain all the time. I got pains so I did not eat enough to keep a small child. I could not rest nights.

"Then I sent for a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills and went to taking them. And what do you think, that very night I went to bed and I slept till morning. I got up and thanked God for the night's rest and Dodd's Kidney Pills. I know that Dodd's Kidney Pills are all that is claimed for them."

This is only one of the numerous experience that show the way to build up run down people is to cure the kidneys. Thousands of people in every state bear witness to the fact that Dodd's Kidney Pills never fail to cure the kidneys.

Patent Medicines.

As a rule patent medicines are put up by laymen or self-styled doctors who have little or no knowledge of drugs, or the requirements of the human body. By advertising on a large scale, they often manage to dispose of lots of their ware. Pusheck's-Doid's Kuro is really not a patent medicine. It is prepared by Dr. Pusheck, a real physician, who has practiced in Chicago for about 25 years. Dr. Pusheck knows how good this remedy is, and that it can be depended on in all cases of Rheumatism, Weakness, Nervous Prostration and all Stomach and Bowel complaints. Dr. Pusheck gives all sufferers an opportunity to test his Kuro by offering to send a trial treatment to be paid for only when it cures. For more information write to Dr. Pusheck, Chicago, Ill. DESCIPLE OF SOCIALISM.

Mike Was Willing to Share with His Fellows Anything He Didn't Have.

Once, as the story goes, two Irishmen were engaged in a discussion, when rat asked Mike what socialism was, relates the Louisville Courier-Journal.

"Well, socialism is sort of an equal division of property,' declared Mike. 'What's mine is yours and what's yours is mine. That's the idea.'

"'If you had $2,000,000,' asked Pat, 'would you give me $1,000,000?'

"'I would that,' said Mike. 'That's as far as I go to my principles.'

"'If you had two houses would you give me one of them?' was Pat's next question. Mike insisted that he would.

"'And if you had two fine horses would you give me one?'

"Mike declared that he would follow his principles.

"'And if you had two goats would you give me one of them?' finally asked Pat.

"'I would not. I have them,' declared the socialistic disciple."

And there is not in the books, be it remembered in these days when so many men are pretending to be socialists, a better definition of socialism than that.

The farmers say lambs were never known to do better than they have this spring. Some of them are selling for as much as $5. An ewe producing 30 cent wool and a $5 lamb is a valuable piece of livestock to the farmer.

It is about time for the crop reporter to get his pencil ready to destroy the crops with all kinds of bugs and germs. It is wonderful how suddenly a man with a pencil can destroy a crop. Some other men are just as apt in making a double yield in the same manner.

Cleared for Action.

When the body is cleared for action, by Dr. King's New Life Pills, you can tell it by the bloom of health on the cheeks, the bright ness of the eyes, the firmness of the flesh and muscles, the buoyancy of the mind. Try them. At all drug stores, 25 cents.

The farmers say there never was more favorable weather for planting corn than that of last week, and a great many devoted their attention to that work, and a very large acreage was planted. Those who depend on the moon for information when to do anything say the sign was exactly right from last Saturday to Monday inclusive.

A Creeping Death.

Blood poison creeps up towards the heart, causing death. J. E. Stearns, Belle Plaine, Minn., writes that a friend dreadfully injured his hand, which swelled up like blood poisoning. Bucklen's Arnica Salve drew out the poison, healed the wound, and saved his life. Best in the world for burns and sores. 25c at all drug stores.

There is one word in the English language which can appear six times consecutively in a sentence and make correct English. To illustrate: "The man that lies does wrong." The teacher objected to the word "that," so the word "who" was substituted. And yet it must be evident to the reader, for all that, that that "that" that that teacher objected to was right after all.

Mortimer Whitehead, Past Lecturer of the National Grange, will address the members of Golden Grange at Union, Saturday afternoon, May 13th at 2 p. m. Patrons from other Granges are urgently invited to be present, as his exposition of the unwritten work is unusually fine. He will deliver a public address at 7:30 o'clock p. m., to which everyone is invited.

N. C. TANNER,
Master Golden Grange.

It has been suggested that the fiscal court ought to purchase and place in the court house yard several iron benches for the accommodation of those who attend the courts. Were that done the yard would soon be as free of grass as a marble yard at a country school house. But the court house and its yard belongs to the people of the county, and if they desire that it be equipped as above mentioned they has any right to kick.

Whereas, it has pleased God to remove from our midst our beloved sister, Mrs. Wm. Whitson, who died March 10, 1905, at the age of 39 years. Though an invalid for several years, she bore her affliction with Christian fortitude, Therefore, be it resolved.

1st. That the Ladies' Aid Society has lost one of its most honored members, the community one of its most worthy ladies.

2nd. That we extend to her bereaved husband and parents our heartfelt sympathy, and that we may remember them in our prayers that they may find grace in this time of sorrow.

3d. That a copy of this be sent to the husband and parents of the deceased, also a copy sent to the Independent and Recorder.

Done by order of society April 19th, 1905.

The hard rains that fell here last Thursday and Thursday night caused Gunpowder creek to go on a rampage and overflowed its banks, causing much damage to the low bottoms along the creek, that were planted in corn, and many acres will have to be planted again.

COMMISSARY.

We do not enjoy life half as well after our critics are dead.

Miss Anna May and Leona Cason and Nannie Goodridge, Elbert Clore, Lawrence Phipps, and Carl Cason were guests of W. T. Ryle and family, last Sunday.

Brandywine did all she could do in tearing out water gates. Rockspring branch, Brandywine, Bacon branch and Middle Creek were never known to be higher.

The flood of Thursday night undermined the large rock laying at the side of the road at Rock Spring, causing it to fall over into the road. There can be no travel with wagon or buggy on that road until the rock is moved.

We often get anxious about our bank account; we should occasionally at least, have our books of the heavenly treasury balanced. I fear a great many would be in the red—account over drawn—if their names were found on the books at all.

The high water Thursday night carried off two wagons and a buggy for R. A. Brady and a sled for Geo. Koons. The bed of one wagon was found down by Joe West's on Miss Julia Dinsmore's farm. The wagons, buggy and sled were not taken off of Mr. Brady's farm.

On motion of D. E. Castleman, the public administrator, A. B. Rouse, was directed by Judge F. E. Cason to take control of the estate of the late J. Harmon Polly, who died about two years ago.

Anyone having an item that they desire to have published will please let the writer know of it by Monday noon and it will be given prompt attention. If you do not let the correspondent know what is going on you need not expect for your neighborhood news to be up to date.

The worst wind and rain storm that ever visited this section struck here last Thursday evening about an hour before dark. Trees, fences and buildings were blown down while everything that was loose was almost washed from the face of the earth by the tremendous down pour of rain that lasted until about 6 a. m. Friday. Many fine plant beds in the creek bottoms were either washed away or covered up with mud, and field after field of fine corn that was ready for the first plowing was almost completely ruined. A large tree was blown across the pike and telephone line between here and Idlewild, wrecking the telephone line and completely blocking the road until William McGlasson came along with his buckster wagon during the severest part of the storm and got a saw and cut it out.

GASBURG.

George Batchelor's ferret got out of its cage and killed 60 young chickens in one night.

Arthur Terrill knows a good thing when he has it—he keeps the same old hand all the time.

Ennis Nixon has a turkey gobbler that has appropriated a hen's nest and is patiently incubating a setting of eggs.

That advertisement in the Recorder of Frank Walton's is misleading in regard to the date of the Confederate reunion at Louisville the date is June 14, 15 and 16.

We suggest to comrade Grimsley that the old Confeds meet in Burlington on the first Monday in June and perfect arrangements for the trip to the reunion at Louisville.

The heaviest rains that have fallen here for years visited us last week, and the damage wrought was very heavy. Every flood gate in this vicinity was washed out, some of them being carried clear into the river. Many tobacco plant beds were totally ruined, while none escaped serious damage, and in consequence there will not be near as large an acreage pitched as was intended. A great deal of the corn already planted will have to be furrowed out and planted again.

They tell it on a newly married couple on the Indiana side, that they agreed to argue some subject each morning that they might be better informed and also know each other better. Unfortunately for the continuance of the agreement they chose for the first morning the subject "can a woman dress on $35 a year?". He took the affirmative, and when the first session ended he found himself in the hay loft, and had pulled the ladder up after him and was industriously dodging stones, clubs and such like arguments hurled at him by the negative, as convincing arguments.

Terrific Race With Death.

"Death was fast approaching," writes Ralph F. Fernandes, of Tampa, Fla., describing his fearful race with death, "as a result of liver trouble and heart disease, which had robbed me of sleep and of all interest in life. I had tried many different doctors and several medicines, but got no benefit, until I began to use Electric Bitters. So wonderful was their effect, that in three days I felt like a new man, and today I am cured of all my troubles." Guaranteed at all drug stores, price 50c.

It seems a hard matter to get our team together any more. We went to Walton with only four of our regulars and with our pick ups and lost the game. If we intend to play any games we should arrange our work so as to get off on Saturday's by 2 o'clock.

Not much news this week, but we assure the readers that Idlewild got her portion of the May flood, and it will cause the 11th of May, 1905, to be long remembered by our citizens. Never before did the people of this part of the country experience such a long continued downpour of rain, blinding lighting and deafening thunder. We hear of great damage to land, crops and fencing in every direction—corn, potato and tobacco fields were especial objects of the storm's fury. Plantbeds and roads were damaged badly, as were the telephone wires.

As Mrs. W. F. Cropper and daughter Miss Bessie, of North Bend, were going home from Wash Watt's last Thursday, in the storm, they encountered a tree that had fallen across the road. They passed it after considerable trouble, but when they reached the creek it was so high that it carried the horse and buggy down stream until it was, fortunately, caught by a tree that held them in a most perilous condition until the creek ran down, and their calls for help were heard by two men who chanced to be passing along the road in the wagon, but instead of going to their assistance, these two men, the like of whom we did not think lived in this county, hurried on, heedless of the cries of these two ladies, who finally succeed in extricating themselves.

IN MEMORY OF MR. OWEN GAINES.

May 4th at 8 p. m. death closed the life of another good & highly honored citizen of Boone Co. after a long & tedious illness of months of patient suffering. A pilgrim in this life since January 30th, 1824, but not a stranger here, as he was born, raised, lived and died with his last sweet resting place in the neighborhood. He was connected with the largest family of the county, with a legion of friends, who loved and respected him as a moral, upright and sociable man. While he never publicly united with Old Baptist Church, whose doctrine he endorsed, but was converted in youth and lived and practiced christianity, reverencing always religion's sacred things, and so lived that no one would ever have known but what he was a true servant of God, and no doubt but that timidity, humility and want of selfconfidence prevented his casting his lot with the people of God. He did not consider Bepism as the most essential thing of salvation, but that sweet peace, the gift of God's love," that made him willing and prepared to meet his God, for in Christ the rich blessing he had found, and all that God sendeth was in mercy given. He was of a submissive and conservative disposition, which ever made him a loving, gentle father, a kind and devoted husband. In his death his family is now equily divided, as three have crossed the Jordan, and the three that are left well know the sweet consolation of Jesus' promises, yet with them we love, can but shed the tears of sympathy and friendship. On Saturday the 6th inst., at 10 a. m., followed by his own family, with two brothers, his sister, Mrs. L. Huey, of Union, was not able to attend, many of his friends gathered at Bullittsburg, the pastor, Rev. Early spoke the words of comfort which God's Book abounds for all that are saved alone through the atoning grace of Calvary, as was Mr. Gaines. We will miss his greetings of "as fine as silk," but the robe of righteousness he now wears, washed in the blood of the Lamb of God is not only fine, but immortal and eternal. Adieu, my friend, for it will not be long before the kindred of Gaines will cross the River of Death into that country where none ever return. L. B. W.

Not much tobacco set, as people did not have their ground ready.

Mrs. G. L. Miller and Alice Huey have gone to Louisville on a visit.

There was a large crowd out, Sunday, to hear Bro. Bedinger preach.

If you want to buy or sell anything, just insert an add in this paper, as Mr. Madden put an ad in on Wednesday and by the time the paper reached this office he was called up by W. R. Miller, who sold him a blooded calf for $25.

Saved by Dynamite.

Sometimes, a flaming city is saved by dynamiting a space that the fire can't cross. Sometimes, a cough hangs on so long, you feel as if nothing but dynamite would cure it. Z. T. Gray, of Calhoun, Ga., writes: "My wife had a very aggravated cough, which kept her awake nights. Two physicians could not help her; so she took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which eased her cough, gave her sleep, and finally cured her." Strictly scientific cure for bronchitis and Lagrippe. At all drug stores, price 50c and $1.00; guaranteed. Trial bottle free.

HERE AND THERE.

Before we talk about good roads in the county would it not be well for the county to get rid of about 50 miles of roads in the creek beds, which is never traveled and which takes a great many days to work and does no one any good? We helped work 5 miles of road last summer which took 18 days to work, and Reuben Akins' geese are the only things that have traveled it since it was worked. Does that pay?

We can truthfully say while traveling over the county we have seen more good looking young ladies than it has ever befell our lot before. It does seem to us that ever generation of ladies are more beautiful and winning than ever (excuse hiot, wife hit us over the head with a shovel) Boone county is to be congratulated on so many sweet girls growing up at the present time. But they do not show such wise judgment in obtaining a mate as their predecessors did 20 years ago.

Tom Irvin Johnson, of Kansas City, Mo., who is now staying with his uncle J. J. Lillard, of Sunnyside, is a splendid hand to give you the humorous side of Missouri life. Get him started and he is a sure cure for the worst case of hines.

Surely our friend James Snyder, jr., of Woolper Heights, has all the bad luck. A few months ago he lost his house by fire, then his wife had a long sick spell, and only last week his best horse got its leg broken and had to be killed. Jim has our sympathy. Perhaps good luck will come to him bye and bye.

A "long felt want" has again been satisfied. Most everybody has a telephone in his house, and all the public and private business of every one is known by everybody. We heard over the 'phone, one day, one lady talking to another lady, who said, "don't, you think Miss So and So's spring hat just horrid?" Some day, and not long off either, the 'phone will cause one of the biggest rows the county ever heard of. The Eastern trouble will not be in it. Remember!

What has Senator Blackburn ever done that a few men in the county are after his scalp? While the majority of the voters in the county are for Blackburn, the vote of the county will go against him in the caucus. Does minority rule in Democracy or not?

One of the severest rain storms that ever visited this section was that of last Thursday. At half past ten in the morning a heavy down-pour began, and for 18 hours the rain, accompanied by hail, fell in torrents, flooding all the low lands and washing the loose soil from the hill sides, doing thousands of dollars of damages. Tanner's creek opposite here was higher than it was ever known, while it rose to a rise 12 feet in a few hours, breaking river craft loose from its mooring, and causing steamboats to tie up. The corn boat and coalfleet at the distillery broke loose and floated as far as Aurora before the raging could land them. The Lawrenceburg coal fleet was strewn along the river for miles, while the surface of the beautiful Ohio was black with all kinds of drift wood. The river has reached the 45 foot stage and is rising, and is higher than it was ever known to be in the month of May. Half the cellars in town were full of water while the ball park looked like a lake, the water being five feet deep in some places. Our sewer system was inadequate, the main sewer was blocked with drift. The lightning played hide and seek on the telephone wires, and the heavy peals of thunder killed many young chickens.

"If you would be strong eat all the sweets you can." Thus said George Hackenschmidt, the "Russian Lion," who is reputed to be the strongest man in the world. After delivering this piece of advice Hackenschmidt turned a somersault, lifted with his open hands a man weighing 165 pounds out of a chair as easily as an ordinary person would lift an overcoat, juggled a 200-pound iron dumbbell and did a flip-flap all in the space of less than five minutes.

From a schoolboys' game at its inception baseball has developed into a national sport that costs the promoters of organized leagues $3,000,000 a season and furnishes entertainment for the residents of cities with an aggregate population of 27,000,000. As every city, town, village and hamlet in America has its ball team, it can readily be seen that the total amount expended each season in the maintenance of the game in this country and the number of people who patronize it must be stupendous.

China is essentially a land of homesteads, for the sons, contrary to the general rule in Western countries, always live with their father. The majority of the houses of China are built around an open court and have no windows for admitting light in the outside walls.

ON ISLAND OF JOLO.

Fierce Fighting Went on For Two Weeks.

Loss of Americans Under Command of Gen. Wood Was Seven Killed and Nineteen Wounded—The Moro's Loss Was 300 Killed.

Manila, May 15.—Fierce fighting has been going on the past two weeks on the island of Jolo between the outlaw Moro Chief Pala, with 600 well armed followers and troops under the personal command of Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood. Pala's losses thus far are 300 killed, while those of Gen. Wood are seven killed and 19 wounded. Pala and his remaining followers in accordance with Moro tradition, prefer death to capture.

Gen. Wood, with detachments from the 14th cavalry, the 17th, 22d, 23d infantry and constabulary scouts, has driven Pala and his followers into a swamp which has been surrounded.

Pala was a noted slave trader and warrior when the Americans occupied the islands. Later he escaped with his followers to the island of Pula Sekar, near Borneo. One of Pala's leaders deserted and took refuge in the British settlement at Lahad. Pala, discovering his whereabouts, landed with a following and demanded of the British magistrate that he turn the deserter over to him. The demand was not complied with and Pala ordered a massacre. Twenty five persons, including several British were killed. Pala escaped to the island of Jolo and organized the present uprising. It is reported that the Borneo authorities requested Gen. Wood to apprehend Pala dead or alive and turn him over to them.

THE LABOR TROUBLE.

General Strike of Union Drivers in Chicago is Threatened.

Chicago, May 15.—Unless compromises are effected by all the opposing interests in the fight now in progress in Chicago between capital and labor the teamsters' strike may spread many fold during the next few days. The refusal of the teamsters' joint council, representing 35,000 union drivers, to accede to the demands of the Chicago Team Owners' association to handle merchandise for all business houses having contracts with the members of the owners organization, without discriminating against the firms involved in the present strike, has brought the controversy to a point where a speedy settlement will have to be made to prevent an extension of the trouble.

There is a possibility, however, that the whole trouble may be satisfactorily adjusted without resorting to such drastics measures. After receiving the annnouncement of the teamsters joint council refusing to obey the ultimatum of the Team Owners' association a meeting of the latter organization was held and it was decided to give the teamsters more time to consider the proposition.

THE AUSTRIAN THRONE.

Woman, Claiming to Be Carlotta, Says She is the Rightful Heir.

Boston, May 15.—A woman, who claimed to be Carlotta, the wife of Maxmillian, former emperor of Mexico and brother of the present emperor of Austria, has left the city after securing some $40,000 from members of the Italian colony on the pretense that she was the rightful claimant of the Austrian throne.

She is being sought by over 100 residents of the North End district, who for almost eight years have been paying her money to enable her, as they supposed, to gain possession of the Austrian throne upon which event taking place she promised that those who helped her would be made ministers and nobles and be given vast estates.

CHAMPION JEFFRIES.

He Announces That He Will Never Again Enter the Ring.

Chicago, May 15.—James J. Jeffries, champion heavyweight pugilist of the world, left Chicago for Los Angeles, Cal. It is his announced intention to build a home in that city. Crippled with rheumatism and suffering intermittently from malarial fever, Jeffries says he has put on fighting gloves for the last time, and that he will never again enter the ring. [illegible] his brother Jack, owns several mining claims in Arizona, and to these and to mining in general Jeffries says he will devote his time in the future.

Alleged Trusts to Be Investigated.

Chicago, May 15.—Following the present investigation of the packing industries by the federal grand jury, steps will be taken by the federal authorities to make an investigation of the drug and steel industries with a view to determining whether the large firms in control of the bulk of these industries are not violating the anti-trust laws.

The Cases Dismissed.

The exposition of rare old books and manuscripts now being held in the British Museum includes the oldest known manuscript of the Bible, of the ninth century.

Prof. Flinders Petrie, the Egyptologist, has made some important discoveries in the Sinai peninsula. The ancient temple of Seabit el Khadem, five days' camel journey south of Suez, he found to be of a Semitic type, different from any other known Egyptian temple, possessing two courts for ablution and a long series of subterranean chambers. These had been added by successive kings from the 18th to the 20th dynasties.

What is probably the most ancient letter in the world has just been discovered in some excavations being made in the province of Attica, and is said to have been written four centuries before Christ. It is engraved on a leaden leaf, and runs as follows: "Mnesiengos sends his greetings to those in the house and informa them that he is in good health. Please send me a blanket or some sheepskins, if possible, of the ordinary kind, without ornaments. As soon as the occasion offers I shall return them."

Private Car Lines.

The railroads seem very willing to have the private car lines brought under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission. A railroad president is authority for the statement that lines are paid mileage, without discrimination, and the question of excessive charges is a matter for the shipper to settle with the car lines, so long as there is no law to govern their rates. Car milsage paying has been decided to be as legal as the payment of rental for property.

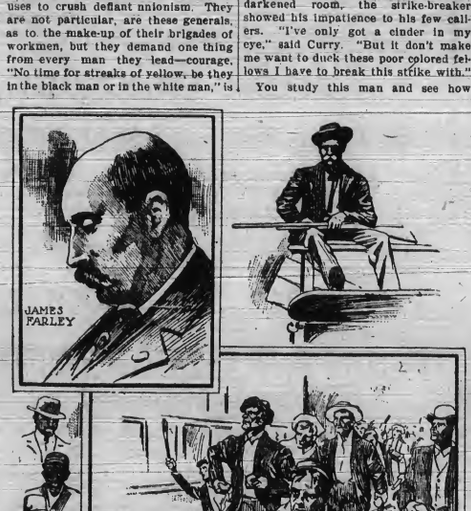
MEN WHO DEFY DEATH FOR GAIN

Daring Strike-Breakers Fight Organized Labor in Interest of Capital.



FARLEY, THE KING OF A NOTED TRIO.

Behind This Leader Stands Frank Curry, "Buster" Ready and Their Forces Ready to Crush Unionism at Call of the Employers.

Character Study of Curry, Who Is Conducting Battle of Chicago Business Men on Teamsters—New Occupation Born of Industrial Strife.

Chicago.—"Vested interests" have put the stamp of approval upon one comparatively new industry in the United States—strike breaking. There's a species of freemasonry that obtains in this lishmaelite class, but thirty-third degree honors only have been conferred upon three men—the Big Three of the industrial strife world. James Farley, by reason of his long experience, easily leads this trio in the public eye. Not to have heard of "Farley's Own" is to argue yourself ignorant of great labor troubles. Frank Curry, the pugnacious, audacious, shrewd and withal fearless bundle of nerves and muscle who is defying unionism in the vortex of Chicago's riotous teamsters' strike, has pushed himself into second place. The third of this group of men who pour out organized capital's wealth to pour into strikes the units of fighters who move freight, turn wheels and push commerce on her way, is well known on the Pacific coast—"Buster" Ready.

These are the superiors in the modern and approved plan of battle that capital uses to crush defiant unionism. They are not particular, are these generals, as to the make-up of their brigades of workmen, but they demand one thing from every man they lead—courage. "No time for streaks of yellow, be they in the black man or in the white man," is the statement you will hear from the strike breaker when he lines up his men for the first duty.

Farley the Mysterious.

"Farley's here—he will have 2,000 negroes at his back and Chicago's business will be resumed," was the message that went through the room where were gathered the chiefs of the teamsters' joint council. The name Farley was one to conjure with on the streets. A people who had no knowledge of Farley except what was gained from the press wondered if Farley wore a coat of mail, slept with his head on a Winchester and had a bodyguard of cowboys.

Yes, Farley was there. We saw him—we who were watching for the man whom the millionaire merchants expected to help them out of their stagnation. But the Farley who came into strike-ridden Chicago unannounced, incognito and almost dragging himself into his hotel room was not the intrepid Farley who had put his horny fist into the hand of the executive head of New York's Interborough and promised with the grasp of friendship to break the strike of 6,500 employes inside of 40 hours.

Leader Broken in Health.

Farley did not lead a body of riflemen in the Employers' Teaming company caravan guard. He did not get into any of the riots with the strike sympathizers. Instead he slipped out of the city as quietly as he had come in—a sick man. Down in a health resort in North Carolina this greatest of geniuses the labor troubles of the country has produced is coughing. The harsh, frame-racking cough that he has means that there is a great strike going on in his anatomy that even his indomitable courage cannot "break." It will break him. And when this is done a black wagon will traverse the streets of Pittsburg to a hillside where men who wear even the ubiquitous union button will uncover their heads and mutter: "Well, he had the nerve."

Curry a Man of Nerve.

When the planet is "wobbling in its orbit" the satellite must endeavor to keep up the equilibrium. The honors that might have been reaped by Farley are left to Frank Curry to reap. He began his harvest by getting arrested and having his eyes blackened by the caress of a pair of brass knuckles." Fretting over the orders of a physician that he remain in a darkened room, the strike-breaker showed his impatience to his few callers. "I've only got a cinder in my eye," said Curry. "But it don't make me want to duck these poor colored fellows I have to break this strike with."

You study this man and see how far short of Farley his capacity for executive ability falls. Homestead's iron works cooled the mold in which Farley's spirit was shaped and then the mold fell into the Alleghany river. Curry had his fighting spirit case hardened in a struggle of less importance—he seems to have some molten material in the interior that needs the reverses of conflict to harden.

Defies Death for Gain.

It's money—only money that Curry is working for. He nonchalantly tells you that. "If the strike lasts 30 days," said Curry, as he dropped some medicine into his inflamed eye from the blade of a knife—disdaining to use the little rubber syringe that his doctor has left for him—"I'll slip out of the city $30,000 richer than I was when I came in."

"But haven't you any animosity—isn't there some of that hatred that the correspondents have written about that impels you to fight unions?" Curry was asked.

"Look here," was the quick reply. "Put down in your note book these few things, and when I'm a back number study them:

"A man who would not take a chance against a mob for money is not a person to look for the future.

"Capitalists play golf, count their coupons, lean on bright young men to plot their great enterprises and write essays for their club parties on the growth of union tyranny. They need brawn, brains and grit to help them in their troubles.

Must Please Men of Wealth.

"The young man who has a few ounces of brains, a carload of grit and enough brawn to not know he has a stomach needs that capitalists' money. He can't win, taking it from the rich man—he must please him to get it.

"Please the capitalist by showing him that law and order will spread out before you if you fight disorder and lawlessness and you will get more from the rich man than a bookkeeper could earn in 50 times your period of work.

"If you are breaking a strike don't ask what kind of a union button the assailant wears—give him a quick-rising one on the forehead for nothing, if he assaults you. He'll keep his dues paid then in the university of experience.

"Think of the chances you have in life with money earned quickly and in large sums. Be mercenary, if you will, but get it by giving your best work for the man who employs you.

Fat Checks Salve Wounds.

"No physical pain you can get in a riot lasts long. The nice check that comes at the end of your work will make you forget a few bruises and scars.

And this from a man whose eye was bandaged, whose head was swollen from club wounds and whose body bore bruises from the brick shower he had defied. Look for the cynic's smile when he concludes his epigrammatic talk and you will be disappointed. Curry has a new science—he will master it and have a bank account that will take him far from the madding crowd, as it were. Some day he may have a sheep ranch and extend an invitation to some old and broken former labor chief to come and be his herder.

Demands Only Courage.

Farley never forgot a man's name if he passed scrutiny and got his description on his little red book that he kept in a safe in his office in Pittsburg. Those names were a fund that he drew upon for the railway and street transportation chiefs when they needed strike-breakers. But Curry has no list. He would not be bothered with a book. He will take the leadership of the biggest and most nondescript throng of nonunion men, black or white—and black preferred—that any employment agency ever hustled into day coaches for a long train ride.

"Is he a man? Can he drive a team and fight?" Those are the only queries Curry puts to his recruits after they are turned over to him. He will talk of the rich merchants of St. Louis putting rifles on their shoulders, shutting themselves up in their Washington street barracks and fighting the mobs of unionists. He will say that their hands trembled when their fingers pulled the triggers that sent messengers of death to rioters. But his sickly smile follows his conclusion: "They broke the strike."

"It's what guns were made for—to shoot. I shot at men lots of times. They had me tingling with pain when I did it and, may it please the court—ha! ha! ha!—I think my alm was bad—very bad—worse than that of a woman. You see it's better to hit a striker than a lad playing a block away and you can afford to shoot into the ground once in awhile."

Farley, the Silent.

If Curry is studying to simulate Farley he is a poor student. Farley never talked that much to anybody. The skill of Farley, who had 3,000 employes rushed up the East river to the Interborough power house on the steamer C. H. Northam, ready after midnight to man New York's cars that the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes had deserted, never was menaced by garrulity. Union men, richer than other workmen, haughty because they had powerful and rich unions behind them and ignorant of the true strength of Farley as a strike breaker, scoffed when the Northam left her Jersey City anchorage.

"Her decks are deserted," they said. "This man Farley has a baker's dozen of curs in the hold." Farley never spoke except in a low tone to a lieutenant of "Farley's Own." He had made trips to the principal cities of the country, selected his men and had brought them to New York's portals. A few hours later he put them in charge of the cars and one day later had the unions suing for peace. There was scarcely an interview with Farley in a Manhattan paper that was bona fide. Capital spent no time in foolish praise of the man who gave it the weapon to humble strikers whose ultimatums to the company imposed impossible conditions. It paid him and filed his name for future use.

Curry Once a Motorman.

Curry learned the use of the motorman's controller handle. He could stop a trolley car at a street crossing so that a passenger could alight at the same spot every time. He knew also the way to use the Westinghouse air brake. He could mend a "blown-out fuse." He could climb onto a car roof and cut a live wire or fix a twisted trolley. In short he was of the world of "front enders"—motor men. And it was not surprising that a great street railway strike brought him into his largest prominence.

We watched him guide a car through a mob, dodge missiles and defy the stockyards thugs in the City railway strike. "I'll take a car through to the terminal and back if there is only a platform left," said Curry.

Strikers visited his home and pleaded with his wife to teach him fear. She knew that he was fearless even to the death struggle. She also knew that his goal was the dollar sign—that he had no specific fight with unions. Mrs. Curry realized that the current of his ambition could not be grounded and pleaded with her callers for justice for her spouse. "Frank's got the nerve—he has a right to work for his living and if he gets the reporters to call him a hero, a bruise on his head will hurt just the same," she is reported to have said.

Brains vs. Brawn.

Considerable brute strength was an asset used by Curry in the street car strike. Farley used his brains more and directed brute strength along lines of least resistance. The strategy of the Pittsburg office went into effect wherever Farley strung his "live wires" without a hitch. Curry, after all, was a strike-breaker who needed a general manager or a superintendent to help plan for the trips.

Then there was the ice wagon drivers' strike in St. Louis. Farley did not aspire to "breaking" that. Maybe he was not asked to help. But Curry bobbed up. He gave his opinion of the situation three hours after viewing it. "Plenty of good police—a chief who knows the department will do as it is told—union men who have a reverence for the law that Chicago teamsters do not possess"—and he said to the millionaire leaders who conferred with him: "It's a cinch."

In that strike Curry coined an expression that only one man heard. It was: "Negroes have blood, nerves and a desire to work. I'll fight to put them at par with the same stocks of the white men." And it was Curry who saw in his throngs of big, loose-jointed, silent, powerful, though not altogether cleanly, colored recruits from St. Louis and the south a force that could break the warfare that International President C. P. Shea, of the Teamsters' brotherhood, had precipitated in Chicago.

How Curry Defied Strikers.

The first thing that Curry did when put in command in Chicago was to march 300 colored strike-breakers through crowded streets to "teach them the lay of the land." It was only a picnic for Curry. The marchers were tired and footsore. Not so with Curry. A call went out: "We have lost a wagon. Who will find it? It has a federal injunction placard on it, but that means some one will lead the mob to make kindling-wood of it."

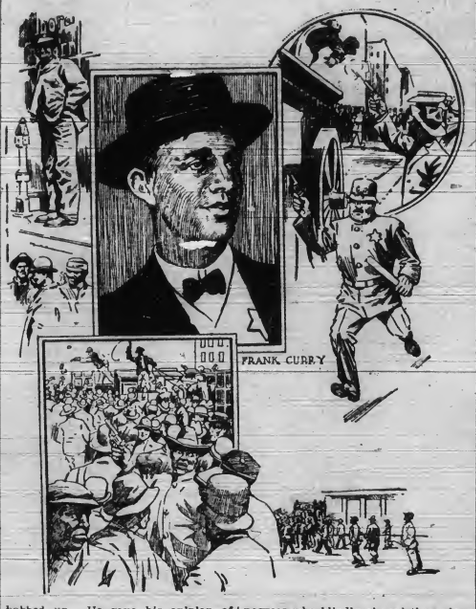
"It's a cinch," came the familiar remark of Curry. "Step out here, you fellows. Follow me."

Policemen never dodged the showers of missiles that were directed at Curry and his band. Time for a grim joke even by Curry. "They are not trying to curry favor but curry Curry," said the strike-breaker. He found the wagon.

Wealth His Reward.

Will Strikebreaker Curry ever get into the Union League club for a farewell dinner when his work is over? No. The forces of the executive committee of the Employers' association that were instrumental in enlisting Curry for the perilous work speak with the checkbook to such an employe. They regard him as a soldier of fortune. Curry will pass on to some other center where organized capital decides to declare its independence of the so-called tyranny of labor—where a dormant citizens' association or an employers' association arises to present a slogan: "Open shop city or fight to the finish," and again the will o' wisp of money will dance before Strikebreaker Curry's eyes. He will do the work asked of him. Given enough industrial strife problems to solve and Curry will swing around a circuit that will end only with his period of usefulness.

There was grave talk of putting the national guard in the streets of Chicago when Curry was busiest directing his men. "My boys in a saloon?" queried Curry in his telephone. "Tell them to steer clear of the saloon. That's what makes it possible for strike-breakers to work, lots of times—the saloon." Then settling back for another chat the wounded leader discussed troops and their bearing on a strike.



Troops and the Strike.

"When you find the union men are just plain law haters—not high-class men—you learn that they do not fear the police as much as they should. And I guess the bluecoats do not want to get the union men down on them. I was arrested for picking up a brick that a union sympathizer hurled at me, while the latter was not caught. While two policemen held me a thug used his brass knuckles on me. That's not fair. If militia were on guard lawlessness would cease and we strike-breakers would have a chance to put through the teams as directed."

"Then the presence of troops would not make your own leadership futile?" Curry was asked.

"Troops might have to fire a few volleys and then the peaceful stage would begin. A short time of this and I would flit."

Out in the street a rich man drove his automobile up to the department store. Fifty policemen were guarding a caravan of wagons manned with the negroes who blindly obeyed the orders of Strikebreaker Curry. A man who was fixing the cement sidewalk drew near to the automobilist.

"They do be sayin' that this Curry, the strike-breaker, will have Farley wid him to-morrow, mister. I'd hate to be a teamster in the procession."

"My good fellow, a strike-breaker can sleep ten hours a night, like you do, perhaps," was the reply of the man in the auto—one of the merchant princes whose word in the Employers' association was law.

And the wonder is that a strike-breaker of prominence can find a room in which he feels secure enough to drop into slumber.

PASSING OF MEDICINE MAN

Red Men Are Coming to Believe in the Virtues of the White Man's Medicine.

The skilled professional doctor is one of the greatest helps to the Indian, and the Navahos are receiving him with very little distrust, says the Southern Workman. The savage misappropriation of things that are new is gradually subsiding, as results make clear to him that the white man's medicine is more powerful than his. But there are exceptions. The purely physical troubles may be eradicated by the doctor, but there still remains in many cases a mental uncertainty that demands the attention of the tribal medicine man. It is not a foible or a fancy, but a mental disease governed by countless ages of mysticism which necessitates the occult, mind-easing treatment of the old days. This, then, is a mind cure of the Indians—the Christian Science of the savage, which, hand in hand with concrete medicine, exists in all races, whether barbaric or cultured. It is as necessary to the Indian as a certain amount of mind cure is essential to our happiness.

The knowledge of modern curative agents should be imparted to the younger members of the tribe. They are capable of assimilating new facts and will take readily to the new school. Civilization is disrupting the tribal organization to such an extent that the major portion of the old laws and beliefs relating to the causes and cure of disease will soon be things of the past. With this essential of the old life gone, the work of the medicine men will have been finished. At present there must be a certain cooperation between the modern doctor who goes among them and the medicine man of the tribe.

Boy's Idea of Babies.

Here is an essay on babies, by an English board schoolboy: "Babys are little red things without bones nor teeth. They have various sises, but just after they are borned, they are called bypeds; their bones are gisle. They are two sects, male and femal'e, and are also very fat. When very young they do not have much hair. They are always asleep only when crying. Women and girls go silly over babys, and kiss them all over and say silly things. That's why girls have dolls when they haven't any little brothers. Everybody has to be a baby first. That's all I know about babys."

SENSIBLE HOUSECLEANING.

Do Not Try to Do Everything in One Day and Take Enough Rest for Fresh Attacks.

People do housecleaning in many different ways, but this is the way I find best: As soon as the weather becomes a little settled I start in, so that my work is completed before the very warm spell we usually get in the spring sets in. One room a day is sufficient for the housewife to do when she attends to all other work herself. Decide on something for dinner that requires little trouble. Sometimes I prepare the vegetables the night before, if I am to have some that will not spoil, for instance: Carrots, potatoes, parsnips, turnips, etc., keep very nicely pared when they are covered with water. (This plan I find works admirably for Sunday, too—the vegetables can be done Saturday night for the Sunday dinner.) I commence housecleaning with the garret and finish with the cellar. I start right in after I have done the breakfast dishes. If I can conveniently do it, the day before I dust the knick-knacks and pictures in the room I intend doing, and pack them into a basket, then in the morning it is clear sailing. And as a rule I have only the finishing touches to do after dinner. I used to start right in and do another room, but I find that does not pay, as it makes me too tired, and after I had finished my work, I usually had a sick spell, so, you see, it was not worth while. When finishing a room, I put up the screens to the windows right away, so I have very little trouble with flies all summer long.

In the average home, housecleaning time is a season of danger and discomfort. To my certain knowledge, many a life has been lost by overwork and exposure, due to unwise methods of housecleaning. This need not be. In early spring all closets, cupboards and bureaus can be cleaned, and all useless articles disposed of. All articles that require laundering can be done and laid away, and when the weather is so mild that heating stoves are no longer needed, one room at a time can be cleaned. After that, all pictures and bric-a-brac can be cleaned and stored there, and the next room tackled. When the housewife gets weary and the larder gets empty, she can stop and bake a little for the good man, who will then be more willing to help her lay the carpets. Do not neglect the routine of wholesome meals during housecleaning, and do not try to renovate your house in such haste that you will suffer the ill effects for months to come. It is the height of folly to have the whole house in a state of confusion at a season when the human system has been weakened by a winter's seclusion indoors. I have learned by many years of experience that the horrors of housecleaning may be banished by cleaning one room at a time and taking now and then a day of rest between rooms.—Farm and Home.

EXTRAVAGANCE IN BUTTER.

Better to Dispense with the American Custom of Using This Fat at the Dinner Table.

With the many sighs heaved over grocery and creamery bills, it is encouraging to know that the crusade against butter at the dinner table is rapidly gaining ground, partly because it has come to be the fad. Once the fad is established as a habit, however, it will carry itself along, as it is a good, sensible one. It is a point in which we Americans are more extravagant than perhaps other nations. A full dinner usually contains in itself more fat than can be readily absorbed by the system, and superfluous fat tends seriously to retard, even disturb, digestion. To add butter out of sheer habit, to suffer from indigestion because of too heavy a diet, and in turn fill up with drugs and have to face the bills is bad management. . . . Many a husband, while strongly advocating every economy, will feel, in spite of the gravy and juicy meat, besides vegetable sauces, that some way his dinner is not complete without his habitual butter. At least start out the younger members of the family in the new habit, and eventually you will find they will feel better satisfied minus than plus the superfluous fat.

The manufacturer has to study details in the process of exhausting from his raw material the very last molecule of his product, and all this in relation to the expense in labor and time for securing it. Not only is this true of the product itself, but every grain of the by-product has to be used to the best advantage. How little of this method do we apply in our households! More than [illegible] single attempt not entirely successful, we are prone to be discouraged. Each of our household items of expense demands a critical scrutiny.—Good Housekeeping.

Lemon Pie.

The juice of one lemon and its grated rind. Three well-beaten eggs; one cupful sugar, two and one-half cupfuls of hot water. Put together over the fire, and at the boiling point add two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch wet with a little cold water. Bake the crust, then add the filling. Frost with the white of two eggs.

A Toast.

Here's to to-day; the past is gone,
The future stands with beckoning hands,
And hold for us we know not what,
And tempts us on to newer lands.
To-day is ours. We know its worth;
It stands to us for all past deeds.
Here's to you hoping that to-day
Will answer to to-morrow's needs.

Quick Graham Bread.

Several of the town boards in Oklahoma are adopting ordinances requiring citizens to dig cyclone pits.

For the month of April just past there was forty-five per cent more building done in Cincinnati than there was during the same month in 1904.

Judge James Hargis, speaking of Messrs. Allen and Bronston, is reported as saying that he admires a man who is brave enough to do his duty. But why should it require bravery on the part of a Commonwealth's Attorney to prosecute Judge Hargis, if Judge Hargis has been guilty of nothing more than doing his duty?—C.-J.

More tobacco this spring means less money next fall. Farmers do not seem to be considering this fact however as they are making preparations for the usual big crop. It is our opinion that no faith is to be placed in the published reports that a possible shortage in the supply of the trust is liable to send prices up. That is simply a bait for suckers. —Blue Grass Clipper.

The State Central Committee is to be commended for its excellent selection of a committee to wage a successful campaign for Democracy in the coming election. Judge Lassing, as chairman will bring into service, long experience in the forefront of the battle for Democracy's cause. He is a true and tried campaigner, cool headed and conservative and may be relied upon to make a vigorous and winning fight throughout the Commonwealth.—Kentucky Journal.

A large dealer in wool thinks that the future is assured at good prices for this year's fleece and says that the influence by limited supply, manufacturer's goods well sold up in this as well as in foreign countries, no serious strikes or labor trouble on hand, an excellent prospect for good crops, no financial stringency in sight or prosperity of the coming year diminishing. Thus, summing up the facts as they are before us, we can reasonably be assured of a continuance of high prices on wool for some time to come.

Hon. James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture, hopes to see the time when city-bred children will be as eager to go to the country to live, as country-bred young folks are now to crowd into the cities. He says that country district teachers write that "since the study of agriculture has received some attention in the schools, boys who were already possessed of the longing to turn their backs on country life are displaying the keenest kind of interest in agriculture and give promise of living useful lives away from the storm centers of humanity."

An expert in training horses says:

"Always select the gait you wish to go and make the horse take it; don't allow the horse to decide. Always go into the other gaits from the flat foot walk. Never let your horse rush away when first mounted, but instead start in a walk. Do not keep him constantly at one gait, but change quite often, otherwise he will soon become adapted to the one gait in which you ride, and practically lose the other gaits. For a trot, slacken the reins a trifle, and steadily take hold of the mane or touch the neck with the right hand, and at the same time rise slightly from the saddle, urging on the horse gently. If he makes a mistake, and mixes, pull him back to a walk at once, and repeat the maneuver. For the canter, slacken the reins, incline your body forward, raise your hand as if to salute, and cluck to the horse. When he starts, take sufficient hold of the reins to pull in his nose and make him arch his neck. Many highly trained horses will go into the center at the mere inclination of the body. For the rack or single foot, tighten the reins and give the bit a number of almost imperceptible jerks, at the same time urge him on with voice or whip, as he requires. If you feel him falter, or as if he was going to change into another gait, slightly shake the bit and urge him on. It is well to remember that this last gait is the hardest of all on the horse, for this reason he should not ordinarily be asked to go at this gait for more than a mile without change.

I was all run down from nervousness and overwork and had to resign my position and take a rest. I found that I was not gaining my strength and health as fast as I could wish, and as your Wine of Cardui was recommended as such a good medicine for the ills of our sex, I bought a bottle and began using it. I was satisfied with the results from the use of the first bottle, and took three more and then found I was restored to good health and strength and able to take up my work with renewed vigor. I consider it a fine tonic and excellent for worn-out, nervous condition, and am pleased to endorse it.

A. D. Beemon will sell all his household goods as home on the afternoon of Saturday May 27th.

Wool sold for 30 cents a pound in Paris, Bourborn county, last week, the highest price it had brought there in twenty-five years.

Weeds are coming on rapidly, and unless the weather is favorable for the next week or ten days they will give the farmers much trouble.

The farmer never knows when he is out of the woods as regards his crops. They have been given a considerable set back in the last week.

Some of the boys have been hunting squirrels several times recently, but they have not done much in the way of killing the frisky little animals.

Rev. Martin Crosley, of Indianapolis, will preach at the Burlington Universalist church next Sunday, May 21st, at 10:30 a. m. and 3:30 p. m.

The rain last Saturday caused considerable disappointment among the local base ball fans, who had been expecting to see a good game that afternoon.

Riley & Watts will receive wool at Burlington, Monday afternoon, May 21st; at Bullittsville, Tuesday morning, May 22, and at J. L. Riley's that afternoon.

Richard White, who lives a mile and a half out on the Bellevue pike, had a telephone put in his residence last week, and is now in touch with the outside world.

The public roads that follow creeks and branches are in a horrible condition. Some of them look like it will be impossible to put them in condition for use again.

It began raining this month like no water was to be wasted, but the boss got reckless and disposed of millions of gallons which it is feared will be badly needed later on.

MRS. T. B. ROUSE AND SONS.

The water was 10 feet deep in R. A. Brady's barn don on Middle creek, last Friday morning. Fortunately none of his horses were kept in the stable that night. The creek was never before known to reach the ground on which the building stands.

It is very trying on a man when he has labored hard early and late to get his corn planted in a first class manner, and about the time it begins to come up along comes a heavy rain and sweeps off both corn and soil. Many farmers had that experience last week.

Mr. T. D. Jackson, who lives just outside of Burlington town limits, was a heavy loser by the flood last Thursday night. His field of corn on the creek near his house was simply ruined. All the loose dirt to the depth the land was broken, was swept away.

Elmer Kirkpatrick declares that during the storm last Thursday afternoon lightning struck the tire of one of the hind wheels on the wagon which he was driving on the pike in the neighborhood of Florence. He says he was considerably shocked by the electric current.

Don't forget the ice cream and strawbery festival on the evening of the 31st inst. for the benefit of the Burlington brass band. The members of the band have been faithful in their practice work, and, so far, have received very little encouragement by the public. Give the boys a boost.

In Lexington sprinkling streets with water has been abandoned. Oil is the thing and is said to be cheaper than water. The oil is a heavy grade and comes from Bath county; it is heated to 160 degrees and mixed with water when better results are obtained at less expense than if the oil is used without this process.

At Georgetown Judge Stout gave some timely instructions to the grand jury, calling upon it to investigate those people who won't work and can't afford to be idle. A Clark county jury made a beginning along the same line at its recent session. There is no need for a man to remain idle if he really wants work.

They have not recovered entirely from their scare yet.

He and a partner have invested in another orange grove, and he had just finished a period of labor with a hoe. He says it was cool there last winter and that his health has been exceedingly good.

There are 30,982 rural routes in operation in this country. Illinois is first with 2,478 routes, Ohio second with 2,186, Iowa third with 2,068 and Indiana feurth with 1,934. The average deficit per route per month is $25, making the enormous total annual deficit, based on routes in operation May 1, of $9,294,600. Carrie Porter, aged 11, and little brother, George, aged 7, who live with the writer, saw, just before the storm burst upon this locality, late last Thursday afternoon, what they say was "a town in the air." They called Myrtle Strader, colored, to come and look at it, but just then the rain began to fall and the mirage disappeared. It appeared a little east of south and at no great height, and was seen from the porch on which the children were playing at the back of the writer's residence.

The boys to the number of about 25 or 30 went out to John O. Roberts', last Saturday night, and gave his son Elbert and wife an old time charivari. The groom made the crowd a nice little speech, after which delicious cake was passed around, and when the crowd dispersed each member of it was smoking a good cigar, and wishing Elbert and his wife a long and happy life.

The construction of a brick and cement vault for the grave of T. B. Rouse, deceased, was attended with many difficulties. The heavy rains filled the vault full of water and prevented the cement from setting very much to the annoyance of all concerned. The body was placed in the public vault in the cemetery where it was kept until the grave could be completed.

The duck, which had laid several eggs during the season, complained that while her working record was better than the hen's the latter had books and poems written in her honor, while no one has a word of praise for the duck. A wise old rooster near by said: "You lay an egg and wobble off without saying a word, while that sister of mine never lays one without letting everyone in the neighborhood know it. If you want to cut any ice around here you must advertise."

CARRIER RESCUES WOMAN.

He Had An Excited Passenger on His Wagon Through a Creek.

Newport, Ky., May 13.—With the water sweeping through Phillips creek with the speed of a millrace and the roadbed out of sight, Wm. A. Sprague, who carries the mail between Newport and Grant's Lick, had a frantic struggle with an aged woman who insisted upon jumping out of his wagon in an effort to reach the shore. He had to hold to the dashboard while he stepped into the stream and, putting the woman on his shoulders, he struggled to shore through water up to his chin.

The horse balked in the middle of the stream and he had difficulty in keeping the light wagon from being overturned.

While he was attempting to pacify his passenger the mail sack was swept from the wagon and went hurling down stream. He induced a farmer to watch his passenger and went in search of it.

He found it lodged against a tree that had been uprooted and had to swim for it. The letters were soaked and it was difficult to decipher some of them.

A POSSE AFTER HIM.

William Shigle Shot and Killed Henry Murmer, a Farmer.

Owensboro, Ky., May 12.—A posse is scouring the woods with bloodhounds in this county for William Shigle, who killed Henry Murmer at the latter's farm. Murmer was plowing when the man emptied the contents of a shotgun into his body. The men disagreed over some work. The coroner's verdict was murder in the first degree. Much excitement prevails in the neighborhood over the tragedy.

Ike Rhea fired two shots at his wife in an effort to end her life. Both bullets went wild, but the woman's face is powder burned. She had recently sued for divorce, asking for alimony in the sum of $3,000. She alleges he is heir to $12,000 from the Ogden estate at Lynchburg, Va., and asks for an attachment on $3,000 of this bequeathment.

REVENUE AS THE QUESTION

Indications Are That Expenses Are Going to Swell and So Is the Deficit.

For the ten months of the fiscal year ending with April, the treasury deficit is, in round numbers, $34,000,000, the month of April showing a deficit of $9,211,418. Six out of the ten months have shown unfavorable balances, while one of the other months, March, showed a favorable balance of only $372,000. We do not wonder that the treasury officials are somewhat annoyed at the persistence of the deficit, or that the standpatters are anxious. It is true, says the Indianapolis News (ind.), that Secretary Shaw, in his estimate of last year, anticipated a deficit, but he thought that it would not be in excess of $18,000,000. It is already $34,000,000. However, it is expected that May and June will show substantial surpluses, and that the shortage for the year will not be greatly in excess of the estimate.

But the interesting fact is that with receipts thus far almost precisely what they were last year, we should still have this bad showing. There has been a slight falling off in customs and internal revenue, but an increase in miscellaneous receipts. Yet for the first ten months of last year, on a smaller revenue there was an excess of receipts over expenditures of something like $2,000,000. Of course, this means an increase in expenditures of $36,000,000. The expenditures this year are $485,000,000 against $449,000,000 last year. There has been an increase of $10,000,000 for war, $15,000,000 for navy and $8,000,000 for civil and miscellaneous. This is the feature of the situation that is most embarrassing. The deficit may be greater or smaller, but there is a deficit. The one for next year will be at least twice as large as that for this year, and still we go on spending money in what seems to be a rather reckless way.

The record is not pretty, especially when it is remembered how dreadful we all thought the "Cleveland deficits" were. But we had a deficit last year—though, of course, the Panama canal payment figured in that—we are to have one this year, and we are to have another one next year. It looks very much as though a tendency had been established. It is to be borne in mind, further, that there has been no tampering of late with our revenue laws; that the present tariff has been in effect for almost eight years; that the country has been amazingly prosperous, and that we have been at peace for at least five years. It seems to us that it is time that our republican friends were beginning to realize that something must be done before long. The simple fact is that we are not raising enough money. We say that because we see no possibility of curtailing expenses. Never was there a time in the history of the government when economy was less popular than it is now. We are apparently committed to the policy of a big navy and army, and the government is branching out in many fields of activity. If Mr. Bryan has his way it will branch out still further. But even limited as it is at present, we see how expenses swell. They are going to swell still more—and so is the deficit. And all this under "the best tariff" we ever had, and while the government is under the control of a party whose boast it is that it never makes deficits.

Clearly we shall have to raise more money. This will mean new and higher taxes or else a great deal less protection. Neither alternative can be accepted without embarrassment. For to increase taxes in time of peace will not be a popular move. And we know how exceedingly difficult it is to reduce protective taxes. But something will have to be done. We commend the subject to those republicans who think that the standpatters are somewhat overzealous in their devotion to the protective idea. The president, we feel sure, would be glad to do something. But can he?

LOOKING UP IN ILLINOIS.

Dissatisfaction with Arrogant Republican Leaders Favors Democracy.

Democratic prospects in Illinois are improving to such an extent that a victory in the next election, when a new house of representatives and a majority of the senate will be selected and a United States senator afterwards named, seems entirely probable, says the St. Louis Republic.

Mayor Dunne's overcoming of the tremendous Roosevelt plurality in Chicago is the biggest sign of the radical sweep of sentiment toward democracy. Throughout the state profound dissatisfaction exists toward the republican majority in the legislature, and a decided antipathy toward the long-laid scheme, born out of the celebrated gubernatorial deadlock, to put an "old line" machine senator at Washington. The deliberateness and self-assurance of the republican gang leaders, which have caused revolt among even staid republican voters, contribute further to the state's palpable charge of heart—there are few bolder and more arrogant gangs anywhere in control of the g. o. p.'s machinery.

SECRETARY SHAW'S VIEWS.

The Treasury Deficit Can Be Speedily Turned Into a Surplus.

Originally the secretary of the treasury estimated the deficit for the current fiscal year, of which but two months remain, at $18,000,000, and later it was argued that there might be no deficit. Latterly now held that the deficiency will considerably exceed the original estimate. At this moment it amounts to about $30,000,000, as against a surplus of $2,000,000 at the corresponding time of the previous fiscal year.

Secretary Shaw thinks, states the Chicago Record-Herald, that the final balance sheet for the twelvemonth will show a deficit of about $25,000,000, and the difference between that figure and his first estimate he regards as of small moment. Several millions may be a tremendous amount to an individual, he says, but to a great and prosperous nation it is not nearly so awe-inspiring to read that the treasury will be worse off by that amount. This is perfectly true, but even a great nation will inevitably stop to inquire into the causes of a growing deficit and the proper way of arresting that tendency.

Now there has been no falling off in the government's receipts as compared with last year's record up to date. The deficit is due to a substantial increase in expenditures, the increase amounting to about $35,000,000, again as compared with last year. Unusual demands for naval deficiencies—which, thanks to a new provision of law, cannot be repeated next year—account for no small part of the increase.

Secretary Shaw cheerfully remarks that congress "can turn the deficit into a surplus whenever it pleases." Undoubtedly; but the problem of adding to the revenue without readjusting the tariff schedules that are no longer needed for protective purposes will not seem an easy one to congress. The confirmed stand-patters will resist readjustment, while consumers will object to new taxes.

Already we hear from various quarters that the deficit must not be allowed to serve as an argument for tariff revision. An increased tax on beer, a tax on coffee imported from foreign countries (some comes to us from our island possessions), a duty on beer and what not has been proposed, though it is understood that a majority of the senate finance committee favor tariff readjustment. That committee, by the way, is to study the revenue question during this recess.

It is highly probable that tariff revision as a means of enlarging the government's revenues will be a live subject in the next congress.

DEFICIT IN THE TREASURY.

Present High Schedules Instrumental in Cutting Down Government Income.

On the closing day of the last session of congress Senator Allison had some agreeably reassuring words to offer as to the state of the nation's finances. Admitting that the appropriations for the next fiscal year, aggregating in round numbers $818,000,000, were considerably in excess of those of the previous year, says the Chicago News, he asserted that there was no cause for apprehending a serious deficit. It is true that the estimated revenues for the next year are only $726,000,000, but on the theory that certain appropriations, amounting in all to about $87,000,000, are not really a charge upon the revenues, Senator Allison computed that the government's expenditures would be less than its income, leaving a surplus of a few million dollars.

As not infrequently happens in such cases, it now becomes evident that Senator Allison's calculations which looked so well on paper are not being borne out by the facts. Yesterday's dispatches from Washington report that a deficit of $35,000,000 is already practically assured and that in spite of the economies practiced by congress it is growing daily.

Now that they are confronted with the problem of an almost certain deficit the question what the leaders of the congressional majority propose to do about it promises to be one of the most interesting that will be raised at the next session of congress. In spite of all efforts at economy government expenditures continue to grow rapidly and even if there is no further increase they are already in excess of the revenues. A way of meeting this increased outlay must be found and unless the government is to meet it by seeking other receipts from the internal revenues it apparently must take the action which some republican leaders already admit to be necessary on the tariff. A proposition to reduce the tariff with a view to increasing importations and thus bringing in more revenue is likely to be one of the questions most debated at the next session. That the present high schedules are positively instrumental in cutting down the government's income would be a painful admission for the stand-patters of the republican party to make, but judging from present indications they may soon have no other alternative.

THE HABITUAL EXPRESSION.

Questions Which Many Persons in Exalted Business Positions Should Ask Themselves.

What kind of an expression do you wear habitually? asks Orison Swett Marden, in Success Magazine. Is it sour, morose, repellent? Is it a mean, stingy, contemptible, uncharitable, intolerant expression? Do you wear the expression of a bulldog, a growling, greedy, hungry expression, which indicates an avaricious nature? Do you go about among employes with a thundercloud expression, with a melancholy, despondent, hopeless look on your face, or do you wear the sunshine expression which radiates good cheer and hope, which indicates a feeling of good will and of helpfulness? Do people smile and look happier when you approach them, or do they shrink from you, and feel a chilly goose-flesh sensation come over them as they see you approach?

It makes all the difference in the world to you and to those whom you influence what kind of an expression you wear.

PAINFUL SCIATICA

EVERY SUFFERER WANTS THE VERY QUICKEST CURE.

Mr. Donovan Thinks the Remedy Used by Him with Such Remarkable Success the Best—Cured by Five Boxes.

"Men who have to do difficult and dangerous work on electric lines at any hour of day or night, can't afford to have anything the matter with their health," said Mr. Donovan. "You can imagine, therefore, how much I was alarmed one winter's day in 1902, when I was seized by a pain just behind my right hip that made it difficult for me to walk home. It was so bad by the time I reached the house that I was obliged to go straight to bed."

"Did that relieve you?"

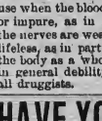
"No, the pain grew more severe and kept extending downward along my leg. I sent for a physician, and he soon decided that I had sciatica. In a few days the whole nerve was affected, and the least movement brought on terrible agony."

"Did your condition improve under the doctor's treatment?"

"Quite the contrary. At the end of two months I wasn't a bit better, and at times I feared that I would never be able to leave my bed."

"How did you get out again?"

"When I was lying in bed, unable to move and wasting away in flesh, a friend visited me and told me about the wonderful cures brought about by a great blood and nerve remedy, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. He strongly urged me to try them, and I luckily had sense enough to take his advice."



"Did you mend quickly?"

"Yes, that was the astonishing thing. I noticed a slight improvement before I had quite finished the first box of the pills, I could get out of bed while I was on the third box, and I was entirely cured by the time I had taken five boxes."

Mr. Joseph A. Donovan is living at Plaistow, New Hampshire, and is line inspector for the Haverhill, Newton and Plaistow Electric Street Railway. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the remedy to use when the blood is thin, as in anæmia; or impure, as in rheumatism; or when the nerves are weak, as in neuralgia; or lifeless, as in partial paralysis; or when the body as a whole is ill-nourished, as in general debility. They are sold by all druggists.

RIGHT LIVING MEANS HEALTH, ENERGY AND A CLEAR BRAIN.
EGG-O-SEE IS A FOOD ESPECIALLY ADAPTED TO PEOPLE LIVING IN THE SMALLER TOWNS AND COUNTRY DISTRICTS, BECAUSE OF THE ABUNDANCE OF RICH CREAM AT HAND.

The modern tendency is to take less medicine and pay more attention to the selection of proper food. All physicians and food experts agree that the whole wheat grain properly cooked is the most healthful and nourishing form of food known. Common flour loses one of the essential elements of right food. Other cereals heat blood and are indigestible. EGG-O-SEE is the ideal whole wheat food. It is scientifically steam cooked in air-tight sanitary ovens, and its preparation returns all the elements of wheat necessary for health and strength.

EGG-O-SEE is not only healthful, but it is the daintiest and best flavored of all flaked wheat foods. It will please the discriminating taste.

There is only one way to know the real merits of EGG-O-SEE, and that is to eat it.

Dwelling in Tents of Wickedness

(Copyright, 1900, by J. M. Elson.)

Scripture Authority:—"For that righteous man (Lot) dwelling among them (the inhabitants of Sodom), in seeing and hearing, vexed his righteous soul from day to day with their unlawful deeds."—II. Peter 2:8.

NE of the enigmas of life is the person who at heart is a child of God and yet is content to dwell apart from Him in the midst of wickedness. And one of the marvelous evidences of God's grace and mercy and love is the way in which God deals with such wayward souls.

Judged by the company which he kept, Lot was an unregenerate and godless sinner. But in the light of the declaration of God's Word, it is certain that the germ of truth was in his heart, and that he was a child of God, notwithstanding his waywardness and his love of the world and the things of the world.

What were the steps which led Lot into Sodom? What was his life there? What kept him there?

A wedding in Sodom. The household of Lot is all hustle and excitement in preparation for the festival occasion, for the eldest daughter of the family, a handsome woman of some 20 years, is to marry the king's son.

The ambitious mother is elated over the splendid alliance. But Lot, although flattered by the distinction and prestige which the marriage into the royal family will bring, has strange misgivings in his own heart, which he cannot understand or explain. And this undefinable uneasiness has not been lessened in any degree by the message which he received that morning from Abraham in answer to the invitation he had sent several days before, urging his uncle and aunt to attend the wedding.

"We may not come to thee in that place, as thou knowest," was Abraham's message, "but thou and thy family may come to us, and it were better so."

While a feeling of resentment arose in his heart over the terse and pointed message, still he understood its import, but turning blindly from the warning he sought to justify himself and his family in the course they were pursuing.

To Mrs. Lot, the suggestion of Abraham seemed so ridiculous that there was no room for anger.

"Leave this beautiful and gay city with all its comforts and pleasures, and brilliant prospects? Ha, ha, ha!" She laughed, derisively. And then in a commiserating voice, and with a doleful look on her face, she continued: "The simple old grannies, what can they find worth living for, anyway? If they could only get a taste of life here they never would want to go back to their lonely valleys and flocks again!"

The entrance of some of the servants interrupted further conversation, and the preparations for the wedding went on apace, while Lot withdrew to his post of duty at the city's gate, a place to which he had been appointed by the king after his return to Sodom following his rescue by Abraham.

It is a gala day in the city, and the people are making merry, in honor of the wedding of the prince on the morrow. In that wild abandon which always marks the festivities of those who are yielded to the purely sensual pleasures, the sports proceed.

A company of gaily-dressed courtiers pass. All are in high spirits, and the merry tinkle of the bells on the dresses of the dancing girls mingles with the snatches of wild song and the shouts of hilarious laughter. The party is on its way to the grove outside the city's gates, there to engage in reckless sport and revelry.

It was no new sight to Lot, but to-day he watched with increased interest the groups of pleasure seekers as they passed, for were not the festivities in honor of the prince who was to wed his daughter? He felt proud and flattered at the deferential nods and bows that were bestowed upon him as people passed. His neighbors and acquaintances counted him fortunate, for it was no slight honor that the prince of Sodom was to become his son-in-law. Many were the jovial words of greeting as people passed to offer congratulations.

"What is fairer than yon garden spot and, like the sun in his strength as he lavishes his wealth of light and warmth upon it?" asked a pompous, well-fed individual, after the bowings and greetings were over. He was one of the chief merchants of the city, and because of Lot's official position they came much in contact with each other, and hence were on more than friendly terms. As he propounded the above riddle he chuckled good-naturedly and slapped Lot familiarly on the back, and then, before Lot could respond to the complimentary allusion to his daughter and the prince, he continued in a patronizing sort of way:

"Why is the father of the bride not sharing in the festivities? All the city has given itself over to the merry-making! Why sit here when pleasures may be had? Come away to the grove with me!"

Lot sought to make excuse and avoid going, for he knew the excesses of the sports and revelry, and was loath to share in them. Although a dweller in Sodom, and a willing partaker of the luxury and ease and certain of its pleasures, be it said for Lot that he held himself apart from the grosser sins and frivolities of the Sodomites. Such wickedness was repulsive to his better nature, and his conscience was troubled at times, but no word of condemnation was spoken. He feared to denounce the sins of the place. Better be on good terms of friendship with the people, he thought, than gain their enmity by preaching.

But the more Lot demurred, the more determined seemed his friend that he should go with him, and at last Lot consented.

Wild was the fun, long was the feasting and deep was the drinking, and now the dancing girls began their sinuous, sensuous dancing, while the coarse, profane jesting of the young men and their boisterous laughter filled the air.

Lot, inflamed by the wine, and half insensible to the revolting scene before him, followed the movements of the dancers. Something familiar in the form and face of one of the damsels caught his eye as she flitted past. The next instant she was lost to view in the maze of the dance, but that glance was enough. He had seen his daughter! He was sober in an instant, and a revulsion of feeling overcame him. In confusion and shame he withdrew, unobserved by his friend and the rest of the gay company, and returned to the city.

Who can know the troubled thoughts that filled that father's heart? Who can understand the remorse he felt as he began to realize that the wickedness of Sodom was laying its cursed hand upon his home? Only those who have seen their loved ones going headlong into the pit of hell, and have realized that they have opened the way of temptation to them. He had prided himself on his own virtues, and he had flattered himself that he could dwell in Sodom and keep his family from its corrupting influences, but he was only beginning to learn that day what fearful cost he was paying for its fleeting riches, honor and power.

Adah, the daughter whom Lot had seen in the giddy whirl of the sensuous dance, did not return home that night, and the next morning the household was thrown into consternation, and the servants dispatched in search of her.

The older sister, the bride-to-be, was impatient over the difficulty, and petulantly exclaimed that she supposed it would spoil the plans of the day. The mother, who was thoroughly given up to the gay life of the city, and who had encouraged her daughter in her reckless freedom, dismissed the whole matter with a careless shake of her head, and the remark: "Oh, she is all right and will come home when she gets ready." The younger girls, filled with happy anticipations of the gay festivities of the day, wondered how she could stay away and miss such a rare good time. But Lot, with uneasy conscience and anxious forebodings filling his heart, waited.

The pomp and ceremony are over, the feasting ended, and the bridal procession is forming for the triumphal return to the palace. The waiting crowds in gay dress and gayer spirits shower flowers in the pathway of the bridal couple as they appear, and with music and dancing and much merry-talking and laughter the procession moves forward.

Lot and his wife watch the brilliant scene, and the mother, in the ecstasy of her pride and joy, waves her goodbys and exclaims to Lot:

"This is a proud day for us! How glad we should be that we came to Sodom!"

Scarcely had her words died away when there appeared, coming down the street past the gay procession, a silent group bearing some heavy burden between them. Their mantels are thrown over their heads, their garments are rent and there is dust sprinkled upon their heads, bearing silent witness that they are bearers of the dead.

"Look!" exclaimed Lot, "death appears amidst the gay scenes of life! Who can it be?"

"Oh, never mind! Why should we care?" petulantly replied Mrs. Lot in an unsympathetic tone. "It is a shame that they could not have taken some other route and not have passed the bridal procession."

The dead draws nearer. The still form under the blanket is before the door. Lot and his wife watch with growing tenseness. Curiosity gives place to apprehension!

The silent bearers pause! They turn in towards the house! They enter the doors, through which but a few minutes before the gay, brilliant company had passed!

"Adah!" shrieked the mother, as she threw herself by the side of the cold, [illegible]

"Adah!" groaned the unhappy father, for it was she.

The pleasures of Sodom, her triumphs and glory, giving place to death. One daughter wedded to the prince of Sodom. Yes, but one daughter a victim of the wickedness of Sodom! Ah! Lot, dwelling in the tents of wickedness does not pay! Ah! Christian, dwelling in the tents of wickedness does not pay! Flee, Lot, from Sodom! Take wife, children and goods and turn back to the promised land of God's presence and blessing.

Alone with his dead, Lot sorrows. Alone with his dead, his troubled conscience convicts him of wandering from God and living in sin. But it is not a sorrow unto repentance; it is not a heeding of warnings and a turning from the unclean thing. And so Lot buries his dead in Sodom, and lingers on, and the judgment day draws near. Well would it have been for him had he said: "I had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God, than dwell in the tents of wickedness."

As we contemplate Lot in Sodom, let us resolve, O Christians, that we will not dwell in tents of wickedness; that we "will not love the world, neither the things of the world."

BEAUTIFYING THE HOME.

Take Time to Study and Improve the Outer Aspect of Your Place —How to Do It.

Nature is ever ready to give lavishly for man to enjoy. She is more than willing to adorn our front yard with ornamental shrubs, trees and vines, to bedeck the [illegible] with grass and flowers if we will but aid her. The cottage may be very simple, but if the lawn is green and neat, the roses in bloom, or the flower beds sending forth their fragrance, it reveals to those who pass along the road, refinement, comfort and attractiveness.

As a rule, country home surroundings are sadly neglected, and this, perhaps, is due more to urgent field work, than simple neglect on the part of the farmer. Walk out onto your front yard some nice warm day, and make a careful study of your present landscape. Note the condition of your lawn. Are there not some bare places which need reseeding and some uneven spots that could be wonderfully improved by a little filling in with a load or two of dirt? Next, have you enough shade and ornamental trees and are they standing on their proper places? Here let me add by way of parenthesis, do not plant large growing trees directly in front of the house, so as to obstruct the view of the public highway, and don't plant trees too close together.

If your purse is limited, the next time you chance to go to the woods, take a good spade and put some wet straw in your wagon hax. Then dig up carefully, some well shaped medium sized native forest trees—such as elm, maple, box elder or even cottonwood, and bring them home. If you find nut bearing trees or mulberry, you will be very fortunate to add them to your list.

If these trees are carefully planted in their proper places on the lawn, along the driveway to the barn, the nut bearing trees in the back yard, the mulberry in the poultry yard, it will be the most satisfactory work that you have done for many a day.

A few shrubs planted each year will soon create a lovely landscape. A handsome bed of roses is a delight to all who chance to pass your way, and a small expenditure will procure them.

Make it a rule to spend a few hours of each week in your front yard. Keep the grass nicely clipped, the shrubs and roses well cultivated and the chickens and pigs in their respective places.—Orange Judd Farmer.

SILK IN FLOWER DESIGN.

The Old-Fashioned Patterns Loved of Our Grandmothers Are Now Being Displayed in the Stores.

Quaint, youthful, flowered silks, soft but dull in finish and scattered over with garlands, sprigs, single blossoms, wreaths, etc., offer charming possibilities for evening dress, and for women well past debutante time are more gorgeous brocades, wonderful in color and design and quality.

One of the newest and most exquisite of these silks has a creamy white ground and over its surface at about eight-inch intervals are inset baskets of cream lace, apparently woven in with the silk design. Falling from these lace baskets and scattered in riotous profusion over the silk are flowers in soft, vague colorings and slightly blurred outlines and the whole effect of the material is indescribably lovely, without being in any way conspicuous or loud.

Beautiful, too, are very soft lustrous silks in pale delicate shades, with single long-stemmed blossoms faintly outlined in silver thread at wide intervals over the surface. A very light rose pink silk, for example, has a design of single long-stemmed poppies delicately woven in silver, and a silk in the palest shade of Nile green bears silver water lilies. The note of silver is, by the way, peculiarly insistent in the season's modes.—N. Y. Sun.

HINTS TO HOUSEKEEPERS.

Raisins for fruit cake are much improved by cooking. Let them soak slowly and then simmer until the skin is tender.

In using flat-irons, if they are rubbed on a piece of brown paper with soap, and then a sprinkle of salt, they will be found to run easier and not stick.

If silver is washed every week in warm suds containing a tablespoonful of ammonia the polish can be preserved for a long time.

Chamois is one of the things which come out smooth and soft from washing if wrung directly from the suds without rinsing in clear water. The latter process tends to harden it.

No more soggy piecrust. Sprinkle the bottom and side crusts of the pie with finely grated breadcrumbs. They will not be noticed in the fruit and minces pies.

Spiced Cookies.

One cupful of molasses, the same of sugar, half a cupful of warm water, two-thirds of a cupful of butter or part drippings, one heaping teaspoonful of dissolved soda, one tablespoonful each of cloves, cinnamon and ginger; mix soft, roll thin and bake quickly in a well-heated oven.

Veal Timbales.

Coil boiled spaghetti around the inside of a small buttered mould so that the sides are covered. Fill with a coffee cupful of highly seasoned minced veal, held together with a teacupful of white sauce and four tablespoonfuls of bread crumbs. Bake in a slow oven half an hour.

For Burns.

For burns, linseed oil, glycerin and borax water, mixed together and freely applied, will be found efficacious. A dressing made of powdered borax moistened with cold water will prevent pain or inflammation.

On the Boston Subway.

Superintendent (to conductor)—This gentleman complains that you ordered him to step lively. What have you to say?

Conductor—Well, sir, you see, we were behind, and—

Superintendent—That makes no difference whatever, sir. You should have said: "Pedestrianate precipitately."—Puck.

Letters in Irish.

The Irish language has only 18 letters. Sometimes each letter is written separately and not jointed together. The chief difficulty in learning Irish is that there are innumerable abbreviations for words and phrases. The Irish language is nonphonetic, the words rarely being a key to the correct pronunciation.

Tramways in Mexico.

The street tramways of the City of Mexico, which began only a few years ago as a few independent mule lines, now form one electric system with modern equipment. There are 190 miles of lines and the service comprises 604 cars and 3,600 horse-power is required to work the system.

English Women in Spain.

Englishwomen are employed as clerks by some business houses in Spain. Some of them, able to correspond in English, French, German, Spanish and Dutch, have very comfortable positions, receiving a salary of £200, and having a month's holiday a year.

Pretty High Up.

The daughter of a wealthy Englishman has married her father's chauffeur. If a decent coachman is a better man than a worthless duke a good chauffeur ought to stack up pretty well in comparison with a chumpish prince.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Bitter Cry.

"Come, dear, get out of the draught. You'll catch cold."

"Well, if I do," replied the child, who had an older brother, "Jimmy'll take it away from me. He never lets me have anything."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Restrictive Lease.

A house lease produced in a Montreal court recently had a clause prohibiting the tenant from having relatives to visit him and also forbidding dancing. The judge refused to grant an ejectment for breach of such a contract.

And Watch.

"Fohgive you enemies as fur as you kin," said Uncle Eben. "But dat doesn' mean dat you is expected to lay youse'f wide open to mo' trouble at deir han's."—Washington Star.

West Indian Sugar Estate.

Trinidad has the largest sugar estate in the British West Indies, the Madeleine, with a capacity for crushing 17,000 tons of cane daily and producing 170 tons of sugar.

Ugly Buildings.

Edward M. Shepard, who lives in Brooklyn, says that part of Greater New York lying on Manhattan island is the ugliest hunch of houses in the world.

More Practical.

Motor boats on the canals at Venice will not be especially romantic, but they will be something of a hoon to the traveler in a hurry.—Boston Globe.

A Persian carpet has been in use two hundred years in the main hall of the shah's palace in Teheran.

MOTHERHOOD

Many women long for a child to bless their homes, but because of some debility or displacement of the female organs they are barren.

Preparation for healthy maternity is accomplished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound more successfully than by any other medicine, because it gives tone and strength to the entire female organism, curing all displacements, ulceration and inflammation.

A woman who is in good physical condition transmits to her children the blessings of a good constitution. Is not that an incentive to prepare for a healthy maternity?

If expectant mothers would fortify themselves with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which for thirty years has sustained thousands of women in this condition, there would be a great decrease in miscarriages, in suffering, and in disappointments at birth.

The following letters to Mrs. Pinkham demonstrate the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in such cases.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I was married for several years and no children blessed our home. The doctor said I had a complication of female troubles and I could not have any children unless I could be cured. For months I took his medicines, trying in vain for a cure, but at last my husband became disgusted and suggested that I try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; this I did, and I improved steadily in health, and in less than two years a beautiful child came to bless our home. Now we have something to live for, and all the credit is due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I was married for five years and gave birth to two premature children. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me, and I am so glad I took it, for it changed me from a weak, nervous woman to a strong, happy and healthy one within seven months. Within two years a lovely little girl was born, which is the pride and joy of our household. Every day I bless Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for the light, health and happiness it brought to our home."

If any woman thinks she is sterile, or has doubts about her ability to carry a child to a mature birth let her write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., whose advice is free to all expectant or would-be mothers. She has helped thousands of women through this anxious period.

Women suffering with irregular or painful menstruation, leucorrhœa, displacement, ulceration or inflammation of the womb, that bearing down feeling or ovarian trouble, backache, bloating or nervous prostration, should remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound holds the record for the greatest number of actual cures of woman's ills, and accept no substitute.

Many Women Have Been Benefited by Mrs. Pinkham's Advice and Medicine.

Your grocer is honest and—if he cares to do so—can tell you that he knows very little about the bulk coffee he sells you. How can he know, where it originally came from, how it was blended—or with what—or when roasted? If you buy your coffee loose by the pound, how can you expect purity and uniform quality?

LION COFFEE, the LEADER OF ALL PACKAGE COFFEES, is of necessity uniform in quality, strength and flavor. For OVER A QUARTER OF A CENTURY, LION COFFEE has been the standard coffee in millions of homes.

LION COFFEE is carefully packed at our factories, and until opened in your home, has no chance of being adulterated, or of coming in contact with dust, dirt, germs, or unclean hands.

There are about 185,000 steers and heifers sold out of Kentucky for the butcher every year. Of this number 45,000 are for export, 50,000 are second grade and go to the Eastern markets or Chicago, 60,000 are shipped into Kentucky to be fattened on distillery slop and then shipped East or West for the butcher. The average export steer weighs 1,400 pounds, the second class steer about 1,150 pounds and the majority of them consumed at home weigh from 800 pounds down the scale to the lightest weight that fits the gentle little heifer for the market. The average price paid for the cattle of all kinds bought and sold in Kentucky last year was 4 3-4 cents a lb., so that by a little figuring it will be seen that the cattle business in this State is no small industry.

Not in the recollection of the oldest inhabitant has there been such a down pour of rain in the same length of time that equaled that between 11 a. m., last Thursday and 6 a. m. the next day. For several hours beginning about 11 a. m. on Thursday the rain came down by the bucket full and put the water courses, both large and small, on the rampage, and when the rain ceased to fall and the sun came out about 3 p. m. everybody thought the down pour was remarkable for the large volume of water that had fallen, but when the clouds began to thicken in the west and a dark blue cloud, fringed with a feathery formation, skirted the western and northern horizons, about 4 p. m., it was evident that there was more to come. The cloud increased in savage appearance and the thunder was heavy and almost incessant. For some time it looked as though the storm would pass north, confining its furious actions to Indiana and Ohio, and the main part of the cloud had reached a point east of north, when the wind veered, and back it came in all its fury, the wind blowing a gale and the rain coming down in sheets. This storm lasted a considerable time, and when it ceased people were certain that the limit had been reached; but not so. Early Friday morning there was another terrible rain, that wrought more destruction to property than any that had preceded. The water courses were already carrying a large volume of water and soil, and the early morning's shower soon brought them to a stage they were never before known to reach. Plowed land was beaten down hard or washed badly, while water-gaps and fencing were carried away by the streams, the smallest branches being unsparing in their efforts at destruction—in fact it was a busy time for the water courses which afterwards made the farmers a busy set for several days repairing fencing and water-gaps. The wind did no serious damage, but the farmers of the county were damaged several thousand dollars by the water, in the loss of fencing, water-gaps and damage to the plowed ground.

Saved by Dynamite.

Sometimes, a flaming city is saved by dynamiting a space that the fire can't cross. Sometimes, a cough hangs on so long, you feel as if nothing but dynamite would cure it. Z. T. Gray, of Calhoun, Ga., writes: "My wife had a very aggravated cough, which kept her awake nights. Two physicians could not help her; so she took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which eased her cough, gave her sleep, and finally cured her." HEBRON.

WALTON-HAFER—Wednesday, May 17, 1905, Miss Anna Hafer, the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hafer, and Phelps Walton, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Walton, of Pt. Pleasant neighborhood, were united in the holy bonds of wedlock at the residence of the Rev. Slater, near Florence. After the ceremony the happy couple repaired to the home of the bride's parents, where only the immediate family and a few intimate friends of the bride and groom were assembled. The hospital home of Mr. and Mrs. Hafer was beautifully decorated for the occasion, and amidst bowers of roses and wreaths of ferns, the supper table was heavily laden with all the delicacies of the season, prepared in a most palatable manner under the supervision of Mrs. Hafer's excellent culinary training. The bride was gowned in white India silk and lace, while the groom was very gallant in the usual black. We congratulate Mr. Walton on securing one of our fairest and sweetest girls for a companion through life, for, personally, we have known her since childhood, and her bright, vivacious ways and sweetness of disposition have won for her many friends, who are pained by the thought of giving up so fair a flower, could hope to relinquish her to no one who could be more worthy than the man of her choice. Mr. Walton, while he is a very young man, is one of the most industrious and energetic to be found anywhere. Space forbids our mentioning the numerous presents. May God's sunshine ever bless and brighten their path way through life, and may that journey be strewn with roses, with smiles and gladness. May God give them many days, and may their whole lives be spotless and pure, giving beauty through all the changes, even when "The leaf has turned brown and the fruit has ripened." I. R. R.

Some of your patrons complain to us for not getting up more news from this place for your valuable paper. We will say, how do they expect us, in this place, 15 miles from a railroad, 20 miles from the city, millions of miles from heaven, about 2 miles from the devil, and only the river between us and a barrooom, how on earth they expect us to have news every week?

Those correspondents who write only when their sisters or cousins or aunts have a tea-party or when one in their set has something to pull, are not the ones an editor will seek to have admired. We advise Idlewild, Midway and Grant to take notice. "Mamma, if a child should be born on the ocean to what nation would it belong?" "Why, to the nation to which its father and mother belonged, of course!" "Well, I know. But suppose his father and mother were not with him. Suppose he was traveling with his aunt?"

The demand for telephones among the farmers seems to be increasing daily, for T. J. Hughes is kept busy now adding new phones to his system. Soon a farm house will not be considered up-to-date without a phone.

George Madin, who has been gone from here about 4 years, very agreeably surprised his folks a few days since, by putting in his appearance at home. The proverbial calf was killed and Mr. and Mrs. Madin rejoiced exceedingly. He has spent the most of his time in the Dakotas and Southern Canada.

We made an effort last week to send in a description of the storm and its destruction in this locality, but failed to make connections. The next day after our communication should have went in we found it lying on the ground near our mail box. We presume the wind had blown it off the box so the carrier failed to see it. According to reports from other correspondents, however, we must have fared much better in this section than in many places in the county, especially north of us. The damage here to plowed land and water gates was very considerable. Billie Vest and Charles Griffith are not in it a little bit comparing with the water manager when he gets down to business. He transferred more real estate on the 11th inst. in a few hours than they would have disposed of in as many years.

This neighborhood was shocked, last week, when the news reached here of the untimely death of James Cavey, at the city hospital in Cincinnati. Mr. Cavey was 50 years of age and lived all his life on Mud Lick creek near Hume, until about two years ago, when he, with his family, moved to Pagin street, Mt. Adams, where he has been employed by a house wrecking company. On the 15th inst., he was working under a wall 20 feet high, which crumbled without warning, and he was caught under an avalanche of brick. He was unconscious when taken out and was hurried to the hospital, where he died. He was an industrious, quiet, unassuming man, a kind husband and loving father. He had made many friends here, and they extend sympathy to the bereaved family. He leaves a wife and seven children, most of whom are grown. The remains were brought to Walton on Wednesday morning, where they were taken charge of by Edwards Bros. who conveyed them to the Catholic cemetery on Mud Lick, where the burial took place at 10 o'clock in the presence of a large crowd of relatives and friends.

EDWARD JOHNSON.

Newport Police Are Trying To Fasten Many Crimes Upon Him.

Newport, Ky., May 19.—Murders, cold-blooded assaults and many robberies are attributed by the Newport police to Edward Johnson, colored, now in the Newport jail on the technical charge of sending threatening letters to people in Covington and Newport. They also say he is suffering from a religious mania.

The police are trying to prove that Johnson and Henry Williams, who was hanged in Roanoke, Va., recently, robbed and then murdered an old woman near Chester, W. Va., on Thanksgiving day, 1899. A man was lynched for this crime.

That in September, 1900, near Uniontown, Pa., they robbed and killed two Italians and then threw their bodies into a coke oven.

That in October, 1901, they killed a man near Hyndman, Pa.

That in August, 1903, they murdered a woman near Portland, O., and hid her body in the bushes.

These and many other crimes touching assault and robbery are outlined in a letter that, it is thought, Johnson wrote as a confession to the chief of police of Chester, W. Va.

Until he "got religion" Johnson was known in Newport by the police as a bad man.

CRIGLER & CRIGLER.

They Lose Their Case in the Kentucky Court of Appeals.

Frankfort, Ky., May 19.—The court of appeals, by Judge Barker, affirmed the Laurel circuit court in the case of Robert L. and Jacob S. Crigler vs. the commonwealth. The actions involve seven indictments and fines for violation of the prohibition laws of Laurel county. The appellants are distillers in Scott county, having branch offices in Covington and Cincinnati. They shipped the whisky from Cincinnati and defended on the ground that the law is an interference with interstate commerce. The court holds that this plea was an evasion as the whisky was made in Kentucky and shipped to Cincinnati and back into the state to avoid the law.

The court is in a quandary as to how to protect the prisoners, as it is feared that they will be assassinated because of the prominent part they took in the state's behalf in recent feud trials here.

MURDERED AND ROBBED.

Saddle Blood Spattered and the Lawyer's Body Found in the Lane.

Glasgow, Ky., May 20.—News has reached here of the murder and robbery, near Burkesville, of James Skinner, one of the most prominent men in Cumberland county. Skinner had been in Burkesville since Monday engaged in taking depositions in a law suit between himself and E. G. Alexander, of Waterview, and took his horse from the livery stable and left town.

That was the last time he was seen alive. His body was found in a lane near the Cumberland pike, about a mile north of Burkesville. There was a bullet hole in his right temple and three in his breast. His watch, a bill case containing $2,000 in currency and a short sack of silver he had with him when he left town and a bundle of legal paper are gone. His rain coat was buttoned up closely around him, and his hat was on his face.

Near by was his horse and blood on both sides of the saddle leads to the belief that the shooting was done elsewhere, and the body placed on the horse and carried to the spot where it was found.

Two white men are under suspicion, and are being closely watched.

CHANCE FOR PRESIDENT.

With the return of the president after his invigorating experiences in the west, the country hopes to see in him the champion of the reforms for which he stands. Interest revives in his antagonism to certain of the political and monopolistic powers. The people would like to see him renew his demands for reform legislation at the hands of congress, says the St. Louis Republic.

Whether Mr. Roosevelt takes the stump or not in favor of tariff revision, general trust regulation, or rate restriction, he should make open demands upon his party in congress for the more or less radical laws which he outlined in his last message.

To the extent that he has gone in recommending tariff modification, reciprocity, regulation of trusts and the empowering of the federal authorities to supervise rate-fixing, the people of the country are with him—democrats as well as republicans—for these policies are pro tanto democratic. Particularly are the people with him on the revision issue.

Tariff revision is the biggest issue of the lot. The country realizes that the Dingley schedules are the main roots of monopoly's iniquity, that they place certain privileged interests in a position to both mulct the consumer and cut competition's throat, that they enable the pet trusts to charge the people at home for their opportunity abroad, and invite the damage of retaliation upon general trade by foreign nations. Mr. Roosevelt has not cut a straight or consistent course upon this question, but the public have faith that he only "subordinated" the revision matter for the time being, and hope that he will revive the issue before it is buried too long. The country has had ample time to consider and is convinced of the wrong and the injury worked by excessive "protective" schedules, and is virtually a unit in desiring revision. The whole country is offended at congress' failure to provide the reciprocal treaties which it considered in the last session. Germany's announced purpose to inflict retaliation on American trade has provoked wide apprehension. All things considered, the condition of the public mind is highly favorable to a vigorous propounding of the tariff issue, and, should the president urge it, conditions in congress and in his own party would be more than ordinarily auspicious. The republicans in the house would likely override senate influence and stand with the democrats, while in the senate itself a valiant fight would be made, with the alternative of a party split hanging over the standpatters' heads.

The rate restriction issue appears to be lost at this stage, and unless Mr. Roosevelt can bring tremendous pressure to bear or the senate its obstinacy will undoubtedly prevail. It was for this rate measure that he allowed the tariff question to be 'subordinated.' Many people discredited the wisdom of his so doing, believing that he would have had much stronger political and popular support behind it than behind his rate proposals. Assuming the rate issue to be lost, the necessity for keeping down the tariff issue no longer exists. The excuse is gone. Mr. Roosevelt would have nothing to lose by bringing it up.

Unless Mr. Roosevelt accomplishes something along revision lines, he will have broken the greatest promise of his public life. What is more to the point—he will have missed what is probably the biggest opportunity of his career to make his mark as a statesman.

The latter opportunity is tremendous. Congress as now constituted is a big democratic argument. Congress has done nothing but make capital for the democrats of 1908. Especially its conduct as to rate restriction will be held up as evidence of bad party character and controlling motive. A total failure of rate legislation will be a bad political business, to say the least.

A failure to respond to a heroic demand by the president for tariff reform would be absolutely fatal in 1908. There can be no question about it. The merest tyro in national affairs can foresee that truth. If Mr. Roosevelt will heroically thrust forward this issue upon which the entire country's mind is made up he will force the senate to his will. The threat of a divided party and of defeat in 1908 will drive men to do his bidding. There could be no more powerful arguments.

Upon no other issue or demand could such force be brought. No other issue is of the kind that turns voters. This one is a first consideration. Its failure would make millions of democrats. Its success would make a great leader of Mr. Roosevelt.

——W. E. Curtis, in the Chicago Record-Herald (ind.), points a tariff lesson neatly with these figures: "During the fiscal year of 1904 the imports of sugar amounted to 4,114,924,525 pounds, valued at $83,687,844, upon which the people of the United States were compelled to pay a tax of $57,780,729 for the protection of the Louisiana planters and the beet sugar growers, who did not come within 4,000,000,000 pounds of supplying the demands of our consumers."

——Mr. Garfield is examining a set of Standard Oil books for the purpose of ascertaining the net cost of refined oil. But has he "the" set of books?

——Great is the tariff and the high priests thereof! The treasury department has just decided that dead rabbits are venison. Think of grown men doing a thing like that!—Indianapolis News (rep.).

——Just to give him a chance to add to his list of accomplishments, Mr. Cortelyou might be made secretary of war while Gen. Taft is away on his Philippine junk—trip, we mean—on official business.—Washington Post.

NEITHER SIDE IS GAINING.

Advocates of Reciprocity and Tariff Revision and Standpatters in a Mixup.

The New York produce exchange has sent to the state department a bitter protest against the discriminations to which American products will be subjected if the new German tariff is permitted to become operative, and expressing the hope that more equitable trade relations may be secured between the two countries. New England is clamoring for reciprocity with Canada, while other states are protesting against such a policy. The millers are striving to secure the admission under favorable conditions of Canadian wheat and the wheat growers of the west are up in arms. Boot and shoe manufacturers want the duty on hides from Argentina removed, and the cattlemen of the west, realizing the menace which would confront them if such a concession is made, are bending every energy toward warding it off. The Texas legislature has petitioned President Roosevelt to negotiate a reciprocity treaty with Mexico, whereby grain, cattle hogs and poultry can be more freely exported to that country, in return for which certain Mexican products would be admitted on more favorable terms than at present.

On every hand, says the Detroit Free Press, the forces seeking to compel reciprocity and a revision of the tariff are confronted by no less zealous defenders of the present policy, and the result is a merry mixup in which neither side appears to have any marked advantage. As a general proposition, there is no reason to fear that the country would suffer materially if it is decided to forego the revenue now derived from Canadian and Mexican imports, in return for the illimitable trade opportunities offered by these two nations. Quite the contrary appears to be the case, the United States having a marked advantage under such conditions. Better trade relations with other nations are likewise desirable if we are to maintain our position in the industrial and commercial world. American products, despite the existence of favorable treaties, are subjected to the most flagrant discrimination in Germany. In other lands our advantage is handicapped.

The advantage accruing to the nation as a whole from a revision of existing agreements and more equitable arrangements with other nations is apparent. However, any step in this direction would evoke a wail of protests from the interests who feared they might be affected by the proposed change. The steel manufacturer is willing that Canadian logs should be admitted free to the United States; the wheat grower has no objection to hides being exempted from duty; the cattleman fails to see where the barm lies in importing Manitoba wheat free of duty. When individual interests are threatened, however, the situation assumes an entirely different aspect. It is this fact that precludes the possibility of any immediate revision of rates. The time may come when the people will awake to the needs of the hour and progress will be possible. At present, reciprocity and tariff revision, like boils, alone are endurable when they afflict only the other fellow.

POLITICAL PRESS NOTES.

——Premier Balfour is silent on the fiscal question. So is Secretary Shaw. But Mme. Deficit has not lost her voice.—N. Y. World.

——A characteristic bit of protection logic is offered by the Atlanta Constitution (dem.): "Germany, next to England, is America's best customer. Of course, the stand-patters will be supremely indifferent to losing German's trade through their denial of a decent measure of tariff reciprocity."

——Secretary Shaw has ordered a drawback of duties on "bensoylsurfonic, anhydrous sodium salt of bensoylsulfanic imide manufactured wholly from ortholulosurfamide, and potassium permanganate." It's going to be hard to beat a man for the presidency when he knows things like that.—Tionesta (Pa.) Republican.

——There is one serious defect in the government's management of national banks. While it would be quite too great a stretch of paternalism for the government to guarantee the safety of depositors, there should be a greater number of bank inspectors. This has been frankly conceded by the comptroller of the currency, and has been undeniably true for years. So long as the government professes to inspect banks, it should do the work well.—Washington Post.

——Vice President Fairbanks is shrewd enough to know that the world is perceptibly tiring of war and war lords. "The nation which seeks an honorable settlement of differences with its neighbors in some other manner than by the sword," he told the International congress of railroad men, "is not decadent, it is not wanting in national virility." The reaction sure to come after Roosevelt, will find a good Indiana man ready and willing to take charge of it.—Albany Argus.

——The steel trust's net earnings for the first three months of the year were only $23,025,896, or a measly $10,000,000 more than for the corresponding quarter of last year. At that rate the concern will soon in the medicant class with the beef trust.—Washington Post.

The Coming Country.

The opportunity for the man of little means is probably better to-day in the prairie states of the Southwest than ever before in the history of the nation. The chance of pre-empting claims or of taking up lands under government laws is gone and will not return again. It is a different kind of opening which lies before the settler and its promise is of exceeding brightness. Its best opportunity is shown in the great Southwest where the transformation is going on and where the conditions of soil and climate are in harmony with the warm skies and temperate winds. To the man who is not satisfied with his condition, the Southwest has an inviting future.

Along the lines of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway there are vast areas of unimproved lands awaiting willing hands to make them yield the bountiful crops of which the land is capable. There is a need of stores, factories and new business of every description. It is the finest kind of an opportunity in the finest section of the United States. The Southwest is unexcelled for the variety and fertility of its soils—for its climate. Its people are progressive and up-to-date, its religious and educational facilities are as good as can be found elsewhere.

The M., K. & T. R'y has no lands for sale, but is interested in building up this productive country. It is believed that the Southwest has brighter prospects and offers better opportunities than any other section. Seeing is believing. For that reason the Southwest courts investigation of the conditions as they exist. Anyone desirous of learning more of the Southwest will do well to address George Morton, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Missouri, Kansas and Texas R'y, Box 911, St. Louis, Mo.

B. & O. R. R. Passenger Agent, Washington, D. C., Tells of Wonderful Cure of Eczema by Cuticura.

Mr. S. B. Hege, passenger agent of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad in washington, D. C., one of the well-known railroad men of the country, sends the following grateful letter in praise of the Cuticura Remedies:

"Thanks to the Cuticura Remedies, I am now rid of that fearful pest, weeping eczema, for the first time in three years. It first appeared on the back of my hand in the form of a little pimple, growing into several blotches, and then on my ears and ankles. They were exceedingly painful because of the itching and burning sensation, and always raw. After the first day's treatment with Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills, there was very little of the burning and itching, and the cure now seems to be complete. ANOTHER LIFE SAVED.

Mrs. G. W. Fooks, of Salisbury, Md., wife of G. W. Fooks, Sheriff of Wicomico County, says: "I suffered with kidney complaint for eight years. It came on me gradually. I felt tired and weak, was short of breath and was troubled with bloating after eating, and my limbs were badly swollen. One doctor told me it would finally turn to Bright's disease. I was laid up at one time for three weeks. I had not taken Doan's Kidney Pills more than three days when the distressing aching across my back disappeared, and I was soon entirely cured."

When buying loose coffee or anything your grocer happens to have in his bin, how do you know what you are getting? Some queer stories about coffee that is sold in bulk, could be told, if the people who handle it (grocers), cared to speak out.

For Those Who Died

By JENNIE E. T. DOWIE

"What' Memorial day for, anyway?"

Sam Silsbee stood in his corn field leaning upon his hoe, the morning sun shining upon his shriveled face and lighting up the red bandana which he wore loosely knotted about his throat. He spit out a spear of grass from his mouth and went on talking to Jason Elkins, who, also hoe in hand, was planting corn in an adjoining field.

"You know, Jason, just as well as I do, 't is all foledrol about soldiers a-dying for their country! They just happened to die. They was just after chasing the almighty dollar, and as Sim Stiles said when he enlisted, 'twas a good chance to go south and see the country and get paid for it into the bargain."

"Well," replied Jason, poking round with his hoe in the black earth, "no doubt there was some scallawags in the army, just as there is everywhere, but there was lots of brave fellows. I wish I could have gone; I have always felt streakied to think I didn't, though how to get away at the time, I couldn't see."

"And suppose they did die for their country," said Sam, "though I don't believe hide nor hair of it, but suppose they did, is that any reason why folks that are alive to-day should make fools of themselves a-banging and tooting with a drum and fife and a-scattering flowers on graves? 'Tis enough to make a horse laugh to see the men a-starting out a-marching and carrying all sorts of greens! And then the time that is lost! Did you ever try to figure it out? Well, I've kinder sorter kept a run of it in my head, and if folks would work the time they spend a-fooling 'round on Memorial day, even at small wages, I believe 'twould clear wipe out the national debt!"

"Yes—yes!" answered Jason, shaking his gray head, "no doubt all you say may be true. But, after all, there is something beside money to be thought of. Anyway, you can't complain that this town has spent much a-celebrating. We haven't never had a sign of a celebration!"

"Gracious goodness, I should hope not!" said Sam. "I have tried to scrape too close to get forehanded to have my money thrown away for nothing. My wife was bound to go up to my brother-in-law's in last year on Memorial day, you know it is quite a place where they live, and so to pacify her I went. You never see such fool nonsense! I stayed around till about ten o'clock in the forenoon and then I harnessed up and came home, for I couldn't stand it any longer! I thought I'd seen fools before, but I hadn't. What do you suppose—why they had wreaths made o' laurel, such as will p'sen sheep, and any old sort of trash like apple blossoms and such! And they put them on Rob Kendall's grave and sung some sort of a hymn [illegible]ess he had never heard a hymn before."

"True, true," said Jason, "there was some poor trash among the soldiers, but even Rob is remembered for his one brave act, and I don't see what hurt that can do! Nobody had set him up for wrong, but because he did a worthy action!"

"I'm thankful," said Sam, "that we haven't any soldiers' graves in our town. I suppose if we had, somebody would try to make a splurge!"

"They want to celebrate this year," replied Jason. "The young folks think we ought to do something, and then there is Jerry Long; I know he feels the way we do. He lost his arm as a soldier, and the town don't care enough about him to even have the church bell rung on Decoration day."

"Jerry Long," answered Sam, striking out viciously with his hoe, "Jerry Long was another fool. He went and enlisted. I remember all about it, and he's been a cripple to pay for it, and had to sneak out a living as he could, selling things in his little store. Suppose I had enlisted and come back with one arm; why I should have had as much right just as he has. Though I suppose his pension comes in handy, though I don't believe in pensions, 't is a waste of good money. How much will he give for celebrating? Not much, I reckon!"

"I think he would do more than his share," replied Jason. "A man that would go for a soldier would not shirk much in anything."

"Well," answered Sam, "if Jerry is so mortal anxious to have a celebration, let him go ahead. I'll give as much as he will give—say, I'll give twice as much!"

"Do you mean that, Sam?" asked Jason.

Sam hesitated, not expecting his words to be taken in dead earnest. But there was a sturdy as well as a stingy vein in Sam; beside, he reasoned that Jerry had nothing to give, so he finally replied, after considerable scratching of his head: "Yes, I mean it; I'll give twice as much for a celebration as Jerry Long will give!"

Jason emphatically nodded his head and went to planting corn as if his life depended upon his speed. Sam also resumed planting, chuckling to himself: "They can't say much against me now; I've got them sure."

Fancy Sam's astonishment, as evening approached, and he seated in the barnyard milking his best Devon cow, was visited by Jason, who remarked: "Well, Sam, Jerry has come up to the scratch; he's given me a check for $500!"

"I don't believe he's got $500," answered Sam; "he's a-fooling you!"

"No," replied Jason; "it is all right. He says he's always thought of leaving what little he's saved, to have some sort of a memorial to the soldiers, and he thinks now you will help, that he will give his money while he is alive, and see it spent according to his notion, which is to have a monument or hall, or something worth looking at. And he's going to save something back as a nest egg to keep up a perpetual yearly celebration in town, that is some sort of a proper notice of the day."

Sam got upon his feet, kicked the milking stool against the frisky Devon, who in turn kicked Sam, though without any greater injury to him than a skinned shank, and then turning to Jason, he said, with the air of a man accustomed to give away a thousand dollars every day: "I said I would do it, and I declare that I will, even if it breaks me!"

And do it he did. The effect of this giving upon Sam was marvelous. He had always been so close that he had never possessed the remotest idea of the pleasure which generosity could afford.

He not only gave the thousand dollars, but was first and foremost on every Decoration day to see that a proper celebration was carried out.

A handsome little library was built with the main part of the money, and Sam as well as Jerry looked close to see that everything was done in the best manner and with the best material.

"I don't spend a thousand dollars every day," Sam had said, "and when I do, I calculate to look after it."

This year in the town of Shirley on Decoration day there is to be an address in Memorial hall upon "Reminiscences of the Civil War," by Jerry Long, and remarks, "Concerning Cuba and Our Late Heroes," by Squire Sillsbee.

Sam, or Squire Sillsbee, as he is now called, has also been heard to say more than once, that when he is dead, he hopes somebody will remember to put a posy upon his grave.—Portland Transcript.

Love's Fragrant Offering.

Thin grow the ranks. Each veteran now
Has silver locks around his brow;
And slow and weary tread.
Dim are his eyes once keen and bright,
And frail his arm, that in the fight
Was strong where duty led.

Thin grow the ranks, but love shall keep
A tender watch where heroes sleep.
With fragrant flowers of May.
The lowly graves we strew.
Of those who were the union blue,
On this Memorial day.
—Ruth Raymond, in Ohio Farmer.

Memorial Day.

Children, bring your sweetest flowers!
North and south and east and west,
Bring the flowers you love the best,
Lay them where the soldiers rest.

Children, bring your sweetest flowers!
In memory of the brave,
Every noble man and brave
Who sleeps within a soldier's grave.
—Anna M. Pratt, in Youth's Companion.

MADE FISH-DISHES.

Scallop Fish for Second Appearance or Make Omelette with Suitable Accompanying Vegetables.

One of the simplest ways of using any fine fish for a second appearance is in the form of scalloped fish. Canned salmon or lake trout may be used in the same way. Remove all bones and skin, leaving the meat flakes. Make a white sauce in the usual way, using equal proportions of milk and water. Season highly with salt and white pepper. When perfectly smooth, moisten the fish with it, and arrange in a baking dish, first buttered and sprinkled with fine bread crumbs. Crumbs may be used in alternate layers, if a large dish is required. Cover with the crumbs, dot with butter, and brown quickly in a hot oven.

A remnant of fresh fish, even a very small portion, is available for an omelette. Pick it into flakes with a fork, moisten with a spoonful of fish sauce or a little melted butter, and add it to the omelette when partly cooked, folding it over to cover. With mashed potato, make small fish balls from cold fish. Or strips of fish may be rolled with a little bread stuffing in the center, baked in fish sauce and served with mashed potato. French cooks are careful to simmer all heads, bones and trimmings of fish to make the savory sauce which is used to the table with it, and which adds greatly to its enjoyment.

Tomatoes, onions, cucumbers and the whole tribe of chives, garlic, etc., are suitable for serving with fish. Cucumbers are considered especially fit with any choice fish. Pickled butter is made by chopping cucumber and mixing with it an equal quantity of soft butter. For parsley butter, brown a lump of butter of the size of an egg; stir with it half a cupful of sharp vinegar, and just before taking up, add a handful of finely-cut parsley. Cress and lemon are attractive garnishes that suit both eye and palate.

A substantial fish like bluefish or a thick cut of halibut makes an excellent hearty dish baked with tomatoes. Add a slight shaving of onion, and season highly. Arrange the fish with the tomatoes round it in a baking dish that can be sent to the table. Cover lightly with crumbs, dot with butter and bake. Either fresh or canned tomatoes may be used for this dish.

No class of food that comes to our tables gains more by expert cookery than this important, though often neglected one of fish. It is well worth while to make a little special effort to develop its full value.

THE CARE OF WEAK EYES.

Condition Depends on State of General Health and System Should Be Toned Up.

The strength of the eyes usually depends upon the strength of the body; if the body is weak and exhausted, the eyes will frequently display similar tendencies. In treating the eyes the general health must be considered, but when the general health is good and the eyes are simply weak, the first care must be to see that they are not overtaxed; then they should be bathed in salt water, fairly strong. Regularly used several times a day, a salt-water bath will wonderfully strengthen the muscles of the eyes. It acts as a tonic not only on the eye itself, but on the eyelids as well, and the action of warm salt water on lids prone to granulation, or to styes, is most marked and immediate.

The salt water may first be applied with a soft sponge; later, when the eyes are accustomed to the bath, they should be held open in a basin of the water for a few seconds at a time.

Obstinate cases of catarrh of the eyes, a frequent cause of eye weakness, owing to the tear-duct being blocked by the inflamed condition of the blood vessels which line the membrane of the nose, and prevent the eye-waters finding their natural channels, yield to this salt-water treatment, and the bath braces and tones the muscles.

People with weak eyes should have their rooms well darkened at night before retiring, thus giving the optic nerves all possible rest; sleeping in light rooms is sometimes the sole cause of weak eyes. Another necessity, if weak eyes are to be made strong, is never to read, sew or write with the light full in the face; the light should always come from over the shoulder or from the side.

Whether the eyes are weak or strong, one should never strain them by attempting to read or to do other work in a reclining position.—American Queen.

Resting at Noon.

Get into the practice of taking a rest at noon. Lie down, if it is only for ten minutes, or five minutes. If you cannot lie down, lean back in a chair and close your eyes. Do not think over what has happened. Do not plan what is going to happen. Just forget everything. Rest. Relax. Even if you do not sleep, rest.

This practice will make you live longer. It will make you healthier while you do live. It will probably make people want you to live longer. It will take the tangle out of your nerves, the irritability out of your temper, the wrinkles out of your face. It will make your eyes brighter, your face fuller. Try it.—Medical Talk.

When Washing Knives.

Never put the handles into the water, for the handle would be discolored and the blade loosened. Instead dip each blade into hot water with soda and dry it at once. Another method is to have a large tin or basin with a tin or wooden cover. In the cover slits are cut, through which the blades of the knives pass to the water while their handles rest on the top.

Queer Beauty Notions.

Painting the eyes and eyelids is considered a great aid to the fascination of the female orbs. A Circassian, to be really lovely, must, in addition to being corpulent, have golden hair and jet-black lashes. Kohl is used by the Persian and Armenian women to lengthen their eyes. The bazar women and nautch girls of most eastern countries dye their finger-nails with henna, and where they wish to show great ladies they allow their finger-nails to grow to an immense length, and keep them in finely-wrought gold sheaths.

Scientist's Feat.

Prof. Janssen, an octogenarian scientist, recently made some interesting researches on Mount Vesuvius. He climbed to the very brink of the great crater and extracted gases from its depths as if he had been drawing water from a deep well with a chain pitcher. His receptacles were sunk to a great depth, and then by an ingenious arrangement of valves were opened and closed after taking in gas.

Forestry in Commerce.

Forestry is becoming a valuable aid to those who need a large supply of lumber. A concern engaged in making pulp is about to undertake the experiment of importing young spruce trees with a view to transplanting and growing them in this country. It is beginning to dawn on commercial minds that it is quite as wise to provide for timber growth as to cut down everything in sight.—Troy Times.

Beginning of Trouble.

"When I get rich I shall proceed to enjoy life," said the sanguine person.

"Maybe you will," answered Mr. Cumrox. "But the chances are you'll have my experience. You'll find that you are up against a long programme of acquired tastes, such as olives, Roquefort cheese and Wagnerian music."—Washington Star.

A Practical View.

"And a good idea, too," chimed in practical Mr. Graball. "Then when a girl sent a fellow's letters back to him he could use 'em to build a doghouse or something."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Port of Genoa.

During the year 1904 the number of vessels entering the port of Genoa was 6,151, with an aggregate tonnage register of 6,018,256. Not one of these vessels carried the American flag, although the freight and passenger traffic between Genoa and the United States is considerable.

Liner Carried Only One Letter.

A curious result of the recent dislocation of the mail service between Australia and the United Kingdom is shown in the fact that the mail taken to Adelaide by the Orontes consisted of only one letter. That was registered.—London Daily Mail.

Jackstones in Greece.

According to ancient writers, the simple game of jackstones was played in Greece with the knucklebones of sheep. Aristophanes (444-388 B. C.) described it as a girls' game. It is popular in all parts of the world.

THE SIGN OF THE PATCH.

Its Location as an Index of the Habits of a Man Something to Go By.

Mrs. Murray had advertised for a skilled gardener to work by the day in her yard, and, somewhat to her embarrassment, she was obliged to choose between two applicants who appeared at the same moment. As she stood on her doorstep, questioning first one and then the other, relates Youth's Companion, she became aware that her mother-in-law, seated on the porch a short distance from the men and directly behind them, was frantically gesticulating.

The old lady, satisfied at last that she had attracted her daughter-in-law's attention, pointed unmistakably toward the less prepossessing of the two men; and the younger woman, supposing that her relative had some personal knowledge of the applicant, promptly engaged him.

"Has that man ever worked for you, mother?" asked Mrs. Murray, when the two women were alone.

"No," replied the old lady. "I never saw or heard of either of 'em until now."

"Then why in the world did you choose the shorter man? The other had a much better face."

"Face!" returned the old lady, briskly. "When you pick out a man to work in the garden you want to go by his overalls. If they're patched on the knees you want him. If the patch is on the seat, you don't."

Back at Work Again.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 22nd.—(Special)—Crippled by Kidney Disease till he could not stand on his feet for the hours required at his trade, F. R. McLean, 90 East Ferry St., this city, had to quit work entirely. Now he's back at work again and he does not hesitate to give the credit to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"Yes," Mr. McLean says, "I was too bad, I had to quit. I could not stand on my feet for the necessary hours. It was Kidney Disease I had, and a friend advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I did so and after using six boxes am completely cured and am working as steadily as before I was sick. I recommend Dodd's Pills to anyone afflicted with Kidney trouble."

There is no form of Kidney Disease Dodd's Kidney Pills will not cure. They always cure Bright's Disease, the most advanced and deadly stage of Kidney Disease.

INTERESTING LETTER

WRITTEN BY A NOTABLE WOMAN

Mrs. Sarah Kellogg of Denver, Color Bearer of the Woman's Relief Corps, Sends Thanks to Mrs. Pinkham.

Mrs. Sarah Kellogg

The following letter was written by Mrs. Kellogg, of 1626 Lincoln Ave., Denver, Colo., to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.:

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—For five years I was troubled with a tumor, which kept growing, causing me intense agony and great mental depression. I was unable to attend to my house work, and life became a burden to me. I was confined for days to my bed, lost my appetite, my courage and all hope.

"I could not bear to think of an operation, and in my distress I tried every remedy which I thought would be of any use to me, and reading of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to sick women decided to give it a trial. I felt so discouraged that I had little hope of recovery, and when I began to feel better, after the second week, thought it only meant temporary relief; but to my great surprise I found that I kept gaining, while the tumor lessened in size.

"The Compound continued to build up my general health and the tumor seemed to be absorbed, until, in seven months, the tumor was entirely gone and I a well woman. I am so thankful for my recovery that I ask you to publish my letter in newspapers, so other women may know of the wonderful curative powers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

When women are troubled with irregular or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, flatulence, general debility, indigestion and nervous prostration, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such trouble.

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Health is too valuable to risk in experiments with unknown and untried medicines or methods of treatment. Remember that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing women, and don't allow any druggist to sell you anything else in its place.

Is Teddy bidding for the Democratic nomination for the presidency next time?

By offering his resignation now but making it take effect in the fall, Secretary Morton has provided for himself a summer's amusement watching the maneuvers of the men who want the job.

An inkstand costing $500 has been ordered for Vice President Fairbanks. The Government will pay the bill. The inkstand will be used by Mr. Fairbanks during his official term and will then become his personal property.

What is known as the "Fraternal City" is to be established in New Mexico. It will cover 80,000 acres of land and will be used as a sanitarium for consumptives. It will be open to members of all fraternal organizations.

Several of the doctors of the county met at Dr. W. O. Rouse's in Burlington, one day last week, and organized the Boone County Medical Society. Dr. J. M. Grant, of Petersburg, was elected president; Dr. W. J. Weindel, of Petersburg, vicepresident; Dr. W. O. Rouse, of Burlington, secretary; Dr. Frank Sayre, of Hebron, treasurer. Drs. Hays and Hafer were present. Meetings monthly.

Failures of course must occur in any business when careful attention to details are not given. In horse breeding the largest thing to study are the demands of the market. Mr. G. M. Rommel, of the Department of Agriculture, says to stand at the horse auction market and note the horses that do not sell for prices to cover breeding and growing them. He says that the reason is that in a great majority of cases trotting blood predominates, if any breeding at all is noticeable. Ask the dealer what is the breeding, if any, of most of the large numbers of unclassified horses on the market, his answer will be: "Trotting and coach blood." This is not because trotting blood is more valuable, or that the blood of the light breeds is not wanted, for the great cry of the market at present is that good drivers and saddlers are extremely scarce. It is because performance and style are much more different to acquire in breeding than size and weight. The high-class roadster, coacher or saddler is by far the most difficult horse to produce that the market calls for. In addition to careful plans of breeding and high individual excellence in the resulting progeny, a course of handling, mannering and training must be pursued before the horse will figure as a really marketable animal. These facts must be thoroughly understood if a man would breed light horses for market.

President Roosevelt has flatly assumed all responsibility for the adoption and announcement of the cheapest market policy in the purchase of Panama Canal material, without preference to American goods and American bottoms. He has told all who talked with him on the subject that he had personally directed the action, and that no other course was open to him since the Government was bound to construct the canal with greatest possible economy. He also indicated quite plainly that he did not consider that a political principle was involved. If the party question was to be considered, where would the Administration land if it did not buy in the cheapest market, and should thus lay itself open to the charge of paying the highest prices to the trusts, not to say scandal and fraud? At any rate the question was up to Congress. That body had an opportunity to act once, and would have an opportunity to act again. But this frank assumption of responsibility has not quelled the conflagration within the lines of the Republican party. On the contrary the family row continues to grow. The criticism of the action is not entirely outside of the Cabinet. There has been some plain talk about "such a policy, if persisted in, disrupting the Republican party, at least making difficult the path of the next Republican candidate."

Representative John Dalzell, of Pennsylvania, is out in an interview, scoring the action in most emphatic terms. He calls it "free [illegible] right for gods and [illegible] that Congress had never intended [illegible] many specially

A statistical abstract of the growth of the United States for the year 1904 has been issued. According to the synopsis presented by the New York Commercial, it shows a remarkable growth during a single year. During the year, the population of the United States increased by 1,380,000. The estimated total for the entire given year of 1904 was 81,752,000. The amount of money in circulation increased by $151,450,691, a gain of upward of $2 per capita. The gain in gold circulation alone was more than $28,000,000. The interest bearing debt of the nation decreased by more than $19,000,000 and the interest payments decreased by more than $1,360,000. The total deposits in banks increased by $446,853,405 and the number of persons who deposited money in savings banks alone was 270,215 more in 1904 than in 1903. The imports decreased by about $34,000,000. The exports to foreign countries increased by more than $40,000,000. The total export of farm products amounted to $853,643,073. This was a decrease from the previous year.

Because the liver is neglected people suffer with constipation, biliousness, headaches and fevers. Colds attack the lungs and contagious diseases take hold of the system. It is safe to say that if the liver were always kept in proper working order, illness would be almost unknown.
Thedford's Black-Draught is so successful in curing such sickness because it is without a rival as a liver regulator. This great family medicine is not a strong and drastic drug, but a mild and healthful laxative that cures constipation and may be taken by a mere child without possible harm.
The healthful action on the liver cures biliousness. It has an invigorating effect on the kidneys. Because the liver and kidneys do not work regularly, the poisonous acids along with the waste from the bowels get back into the blood and virulent contagion results.
Timely treatment with Thedford's Black-Draught removes the dangers which lurk in constipation, liver and kidney troubles, and will positively forestall the inroads of Bright's disease, for which diseases in advanced stages there is no cure. Ask your dealer for a 25c. package of Thedford's Black-Draught.

He hastened home and with trembling voice told his wife of the terrible calamity with which he had been overtaken. Thinking that her husband was mistaken, she pursuaded him not to die until she could make a search for the missing teeth. While he suffered great bodily and mental distress the faithful wife began the hunt, which, in a short time, found the teeth where her husband had placed them. She lost no time in reporting her success to her husband who was nearing a collapse. Relief was instantur. Now don't ask the RECORDER'S friend, Jas. T. A curious plan for catching fish is used in the River Columbia. A number of wheels are set up in the middle of the stream, which, as they turn round, catch up the fish and cast them into troughs by the river banks. As much as five tons' weight of fish a day has thus been taken.

Over seven thousand miles of railroad will be constructed during 1905, the greatest mileage of new line since 1887. In the latter year, 12,983 miles were built, but that figure has not been approached since. The plans for the present year, according to a railway publication, provide for 9,332 miles, and it is estimated that more than 7,000 miles will be actually graded and the steel laid.

Take a map of the United States, and, with ruler and pencil, block out a rectangle, with the northern line parallel with Cleveland, the southern boundary passing through Cincinnati, the eastern border in the neighborhood of Harrisburg, Pa., and the other resting upon the western boundary of Ohio. Study it carefully, line by line. For that rectangle is the baseball belt—the country which now produces the great professional ball players—and from that circumscribed area every high-class baseball organization in the country now draws its chief supplies.

James H. Hyde, the storm-center of the Equitable fight, is reputed to have the most splendid stables in America. There is a special room devoted to the harness, spotless and shining as table silver. In a case are curbs, bits, bells, stirrups and whips. There are carved wooden cases, containing a veritable museum of old stirrups, postillion whips and hunting horns, and a great hall containing not less than 28 carriages. The stables are ruled over by Francois Guillot, a true Parisian, who served W. K. Vanderbilt for ten years. Mr. Hyde has an office in the stable handsomely furnished and equipped with telephones and electric bells.

A method has recently been invented of depositing a metal coating electrically on laces and other fine fabrics. The process is still kept a secret, but it turns out the most surprising results, in effect changing the tissues exposed into the daintiest fabrics of gold, silver or bronze. The utility of the metalized laces covers various fields; they serve for table ornamentation and for center pieces; architects use them in mural decorations; in applications on upholstery and for the bangings of panels in salons, boudoirs and rich dining halls.

A recent and most curious discovery made in connection with the study of radium is its peculiar property of destroying the poisonous effect of the venom of serpents. This was ascertained in France by Prof. C. Phisalix. He states that an exposure of from fifty to sixty hours to the rays of radium is sufficient to destroy the poisonous character of the poison of the viper, and the same is true of the poison of the cobra, which is interesting in view of the fact that the latter poison resists the action of heat much longer than any other.

In McMillan's woods, on the Gettysburg battlefield, where the left support of Pickett's charging column formed in the battle of July 3, 1863, Capt. Herman H. Mertz has found an interesting memento. It is a land turtle, apparently of great size, which for more than 40 years has carried around with it the name and company of a member of the United States signal corps. On the top of the well-worn shell is carved the American flag, waving over three turrets, the insignia of the engineer corps, and bears this inscription: "J. Lee, Co. B, U. S. E., 1862."

AN INDUSTRIAL WAR.

It is Feared the Teamsters Strike Will Spread.

Lumberman's Drivers and the Building Trades Unions May Become Involved in the Struggle—Both Sides Remain Firm.

Chicago, May 22.—Sunday brought no change in the attitude of either side to the labor controversy now in progress in Chicago and everything now points to an extension of the teamsters' strike to many other business houses during the week. The officials of the express companies whose refusal to reinstate any of their striking employes caused the collapse of the settlement of the trouble, still adhere to their determination not to give employment to any of their former employes, and the other firms involved in the difficulty declared that they would stand by the express companies in the fight. The teamsters' union has taken just as firm a stand as the employers and it was stated by President Shea that the union would never call off the strike until the express companies come to terms.

The first spread of the strike is expected to come when the lumbermen's association, employing 2,400 teamsters, issues an order to their men to make deliveries to all business houses regardless of whether they are involved in the strike or not.

In anticipation of such an order the teamsters met and voted to go on strike should any teamsters be discharged for refusing to obey the order of the association. With non-union drivers making deliveries for the lumbermen the trouble will undoubtedly spread to affiliated industries, as the union men employed on buildings will refuse to handle material delivered by non-union labor.

Diffident Customer—Beg pardon, sir, but are you the proprietor of this store? Masterful Man—No, sir; I am not the proprietor; I'm a floorwalker. Diffident Customer—I hope you'll pardon me; I assure you, I meant no offense.

Railroads and Progress.

In his testimony before the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce at Washington on May 4th, Prof. Hugo R. Meyer, of Chicago University, an expert on railroad management, made this statement:—

"Let us look at what might have happened if we had heeded the protests of the farmers of New York and Ohio and Pennsylvania (in the seventies when grain from the west began pouring to the Atlantic seaboard) and acted upon the doctrine which the Interstate Commerce Commission has enunciated time and again, that no man may be deprived of the advantages accruing to him by virtue of his geographical position. We could not have west of the Mississippi a population of millions of people who are prosperous and are great consumers. We never should have seen the years when we built 10,000 and 12,000 miles of railway, for there would have been no farmers west of the Mississippi River who could have used the land that would have been opened up by the building of those railways. And if we had not seen the years when we could build 10,000 and 12,000 miles of railway a year, we should not have today east of the Mississippi a steel and iron producing center which is at once the marvel and the despair of Europe, because we could not have built up a steel and iron industry if there had been no market for its product.

"We could not have in New England a great boot and shoe industry; we could not have in New England a great cotton milling industry; we could not have spread throughout New York and Pennsylvania and Ohio manufacturing industries of the most diversified kinds, because those industries would have no market among the farmers west of the Mississippi River.

"And while the progress of this country, while the development of the agricultural West of this country, did mean the impairment of the agricultural value east of the Mississippi River that ran up into hundreds of millions of dollars, it meant incidentally the building up of great manufacturing industries that added to the value of this land by thousands of millions of dollars. And, gentlemen, those things were not foreseen in the seventies. The statesmen and the public men of this country did not see what part the agricultural development of the West was going to play in the industrial development of the East. And you may read the decisions of the Interstate Commerce Commission from the first to the last, and what is one of the greatest characteristics of those decisions? The continued inability to see the question in this large way.

"The Interstate Commerce Commission never can see anything more than that the farm land of some farmer is decreasing in value, or that some man who has a flour mill with a production of 50 barrels a day is being crowded out. It never can see that the destruction or impairment of farm values in this place means the building up of farm values in that place, and that that shifting of values is a necessary incident to the industrial and manufacturing development of this country. And if we shall give to the Interstate Commerce Commission power to regulate rates, we shall no longed have our rates regulated on the statesmanlike basis on which they have been regulated in the past by the railway men, who really have been great statesmen, who really have been great builders of empires, who have had an imagination that rivals the imagination of the greatest poet and of the greatest inventor, and who have operated with a courage and daring of that rivals the courage and daring of the greatest military general. But we shall have our rates regulated by a body of civil servants, bureaucrats, whose besetting sin the world over is that they never can grasp a situation in a large way, and with the grasp of the statesman; that they never can see the fact that they are confronted with a small evil; that evil is relatively small, and that it cannot be corrected except by the creation of evils and abuses which are infinitely greater than the one that is to be corrected."

THE FAMOUS CAB TRAGEDY

DIED BY HIS OWN HAND, SHE SAYS

Graphic Description of Fatal Ride and Events Leading Up to It—Fell in Love on First Meeting — Celebrated Case Ends with Release of Show Girl.

New York.—Nan Patterson, the former show girl, has ended a long but extremely unpleasant engagement at the Tombs. While she had formerly been accustomed to gaily dancing in the chorus of light musical comedies, the role assigned her in this performance was that of star in a tragedy of life and death. The stage settings consisted of a stern court of justice and a gloomy prison, with the grim spectre of the gallows on every scene.

After having the limelight of the public press turned on her for almost a year, with hardly an intermission, the curtain has been rung down and she has retired.

"All the world's a stage," says Shakespeare, but few have played the part that has this young and comely girl—Nan Patterson.

Three Trials.

Charged with the murder of "Caesar" Young, the prominent race track habitue and bookmaker, she has finally been given her liberty, after three mistrials, the jury in the first trial having been discharged after one of the men had been taken sick, the other two juries not being able to reach an agreement.

This is no doubt the last of the famous case, and the question as to her guilt or innocence will probably never be decided by an earthly court of justice. If she is deserving of punishment it must come in the hereafter.

Many graphic descriptions of the tragedy and the events leading up to it have been printed since the death of Young, and they have varied greatly. Some told how she deliberately killed her companion in the cab that fatal morning; others how the shooting could not have been anything but accidental.

Justice Davie, who presided at the first two trials of Nan Patterson, at a dinner of an organization of lawyers the other evening, made the remarkable statement that he believed the girl was guilty, and that she lied throughout her whole case.

Miss Patterson has steadfastly proclaimed her innocence, and the following is her own story of the tragedy.

The Meeting.

"I met Caesar Young on the train going to California, in the latter part of July, 1902. I was an actress then, and had been with a 'Florodora' company in the early part of the season, and later with 'A Chinese Honeymoon.' Having received an offer to join a stock company in Los Angeles, Cal., I had resigned from the 'Chinese Honeymoon' and was on my way to take up the latter engagement.

"Caesar Young was also bound for the coast, to attend the tracks in California during the racing season. Our chance acquaintance ripened into warm friendship and then into love.

"I was a married woman then, having been married to Leon James Martin in 1898, in Baltimore, when I was only 16 years old. We had separated, however. I knew that Mr. Young was also married, for he told me so.

"As a result of my meeting with Caesar Young I did not go to Los Angeles, but remained in his company more or less during all of the racing season. It was at Caesar's suggestion that I sued my husband for divorce in order to obtain my freedom. I was divorced in San Francisco in May, 1903.

"I left the coast and came east for the first time in March of last year. I had been in New York only two weeks when Caesar telegraphed me to come back to San Francisco, and I went. My visit to the east made me acquainted with my sister Julia's husband, J. Morgan Smith, whom I had never met before, and gave me a chance to run down to my old home in Washington and see my father and mother.

"I went back to the coast and met Caesar at Los Angeles in the middle of April, the day the races closed there. We were together a few weeks, and then Caesar went to San Francisco—his wife had arrived there—and I followed. He went east from there, and I also did, but on different trains. We met by agreement at Chicago. Then we came east together, he going to New York and I to Washington.

"We corresponded regularly, each writing a letter every day."

Mrs. Young Learns of Nan.

May 1 Nan Patterson went to New York, and it was about this time that the wife of Young began to suspect his relations with the chorus girl. Young to prevent trouble promised his wife and relatives that he would not see her again, but up to about May 25 they were living as man and wife at a little hotel. From that date until June 2, she declares, they did not see each other, although he called up several times by telephone.

She then tells of how she had attended the races the following day at Young's request with her brother-in-law and sister. Young told her to meet him that evening, as he had something very important to tell her.

Denies Buying Revolver.

"We arrived at the hotel from the race track at seven o'clock. On the way home we stopped nowhere. We did not stop in any pawnshop. I was never in a pawnshop kept by a man of the name of Stern. I was never in any pawnshop in my life.

"That night we did not go near Sixth avenue. I was not present anywhere when a pistol was purchased, then or at any other time. As for this man Stern, I never saw him.

"All the time, from the moment I left the race track on June 3 till I got home, both Morgan Smith and his wife were with me."

Nan Meets Young.

It was about 11 o'clock when Young called her up and asked her to meet him: "I took the train, went to One Hundred and Fortieth street, and when I got to the bottom of the stairs I saw Mr. Young standing in front of a saloon on the corner.

"Mr. Young was talking to a man—I did not know who at the time—and as he saw me coming he nodded his head for me to keep on going and not to stop. I walked by them—didn't recognize them at all. I had not gone very far when Mr. Young came walking back of me and whistled. I knew the whistle. It was one he had used to attract my attention. The tune was: 'Tell Me, Pretty Maiden!'

"I started to walk faster—just playing. He ran up and grabbed hold of my arm and we walked up to the corner, then crossed the street and walked down to the next corner, back to One Hundred and Fortieth street.

"He explained to me who it was he had been talking to—it was Mr. Luce, his brother-in-law.

"We took a surface car down to Eighth avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street. Then we went into a saloon, as he said:

"'Let's go in here and sit down and have a talk.' He ordered a glass of beer for me, but would not let me drink it. He said:

"'I don't want to sit here. What will we do—take a drive?' And I says, 'All right.' We left there and went outside and got into a cab and drove for an hour or an hour and a half through Central park.

Young Plans Trip to Europe.

"While alone with Mr. Young in the saloon and in the cab, he said: 'Now, Nan, I will tell you what it was I had to say to you this afternoon. I must go away; I have been trying to plan and see how I could get out of it, but there is absolutely no way; the only thing for you to do is to come on after me; we are going on a slow steamer, and you must leave on a fast one, because I planned and planned and planned; besides, I told the folks I would go on a fishing trip and leave my wife with Harry Thatcher's wife. He is my chum in England. And on this supposed fishing trip I will meet you, and we can be together for three or four weeks. Now, will you do that?'

"I said I supposed I would. I did not give him any definite answer, but I did not want to go. Well, we talked about what we would do when we got over there, and one thing and another and finally returned to the saloon."

Young had arranged to meet Luce here and go home with him, so that his wife would not suspect that he had met Nan.

Young Drinks Heavily.

"While we sat there I guess Mr. Young had 15 or 20 drinks of straight whisky. I drank very little. He talked about the way he had been spending money, and when he had the money out of his pocket to pay for some of the drinks he counted off five $20 bills and he said: 'Here, put that with the rest of your money; put all that money somewhere so that Luce will know nothing about it. Don't for goodness' sake make any break and say you are coming over there. Because if Mrs. Young ever saw you again there would be trouble.'

"He would not let me put the money in my purse for fear that Luce would see it. He made me take all my money and put it in my stocking. Then I told him I was hungry, and he suggested going over to Luce's table and having something to eat. He was beginning to show the effects of his drinking. So the three of us had something to eat and Mr. Young and I drank some more—half-and-half it was. There was no quarreling there, however—the only thing he showed any anger about was when he thought I did not want to go over to Europe very much.

"When we left the hotel Mr. Young was very much in liquor. Mr. Luce went to get a cab. Mr. Young said: 'Now, you get in and drive up to One Hundred and Fortieth street with us and then drive down to the hotel.' I said, 'Why, I cannot do it. It is so late now Mrs. Smith will be worrying about me. I must get home. It is getting light. It is daybreak.' So that made him very angry because I would not drive up to the house with him. I said I wanted to drive down. 'You can either drive down with me and then go back or else I want to go home alone.'

Kissed Her Good-Night.

"When Mr. Luce got the cab Mr. Young took me by the arm and walked me over to it and I stopped. I did not want to get in and I said so. He did not like it. He said, 'Call another cab.' Another cab came and he put me on the step. When he was drunk he had a great habit of putting his hand up and pushing my face. He was only playing. He wasn't rough at all. He was not angry. He did it that night. It did not hurt me. Then I got as far as the step of the cab and he pulled me over and kissed me. The cab door was closed and I was driven away.

"I do not think I cried on my way home that night, but I may have, though I cannot think of any reason except that I was very tired and sleepy. I did not expect to see Mr. Young the next day, or on the side of the water for a long time. There was no arrangement for me to meet him next morning—the day of his death.

The Fatal Day.

"I got back to the St. Paul hotel about four a. m. and went directly to bed. Next morning my sister awakened me early and said that Caesar Young had called me up on the 'phone. I was too sleepy to get up, but she called me again and I arose. While I was dressing the 'phone rang and it was Mr. Young. He wanted me to get up and dress and meet him as soon as I could. I did so and met him.

"It was half-past seven or eight, nearer eight, when I left the hotel, and I hurried to Fifty-ninth street and Columbus avenue, where Mr. Young wanted me to meet him. He stood there in front of a saloon. He swore and wanted to know why I was so long getting there. He said he had had time to get 40 horns and have a load on. His hair was all mussed up, he had one eye closed and showed that he had been drinking.

"We went into the saloon, for he said, 'I must have another drink.' He ordered two drinks of whisky and drank both. Then we walked over to Columbus Circle and got into a hansom. He did not tell me where we were going, but I had no idea it was to the pier where his boat was to sail.

"We took a downtown direction, and in a little while he told the cabman to stop at a hat store. We talked mostly about my going abroad, about my getting the things, and the same old strain he had been talking of. I did not say whether I would go or not—I let him believe I was going, for awhile. We also joked about the hat he had on. He said it was the funniest thing in the world that I and Mrs. Young should both be making fun of the same hat—she had told him he must get a new one before he sailed.

The Cab Ride.

"The cabman stopped at Knox's hat store, under the Fifth Avenue hotel, and Mr. Young went in and bought a hat. Then he called the driver to take us somewhere where we could get a drink. I have no idea of the route the cab followed, but we went to a saloon under the elevated road somewhere, and got out.

"We went into the side door, and into a room where chairs were piled on the tables—it was so early in the morning. Mr. Young took two chairs off the first table we came to, and I sat down. He started out to give the order and the man came in and met him. Then he sat down opposite to me, but before that he stooped over and kissed me.

"He said he wished I was going away then, and I said I wished so, too.

"We had some drinks served, and then Mr. Young took out a postal card and wrote something on it, handing it to me, saying: 'Take this—it is something you might need.' It was a fancy postal card, and on the front was written, 'Miss Patterson, care of Mrs. Smith, St. Paul, Sixty-first street and Columbus avenue.'

"We left the saloon and got into a cab and started down town again. I sat on the left side and he on the right. As the cab started he said:

Nan's Refusal.

"'Nan, I would not have made you get up so early this morning, but I did not feel positive that you were coming over.' I did not make him any answer for a little while and he laughed. And I asked him why he should say that. He says, 'Because I do not feel that you are coming over there, but I believe you are deceiving me.' And he says 'Are you going?' I says 'Well, Caesar, there is no use to say that I will go, because I really do not want to.' I have made up my mind not to, but you go over there and get things quieted down until the folks have forgotten about things by that time and I will see you at the Saratoga meeting.'

"He looked at me for a little while and did not say anything. And he said 'Do you mean that, Nan?' And he grabbed me by my hand nearest to him and pulled me toward him.

The Struggle.

"He hurt me so that I tried to pull away, and I could not get away from him; and I put my other hand up and grabbed away from him in that way, and in some way or other I got away from him. He said—I told him that he hurt me—he said: 'If you don't come over there, and I have to wait until the Saratoga meeting, I may see you in three months, or may never see you; my horses have gone back on me; I have lost all my money, now I am losing my girl; do you mean that?'

"And he grabbed me with a great deal of force, hurt me terribly—so badly that it made the tears come to my eyes. I tried to struggle away from him again, and in so doing I had to pull away over, and then there was a flash and that was the end.

The Shot.

"I heard a report, but I had not seen the pistol: Mr. Young fell over my lap, got half way up again, fell back, and I thought he was having a spasm or something. He kept twitching and twisting, and I spoke to him and called him two or three times, and tried to make him answer, and he would not pay any attention to me at all.

"I knew then something serious had happened. I believe I put my hand up and told the cabman to drive to the drug store—I do not know whether I did or not. I know that was my idea. And it seemed—oh, ages before I could get anybody to pay any attention to me or give me any aid at all.

"And the policeman jumped on the front of the cab and asked me what had happened. When I saw him I felt relieved, and I knew he would take care of Mr. Young, no matter what was the matter with him. I lost control of myself and seemed to be dazed in my memory from then on. I remember I went to the hospital and the policeman tried to lift Mr. Young out of the cab and his knees gave way under him. I do not remember how I got out of the cab, or anything of the kind.

"I did not shoot Caesar Young. I had no pistol, I never saw the pistol. And if it was in my power to bring him back to life, I would willingly sacrifice my own life."

IN A STRANGE COUNTRY.

Where Seemingly Impossible Things Were Done and Little Thought Of.

We left Pearson's ranche in Montana about eight miles behind us, when we came to where a man was hanging to the limb of a tree, and there was a cowboy on horseback not far away, relates a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. The stage driver pulled in his horses when we all had a look, and then he beckoned to the cowboy and asked:

"Has there been a lynching here?"

"Can't say as there has," was the reply.

"But a feller is hanging there to the limb of a tree."

"That's true, and I've been puzzling over it. It seems purty plain that he was drawed up to that limb, don't it?"

"She do. Yes, sir, it seems plain that he was drawed up to that limb, and then the free end of the rope made fast."

"And that's what I'm puzzling about," said the cowboy.

"As to how?"

"As to how a critter can pull himself up, choke himself to death, and then come down and fasten the rope and go back up agin. It's the first time I ever seen it done, and it's suthin' new to this country, and after this I shall go in for all hoss thieves to do likewise. 'Tain't no use in disturbing us when they can do the trick for themselves. Well, so long."

"Do you think the man hung himself?" asked the driver, when we were a mile away.

"I dunno, my son—I dunno," he replied, with a shake of his head.

"But think of how impossible it is."

"Yes, I think of that, but when you are in a country where a wolf can bite his tail off and stick it on agin, what you going to believe or disbelieve?"

GRIP'S UGLY SEQUEL.

KNEES STIFF, HANDS HELPLESS, RHEUMATISM NEAR HEART.

Mrs. Van Scoy Experiences Dangerous After-Effects from Grip and Learns Value of a Blood Remedy.

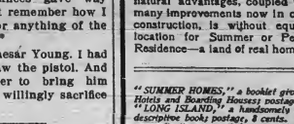
The grip leaves behind it weakened vital powers, thin blood, impaired digestion and over-sensitive nerves—a condition that makes the system an easy prey to pneumonia, bronchitis, rheumatism, nervous prostration, and even consumption.

The story told by scores of victims of the grip is substantially the same. One was tortured by terrible pains at the base of the skull; another was left tired, faint and in every way wretched from anæmia or scantiness of blood; another had horrible headaches, was nervous and could n't sleep, another was left with weak lungs, difficulty in breathing and acute neuralgia. In every case relief was sought in vain until the great blood-builder and nerve-tonic, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, was used. For quickness and thoroughness of action nothing is known that will approach it.

Mrs. Van Scoy makes a statement that supports this claim. She says:

"I had a severe attack of grip and, before I had fully recovered, rheumatism set in and tormented me for three months. I was in a badly run-down state. Soon after it began I was so lame for a week that I could hardly walk. It kept growing steadily worse and at last I had to give up completely and for three weeks I was obliged to keep my bed. My knees were so stiff I couldn't bend them, and my hands were perfectly helpless. Then the pains began to threaten my heart and thoroughly alarmed me.

"While I was suffering in this way I chanced to run across a little book that told about the merits of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The statements in it impressed me and led me to buy a box. These pills proved the very thing I needed. Improvement set in as soon as I began to take them, and it was very marked by the time I had finished the first box. Four boxes made me a well woman."



Mrs. Laura M. Van Scoy lives at No. 20 Thorpe street, Danbury, Conn. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are equally well adapted for any other of the diseases that follow in the train of grip. They are sold by all druggists.

Blood poison creeps up towards the heart, causing death. J. E. Stearns, Belle Plaine, Minn., writes that a friend dreadfully injured his hand, which swelled up like blood poisoning. Bucklen's Arnica Salve drew out the poison, healed the wound, and saved his life. Best in the world for burns and sores. 25c at all drug stores.

A friend at Petersburg sends the RECORDER an impudent letter from the agent of a publisher, trying to collect a subscription for a paper for which she says she never subscribed and of which she never saw but two copies. The tone of the letter was decidedly offensive, and is too long for publication as requested. The recipient of the letter is one of those who meets her money obligations promptly, and a letter the character of the one here referred to is very annoying to her.

When Mrs. Nettie Hughes returned home from church last Sunday night, she found a drunken, strange man occupying the parlor, in which she left a lamp burning when she went to church. She ordered the fellow to vacate, which he showed no disposition to do, when she went in search of someone to eject the drunken intruder, and found Chas. Westbay, who got him out. The fellow had been about the town all the afternoon, using profane language in the presence of ladies and children on the streets, and making himself otherwise unpleasant.

H. G. Blanton, of Erlanger, drove a double team over to Burlington, Monday evening, and hitched it to a plank fence to await his departure for home. A boy 9:30 that broke loose and left the town, going towards Bullitsville at a high rate of speed. A large number of persons were soon in pursuit, but were unable to overtake the horses. The buggy, minus the pole, was found about 2 miles from town on the Bullittsville road. The search was kept up until midnight, but the horses could not be found. They were found at Bullitsville the next morning with the pole still attached to them. The horses were bruised and scratched considerably, but they were not badly hurt, fortunately.

Terrific Race With Death.

Fernandez, of Tampa, Fla., describing his fearful race with death, "as a result of liver trouble and heart disease, which had robbed me of sleep and of all interest in life. So wonderful was their effect, that in three days I felt like a new man, and today I am cured of all my troubles." Guaranteed at all drug stores, price 50c.
